Lewis Declares for Willkie, Says He'll Quit C. I. O. Job If Roosevelt Is Reelected

'To My Countrymen'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

John L. Lewis, shaggy-maned founder and chairman of the C. I. O., last night declared unequivocally for the election of Wendell L. Willkie.

In a three-network radio broadcast, he promised to retire as C. I. O. chief if President Roosevelt were elected to a third term.

He praised Willkie as a "gallant American" who would fulfill his peace and labor pledges, but bitterly denounced President Roosevelt for alleged failure to solve the Nation's economic ills, "redeem labor promises or provide for 45,000,000 hungry people in this land."

Lewis accused the President of a selfish "craving for power" that might lead to dictatorship. He asserted the President "plays with the lives of human beings for a pastime."

Says War Is Motive

He charged that the President's motivation and objective "is war."

The C. I. O. leader, clashing with the pro-third-term views of at least five of the six C. I. O. vice presidents, said he did not speak for labor but to labor, and called on C. I. O. officialdom to "sustain me now, or repudiate me."

The mystery of who financed the broadcast meanwhile was solved in New York, where the National Committee of Democrats-for-Willkie announced it sponsored and paid

See LEWIS, Page 6, Column 1.

Highlights Of Lewis' Speech

. . . I do not speak for labor, but on the contrary, I speak to labor and to all my countrymen.

Reason would seem to prompt a course of national action designed to restrict and abate the war, rather than to expand and intensify its scope and destruction.

Personal craving for power, the overwhelming, abnormal and selfish craving for increased power is a thing to alarm and dismay.

If he (Mr. Roosevelt) is reelected . . . I will accept the result as being the equivalent of a vote of no confidence, and will retire as president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The Roosevelt Administration is trying to create prosperity by the making of guns and lethal weapons.

I think the reelection of President Roosevelt would be a national evil of the first magnitude.

. . . I think that the election of Mr. Willkie is imperative in relation to the country's need.

. . . You who may be about to die in a foreign war created at the whim of an international meddler, should you salute your Caesar?

G. O. P. Candidate Says Nation Needs Management With Faith in Its Future

By the Associated Press

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 25.—Declaring it is time to get "new management" in Government, Wendell L. Willkie asked tonight:

"What have you got to lose in making a change?"

"I ask you to put me to work," the Republican Presidential nominee said. "I know that this job (of Government management) can be done."

15,000 Seats Filled

Standing behind a flower-decorated platform in the Wilkes-Barre armory, Willkie was greeted by a cheering crowd which filled the 13,000 seats.

In an address prepared for an audience in the heart of the anthracite country, Willkie continued:

"Here you have a management in the office of your Government which has had a fair trial of eight years and in all that time it has been unable to solve the problem of the farmer, revive industry, or provide our people with jobs. And now that management tells us that it can't be done.

'What Have You Got to Lose'

"Under such circumstances, what have you got to lose in making a change? Isn't it about time to get management that believes in the future of this country and believes that the job can be done?"

Asserting that "we want to build up America," the candidate said people need more food, more houses and more of the products of industry.

"By all the rules of justice and common sense," he continued, "those who can produce those things should be able to produce them; and those who need them should be able to get them.

"But what is actually happening? We have people on the farms who need the products of industry while 9,000,000 men are out of work and many factories are idle. We have people in the cities who need the products of the farm, and the farmer cannot sell the crops he raises."

Willkie said that undernourished children, "worried, anxious mothers" and fearful heads of families are on the dark side of the national picture.

Not Enough Social Reform

"In pictures like these," he added, "lie the challenge to our society—the challenge to make that picture brighter."

The nominee contended that the New Deal program of social legislation and relief "does not go far enough."

The Roosevelt Administration, he added, "had created plenty of fights, but no jobs. We want to do away with the fights and create jobs."

In nearby Scranton, the candidate was introduced to an applauding, flag-waving crowd, by Gov. Arthur H. James.

James Powell, Scranton director of public safety, estimated the audience at 20,000.

Willkie said that "for the first

The Gallup Poll

Willkie Makes Further Gains In New England

New Hampshire Swings to Him With 4-Point Advance

By Dr. George Gallup
Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 25.—New gains for Wendell Willkie in the six New England States—on the heels of the candidate's swing through that section—are indicated today in a survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

The survey found the Republican candidate gaining from 1 to 4 points in each New England State, one of the most significant being a 4-point gain in New Hampshire, which places that State in the Willkie column at this time. However, sentiment in most of the six States is between 50 and 54 per cent for one candidate or the other, or within the margin of error applicable to this survey.

The State-by-State trend since the last Institute report October 18 is:

Today's Survey	Roosevelt	Willkie	Gain for Willkie
Maine	46%	54%	+1
New Hampshire	49	51	+4
Vermont	43	57	+3
Massachusetts	51	49	+3
Rhode Island	55	45	+3
Connecticut	54	46	+4

In addition to Sunday's 48-State report, the Institute will publish at least one further State-by-State survey before the election.

Willkie Pleased; C. I. O. Unions Split

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 25 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie said tonight he was glad to have campaign support from John L. Lewis, whom he described as "a valiant defender of labor who puts his country above all."

"We must have an end of group and class warfare," he said in a statement. "Mr. Lewis' eloquent and unqualified enlistment in our crusade is a great stride toward bringing the spontaneous unity of action and purpose that will follow as soon as we are elected."

[Denunciation of Lewis' stand, with some expressions of support, came from C. I. O. figures.—Editor's note. Page 6.]

"God Willing'

Roosevelt Says He'll Serve Out Third Term if Elected

President Roosevelt last night tentatively added a political speech to his fast "last lap" schedule, designating the night of October 30 in Boston, Mass.

A White House statement said the President "probably" would deliver a speech on that night for which radio time had been previously reserved.

The statement came a few hours after the President told his press conference that "God willing" he will serve out his full four years in the White House if elected to a third term.

The White House said detailed arrangements for the Massachusetts trip had not yet been worked out. The President already had speeches scheduled for Monday night in Madison Square Garden, November 1 in Brooklyn, November 2 in Cleveland, Ohio, and on election eve from Hyde Park.

Spiking rumors that he would step down before the end of a next term in favor of his running mate, the President told reporters he "of course" would remain in office if reelected.

His statement came in reply to a press conference question, putting an end to a report that had persistently been spread since the Chicago convention.

Later the White House disclosed plans for the opening of the President's drive down the campaign stretch in New York Monday.

A busy 12 hours in New Jersey, Brooklyn and New York City, combining defense inspections, a tunnel dedication and a political speech,

Army Raises Status of Its Aviation Chiefs

Arnold Given Third Staff Place, Emmons Army Head's Rank

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Army yesterday gave recognition to the increasing importance of the Air Corps in the military setup by assigning its chief to a new post of deputy chief of staff.

At the same time and reflecting the same trend, the commander of the General Headquarters Air Force, the Army's air combat units, was given the rank of lieutenant general. Maj. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, elevated to this rank, takes the same status in the Army hierarchy as the commanders of the four field armies.

Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, named to a newly established post of deputy chief of staff, will have charge of coordination of all matters affecting aviation in the War Department. Named to act in his place as chief of Air Corps, was Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, at present an assistant to Arnold.

In another development, the Navy established a new command, embracing all of its aviation in the Atlantic, and assigned a veteran officer, Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook to the post. He will be detached as commander of scouting force aircraft and become commander of patrol force aircraft, embracing the plane carriers Ranger and Enterprise, and all shore based aircraft in the Atlantic.

There was no hint, however, in this series of moves, that either the Army or Navy had abandoned its

A 'Social Failure,' Girl Seeks Death, But He Snubs Her

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 25.—A 29-year-old Chicago secretary, recovering from a drug-induced stupor which lasted 10 days, tried to end her life, she told police, because she considered herself a social failure.

The woman, Marian Nevins, told Detective Hyman Weinstein she took 100 grains of sleeping potion in a fashionable hotel, the Pierre, because she wanted to die "in style."

"I failed all my life, and now I've failed at that," he quoted her as saying.

"Now, I'm afraid I'm going to get well. . . . I don't want to go out; the world has no place for me. I don't have any boy friends—I never had the right kind of boy friends, and I don't want to be saved.

"I never met the right kind of people. All my life I could never meet nice people. That's why I went to the Pierre—I wanted a nice place to die."

Weinstein said the young woman had been employed as a secretary by a Chicago candy company. She quit her job October 12 and bought a train ticket for New York.

Three Brothers Seized in First D. C. Draft Case

They Are Accused Of Having Given Addresses Falsely

Three brothers were arrested yesterday and charged with giving false information to selective service officials in the first draft case in the District.

Those in custody are Clifton L. and Nathaniel Barton, 21 and 28, respectively, both of 5153 Nash Street Northeast, and Mackie Barton, 28, of 5811 Foote Street Northeast. All are colored.

The men were lodged at Eleventh Precinct Station last night after an investigation by Precinct Detective C. H. Hagerty. The officer arrested Clifton Barton on suspicion and found he had a different address than that shown on his registration card.

Checking with selective service officials, the detective corroborated the fact Barton had given an incorrect home address to his registrar, Hagerty said.

Face Heavy Penalties

The investigation led the policemen to the two other brothers whom, he said, he found also had addresses varying from those on registration cards.

All three men will be arraigned today before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. If convicted of violating the Selective Service Act they are liable to imprisonment up to five years, a fine of $10,000, or both.

Thousands of Washington men were expected to rush 24 local schools, headquarters of local selection boards, at noon today, when

2 Howard U. Men To Plan Defense Aid by Colored

Two members of the Howard University faculty yesterday were named to important defense posts to assist in "the fair and effective utilization of the colored in all branches of the armed forces." They are Judge William H. Hastie, dean of the school of law, to be civilian aid to the Secretary of War, and Maj. Campbell C. Johnson, Howard instructor, as executive assistant to Selective Service Director Dykstra.

Seventy-seven associate members were appointed last night to the Registrants Advisory Board, which will advise Washington registrants on points that arise in answering questionnaires and otherwise complying with the draft. All the appointees are lawyers. Three will serve with each of the 24 local selection boards and five were appointed at large.

Hitler's Terms Accepted, Vichy Hears as U. S. Asks Stand of France on War

Washington Requests Report on Possibility Of Vichy's Joining Attack on Britain

By Bertram D. Hulen.
Copyright by New York Times

The United States has expressed her anxiety to France over the prospect that she may become involved in war against Great Britain and has requested of the Vichy government as prompt a report as possible of the latest developments and diplomatic conferences.

This was learned yesterday in diplomatic circles which made clear that the American Government was reserving its attitude pending receipt of information.

Reports that the State Department had warned France that she could expect no more aid from the United States if she went to war against Britain were discounted by officials who said that such a warning had been recommended to the White House but not adopted for the reason that about the only way the United States could make a warning effective would be to enter the war. France is not now receiving food from this country. There was also a suggestion that President Roosevelt make an appeal to Marshal Petain but this, too, was said to have been laid aside.

To Consider Vichy Friendly

At his press conference yesterday the President indicated that the United States would consider the Vichy government friendly, despite the conferences of Marshal Petain and Vice Premier Laval with Chancellor Hitler.

The President remarked that the United States still maintained diplomatic relations with Vichy. When a reporter interjected that "we still have diplomatic relations with Germany also," Mr. Roosevelt laughed.

Until some definite information has been received from France President Roosevelt, who conferred at some length Thursday with Secretary Hull, is giving particular attention to four phases of the international situation.

Eye Kept on Spain

They are:

1. Spain—where Hitler is working hard to develop more aggressive support for the totalitarian Axis.

2. The ultimate disposition of the French fleet and the role its disposition will play in the future developments of the European war. This situation might affect developments in the Caribbean, where the American republics would prevent any change in status of French possessions.

3. Greece and Balkans—where an explosive situation is developing as Germany extends its pressure eastward.

4. The Far East—where American nationals have been advised to come home, where Japan is eyeing rich oil and other resources of the Dutch East Indies, and where reports are current regarding the possibility of a Japanese-Russian nonaggression pact.

While Mr. Roosevelt does not consider that these four situations carry any threat of American involvement

Jury to Begin Fifth-Col[illegible] Probe Monday

Nazi News Agency, Its Director Zapp Named in Inquiry

The first evidence purporting to show criminal conspiracy and other crimes by German propagandists will be laid before the District grand jury Monday.

Whiting Willauer, special assistant attorney general, who was given nation-wide authority by Attorney General Jackson to get to the bottom of Fifth Column activity by secret organizations, is scheduled to present the first installment of material gathered by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and seized in raids by agents of the Dies committee.

Named by Jackson Thursday, Willauer mapped out his grand jury investigation in swift conferences with District Attorney Edward M. Curran and Assistant District Attorney John W. Fihelly. Assured that the Washington grand jurors would be at his disposal to receive the seized documents and hear the testimony of Government agents, Willauer indicated that he would make regular trips to the grand jury room starting next week. Suggestions that an extraordinary grand jury be impaneled for the inquiry were shelved.

The only officially named targets were the Transocean News Service of New York and Washington and Manfred Zapp, its general manager and an intimate of important men at the German Embassy. Zapp has been subpenaed by the Dies committee.

Big Guns Duel Across Channel Over English, Nazi Convoys

By the Associated Press

Dover, England (Saturday), Oct. 26.—British and German long-range artillery fought a prolonged battle across the English Channel last night and early today, and British bombers violently assaulted the Nazi-held French coast.

It was one of the heaviest and longest engagements of the war—lighting up the skies on both sides of the Dover Straits in a continuous rumble of heavy explosions that was like a thunderstorm.

The action began yesterday afternoon in a British bombardment of a small German convoy in the Channel. Hours later, German guns answered with a like bombardment of a British convoy, the R. A. F. attacked and it became, then, a thunderous general engagement involving two heavy batteries on the German side.

Early this morning the British convoy still was under fire in the Channel, and the British guns were pounding the German batteries.

Great sheets of flame lit up the clouded sky and the glare reached all the way across the Channel to the English side.

While the artillery dueled about dusk, German planes launched a mass attack upon the British convoy and its barrage balloons. There was a sharp battle, as every ship returned the fire with all guns. The noise increased when British fighter planes joined the engagement.

German planes dropped some 20 bombs around the ships. No direct hit was reported but some might have been struck by splinters.

At times, many miles of the

Petain Will Enter 'Pan European Bloc,' Share African Rule, Capital Informed

By Ralph E. Heinzen,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Vichy, Oct. 25.—The Petain government tonight was reported to have accepted Adolf Hitler's terms for a permanent peace treaty and agreed to join a "Pan-European Bloc" sought by the Axis powers as a means of forcing Britain to end the war.

Hitler's terms were not disclosed nor was there official confirmation of France's reported acceptance, but it was understood that the Fuehrer demanded that France divide control of her strategic African possessions with Germany, Italy and Spain.

The Vichy government was said to have decided to accept "collaboration" with Germany immediately after the return here of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain from his conference yesterday with Hitler in the Nazi-held zone of France.

Laval Confers With Ciano

Vice Premier Pierre Laval conferred today with Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, of Italy, somewhere in northern France presumably, and it was understood that he was trying to negotiate with Italy the same sort of "reconciliation and collaboration."

In exchange for its territorial and strategic surrenders, it was understood, France would obtain from Germany and Italy a permanent peace agreement "without punitive measures" such as Marshal Petain pleaded for in his recent radio manifesto to the French people.

[According to the International News Service, a report that the French government had decided to accept Hitler's terms was denied in official Vichy circles. It was understood Petain informally consented to the Axis conditions, but that a formal decision must await a cabinet meeting. That acceptance is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

Cession of Coast Suggested

[London reported a Berlin assertion that announcement of a "new European order free of foreign interference" may be made Monday. The Moscow radio, according to a broadcast picked up in London, said the terms include transfer of the entire French Atlantic coast up to Boulogne to Germany, as well as cession of Alsace-Lorraine to the Reich and southern French territorial strips to Italy and Spain.

[A dispatch from Zurich, Switzerland, however, reported that preparations are already under way in Berlin for the meeting of the Reichstag before which Hitler is expected to announce an accord with France and reveal Spain's role in the "new order," as defined in his Wednesday meeting

Petain and Hitler Agree, Vichy Told

with Gen. Franco.]

France's acceptance of Hitler's proposals, it was reported unofficially, is likely to be followed immediately by a strong "diplomatic blitzkrieg" on the part of the Axis powers and it seems certain now that Spain will be brought solidly into the new "Pan-European bloc."

U. S. Makes Inquiries

[Reports of radio broadcasts registered here in official circles imply that Washington is anxious that the Vichy government should define exactly its attitude in the European situation, the New York Times reported. In official circles, nothing is known of inquiries from Washington on these lines nor has the American Embassy here taken any action, but the likelihood that certain questions have been put through the French Embassy at Washington is not denied.

[Echoes also reach Vichy of American desires to know what would be the French attitude in the hypothetical event that the colonies in the Western Hemisphere had to be defended. A spokesman here today indicated that in conformity with the general policy, every French colony anywhere in the world would defend itself against any aggressor.

[In short the United States and its possible attitude loom very large today—less than two weeks before election—and the question arises as to whether some of the present European moves are not intended to influence the American voters.]

Joint Control of Tunisia

The 84-year-old Petain returned by automobile from his meeting with Hitler amid official denials that any new agreement had been signed with the Nazi conqueror, but there were strong indications that the Fuehrer had advanced a series of terms as a basis for French diplomatic and political participation in the "new European order."

Hitler's proposals were understood to call for joint French-Italian control of Tunisia and division of the control of French Morocco among France, Germany and Spain.

Because of Italy's direct interest in these territorial concessions, Laval was understood to have hurriedly arranged the meeting with Ciano.

Diplomatic Stroke

Everything pointed to a grand diplomatic stroke on the part of Hitler and Mussolini—involving perhaps a demand that Britain make peace with a continental bloc solidly united under Axis leadership and including Spain as well as France.

The United States elections, it was said, are exerting considerable effect upon the diplomatic strategy of the Axis powers because of a growing belief that the United States may enter the war and a wish to throw up the "Pan-European" bloc before the United States could enter the conflict.

By building up a solid bloc of Europe's states in a united front against Britain, it was speculated here, Hitler may feel himself in a position to propose to Britain that a general peace settlement be made on what would be called a "compromise" basis. The alternative, it was said, would be hostilities on an even wider scale.

Common Ground Sought

French leaders are saying that the present talks are among the most important diplomatic undertakings since the Treaty of Versailles was signed because they mark the "first real effort of the heads of the rival powers to find a common ground for understanding, reconciliation and cooperation."

Hitler, they said is inviting France to share in the "reorganization" of Europe and Africa.

German Terms Reported

[Reliable quarters in Zurich reported that Germany 10 days ago had offered a deal to the Vichy government providing the surrender of French territory and bases to Germany, Italy and Spain. Germany was said to have asked:

[Cession of Alsace-Lorraine to Germany.

[Cession to Italy of the Riviera as far as Nice.

[Italian and Spanish participation in the administration of Tunisia and Morocco, respectively.

Offers From Nazis

[In return Germany was said to have offered France:

[Access to the port of Bordeaux and immediate release of 1,800,000 French prisoners of war.

[Demarcation and readjustment of the border between the unoccupied and Nazi-held zones of France to bring the government nearer to Paris.

[Free access to Paris.

[Nazi industrial and economic concessions making it possible to normalize French industry and overcome a serious threat of faming in parts of unoccupied France.]

Shuttle Raiders Stab at London

Midlands, Liverpool Also Objectives Of Savage Attack

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Oct. 26.—A savage Axis air attack on London took a steadily mounting toll of civilian death and ruin last night and early today after the heaviest daylight pounding since mid-September.

After midnight the raiders slackened their assault on the capital and fanned out over the Midlands and other industrial centers, which were hard hit.

Two raid shelters were struck in London—with casualties. A bus was smashed, and sporadic explosions crumbled buildings.

One of three Midland towns suffered its heaviest and longest raid. Bombs struck gas and water mains and a railway station, killing 3 and seriously injuring 31 persons.

Explosive and fire bombs struck Liverpool in two attacks but there were surprisingly few casualties, British reports said. A church, school, street car and homes were bombed.

Met by the thunderous roar of the massed artillery of London's defenses, some of the night raiders dropped flares and flame bombs, while others dived on their targets in one district despite an almost continuous blaze of fire.

Stretcher parties sped through the streets of one populous shopping district as the raid entered its third hour.

Other raiders were reported thrusting at Wales, southwest England and Liverpool.

Attack in Murky Weather

The attackers had to fly through murky weather over the Straits of Dover to reach their targets, and then heavy rain clouds cloaked the sky.

Mostly fighters, they came in formations of 20 to 100, flying nearly six miles high.

They dumped loads of high explosives into London's streets during two morning rush-hour raids and then returned for long sieges in the afternoon.

The surprise morning attacks blew to pieces two street cars, damaged three others and wrecked a bus when a string of bombs fell in a crowded thoroughfare.

More than a score of persons were killed and injured, and the street was left a tangle of wreckage from blasted store fronts and vehicles.

Civilians Give First Aid

Other bombs smashed shops and flats and left streets strewn with injured. Civilians joined the regular air raids precaution workers in first-aid work. Women tore off their dresses to bandage the wounded.

The air ministry said 12 of the raiders were brought down, against 8 British machines and three pilots lost.

An air ministry report said "more Messerschmitt fighters came over Kent and the Thames Estuary today than for many days past."

"Because of the great height at which they fought, our fighter pilots were often unable to follow their victims down through the clouds to make certain that they had been destroyed," it added.

The bulletin said one sergeant pilot of a Spitfire squadron broke up a formation of 12 Messerschmitt 109's single handed and shot down one of them in flames near Maidstone.

Others were reported shot down at Hastings, Rye, Turnbridge, Gravesend, Seven Oaks, Dover and Canterbury, all in southeast England.

Italians Join Nazis In London Raids

By the Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 25.—Mussolini has set up a "tremendous" air base of his own on the French side of the English Channel, informed Italians said tonight, and his fliers already are splashing the streets of London with bombs marked "made in Italy."

This disclosure (coincident with a German high command announcement that Italians, for the first time, raided "the east of the British Isle" from their own base yesterday), was followed by indications of intense activity on the Italian front in Egypt. There were predictions in Rome that the Fascist forces, now entrenched 70 miles or more within Egypt's desert border, might renew their offensive this week-end.

Fascist informants gave out an impressive word-picture of Italy's Channel air base and the press proudly recounted the first exploits of the Italian raiders, naming the planes "Storks," "Falcons," "Herons" and "Arrows."

These sources said Il Duce himself took the initiative in the matter and offered his air force to intensify the long German air siege of Britain.

The German high command accepted quickly, it was related, and thousands of carloads of equipment and supplies were shipped to the base, opposite Britain in German-occupied France. Italian pilots, meanwhile, ferried plane after plane to the base from Italy.

Now, the informants said, the base is complete with a mass of men and material, its own repair shops, ground crews, bombs and even Italian food, wines and cigarettes.

Gen. Rino Corso Fougier, a Corsican who was an Italian ace in Spain, is in command.

A correspondent of Stefani, the official Italian news agency, said Fascist airmen had begun their attack against England last night, loosing bombs for more than an hour on "industrial and naval centers" in southeast England.

Many tons of explosives were dropped, he added, followed by violent fires.

The official aviation newspaper Via Del Aria published photographs of Mussolini's sons, Vittorio and Bruno, as pilots of bombing planes.

The war correspondent of Il Giornale d'Italia, without saying when the Italian attack took place, stated flatly that London streets were bombed heavily by the first Fascist fliers and that the explosions caused a "desperate stupor" to settle over "Churchill's crowds."

Moreover, in his dispatch from "Italian air base on English Channel," the correspondent said the squadrons flew back to their field "bearing marks of combat, but with the joyous certainty of a first victory."

Trinidad Raising $500,000 To Buy Planes for Britain

This is the fifth of a series of articles by Mr. Folliard on our expanding Caribbean defenses.

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, Oct. 25.—Hollywood's version of "Gone With the Wind" opened here tonight. It was just as long as ever. And as usual there was a half-hour intermission in the drama of Rhett Butler and Scarlett O'Hara.

When commented in that intermission as a commonplace Name the sixth British island off the coast of South America, 4,[illegible] miles from the mother country. Yet to a visitor it was significant. It brought to mind how many people—or peoples—on this spinning globe Adolf Hitler is fighting.

What happened during the intermission of the film was that the dowagers and debutantes of Port-of-Spain took in considerable money for the "Fighter Fund." They took it in by selling hot dogs, soft drinks, hard drinks and other refreshments.

For three months now, the people of Trinidad have been chipping in toward that "Fighter Fund." Already they have raised close to $400,000, nearly a dollar for every person on the island. What they are after is $500,000.

With that $500,000 Trinidad will buy a squadron of 20 Spitfires to put in the air against the German Messerschmitts and Heinkels that are now harassing Britain. Not only that, Trinidad afterward will raise money to maintain that squadron.

They are not holding on to the money, but sending it to London as fast as it comes in. Once the 20 Spitfires have been brought together, however, they will be designated as the Trinidad Squadron. Lord Beaverbrook has assured the island of that.

A newspaper here in Port-of-Spain, the Trinidad Guardian, started the fund after the Battle of Britain opened, and the idea has now spread to all the colonies—to Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and wherever else the Union Jack flies.

The money is being raised in every conceivable fashion here, through soccer games, church socials, band concerts, horse shows and at auctions where the objects sold have all been donated—everything from an automobile to a bottle of rum.

The Fighter Fund is but one of many to which the people of the island have been contributing. Something like $250,000 has been sent to the British Red Cross. Other substantial sums have been sent to the Lord Mayor of London to help take care of bombing victims, and so on.

In 1914-18, Trinidad was well-represented in the West Indian regiment that fought in the Near East. This time there has been no call for colonial troops down this way. In this war, more than in any other, the important thing has been materiel, planes, ships and guns.

However, a number of young men have gone from here to Canada to volunteeer. Some of them have distinguished themselves in Flanders, in the R. A. F. and in the Royal Navy.

When the war started, Trinidad found itself with a treasury surplus of $5,000,000. Half of this was given to the British government outright, and the other half was loaned free of interest. After that the raising of private funds began.

Meanwhile, Trinidad has been turning out fledgling war birds. Young men are being given preliminary training by the Trinidad Light Aeroplane Club, which was organized before the war, and then they are sent on to one of the empire's training schools.

Already a dozen or so young men have left here to try their wings in a big-league training school. In the course of a year, 75 or 80 of them will get their preliminary training here. That may not seem many, but when you consider the size of Trinidad—an island with less population than Washington, D. C.—and when you begin to think of the Trinidad fliers in terms of those going from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India and Egypt and from the United States and other countries in sympathy with Britain, when you do that, you begin to get the idea of what a mighty air force is being formed under the Union Jack.

Here in Trinidad, the British have no doubt as to what is to happen in the year or two ahead. Britain, they say, will drive Germany from the air. She has to do it, and, therefore, of course, she will do it. After that it will be time enough to talk about peace.

The Americans who one day will be coming down here to man air and naval bases will find Trinidad very much in the war, even though a shell has fallen no nearer than Uruguay, where three British cruisers whipped the Nazi pocket battleship, Admiral Graf Spee.

The Yanks will find the hospitals here with huge red crosses painted on their roofs—just in case.

Pope Reported Opening World Peace Drive

Rome Hears Rumor Hostilities Might Be Ended in 5 Days

By Michael Chinigo,

International News Service Staff Writer

Rome, Oct. 25.—Pope Pius XII was reported in Rome tonight to have inaugurated world-wide endeavors looking toward the possible achievement of an early peace, or at least a temporary truce, in Europe.

It was understood in certain circles that His Holiness is intensively sounding out Vatican diplomatic representatives throughout the world on this matter and has also consulted foreign diplomats accredited to the Holy See.

A welter of peace rumors swept Rome tonight. One of these entirely unconfirmed and not unexplained even stated that the hostilities might be ended in five days.

The Pontiff's soundings through Papal Nuncios and delegates in foreign countries were said to be especially concentrated in the capitals of the major European powers, including those at war.

Follows Radio Plea

Rome circles took note of reports from Vichy telling of the possibility that an attempt to persuade President Roosevelt to associate America in a "peace offensive" may be the first result of yesterday's meeting between Hitler and French Premier Marshal Henri Petain.

Pope Pius, it was understood, has received in private audiences recently a number of diplomats representing foreign countries at the Vatican.

His Holiness was reported to have given special attention to those envoys which represent the Latin-American countries.

Reports of the Pope's new efforts toward ending the war sprang up only six days after His Holiness, in a radio speech to the United States last Saturday night, called on his listeners to pray for the restoration of a peace based on "equitable adjustment" of international differences.

This report served to recall the audiences the Pope gave some few months ago to President Roosevelt's "peace envoy" to the Vatican, Myron C. Taylor, when it was reported that the outlines of the foundation for a future peace were thoroughly explored.

Josef Beck A British Spy, Nazis Charge

Bucharest Legation Accuses Poles of Plot To Blast Oil Wells

Bucharest, Oct. 25 (AP).—The German Legation charged in an official bulletin today that former Polish Premier Josef Beck, the entire staff of the Polish Embassy and many of 7,600 Polish refugees were in the employ of the British Secret Service and had been planning to blow up Rumanian oil wells.

The bulletin stated that Beck had given his word not to try to flee this country, but that with the aid of the British Minister he had sought to leave first by ship, then by plane and finally by automobile.

"A great quantity of munitions and some very incriminating documents," the bulletin said, were seized in a raid on a house belonging to the Polish Embassy.

In the day Rumanian government agents arrested two refugee Czech generals on charges of participating in what was officially called a Polish sabotage and espionage plot.

Marshal Smigly-Rydz, former chief of the Polish army, was taken into custody yesterday.

Axis to Mollify Russia

Bucharest, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Germany and Italy formally will recognize Russia's rights and interests as a Danube power and will allot to her Britain's former authority on the Danube Waterway Commission in a four-power conference convening here Monday, it was understood tonight.

Many Balkan diplomats professed to believe that Russia's inclusion in the conference with the Axis powers and Rumania indicates that Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini have abandoned, at least temporarily, any further drive into the southeast.

The conference also reveals, these diplomats said, that the Axis does not regard it as "advisable" to ignore longer Russia's demands for a voice in the control of the Balkan waterway and the affairs of the Danube basin.

One Bulgarian source said that Berlin and Rome appear to have gone more than half-way to appease Moscow, which is reported to have taken important military precautions along the Rumanian-Russian frontiers coincident with the Nazi troop movements into Rumania.

Rumors Fly in Sofia

Sofia, Oct. 25.—Ivan Bagrianoff, Bulgarian minister of agriculture, returned this evening from his Berlin-Rome visits and was greeted at the station by Prime Minister Bogdan Philoff and German and Italian envoys. Shortly after he arrived there was a cabinet meeting, and he is expected to see King Boris tomorrow.

A new wave of rumors swept over the capital about Axis messages to Bulgaria, about impending cabinet shifts, eliminating the last elements remaining only lukewarm to Germany.

Gandhi declared he is writing a letter of protest to the British viceroy of India, the Marquess of Linlithgow.

Toronto, Oct. 25 (AP).—A young German war prisoner wearing a blue naval uniform escaped early today from Christie Street Hospital here, where he had been under treatment for the past three weeks.

Secret U. S. Bomb Sight Believed Released to British

By John MacCormac

Copyright by New York Times

That one of the Sperry Gyroscope Co. bomb sights has been released to the British government is now the general belief in well informed circles in Washington, even though no official confirmation can be obtained for it.

Philip Young, special assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, who acts as liaison official between the Treasury and the British Purchasing Commission, yesterday refused either to confirm or deny the report, saying that bomb sights were a matter about which official secrecy was maintained and whose release was for the Secretary of War to decide.

But it is believed that one of the Sperry sights has been given to the British. The Sperry Gyroscope Co. makes two, of which the better one is said to have been that made available for the Royal Air Force. The United States Army and Navy have several sights but none as good, it is said, as this one.

Germany, it is reported, has four types of bomb sight of which all are known to the British. The British themselves have several types.

The British types require the bombardier to align his cross hairs on his target by giving directions to the pilot. The American gyroscopic sight, on the other hand, enable the bombardier himself to direct the movements of the bombing plane and also is said to ensure that the plnae is in level flight when the bombs are released. It is claimed that the results which can be achieved with it by a bombardier trained in its use are almost miraculous when judged by former standards.

A statement of arms export licenses issued by the State Department, which was given out today, lists "aerial gun mounts and frames, bomb racks, torpedo carriers and bomb or torpedo release mechanisms." The words "release mechanisms" would seem to cover bomb sights.

Yanks Coming, Col. Sweeny Tells French

COL. CHARLES SWEENY Tells French "Yanks Are Coming"

Millions to Follow His Comrades, Says Fighter for Britain

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 25.—The Yanks are coming again—"millions of them as they did in 1918"—Col. Charles Sweeny, honorary head of the Royal Air Force's fledgling American Eagle Squadron, told Frenchmen tonight in a British-sponsored broadcast.

"Those of us who already are here are the vanguard, as we were in 1914," declared Sweeny, one of the Lafayette Escadrille in which Americans flew in France prior to the United States entry into the World War.

"We American volunteers—men of 1914, soldiers of the Foreign Legion, airmen of the Lafayette Squadron—have rallied to the cause of England," he asserted. "Millions will come after us, as they did in 1918.

"Great Britain has become the Verdun of this war; she is the rock against which barbarism will be broken as it was broken in 1916 at the gates of Verdun. In this struggle you will be reunited with us and in victory you will win back your joy and pride in France."

Sweeny's broadcast was arranged by the British Broadcasting Corporation. It followed by four days Prime Minister Churchill's appeal to France to refrain from hindering Britain's war effort.

A native of Spokane, Wash., and a former officer of the French Foreign Legion, Sweeny has managed to turn up where the Allies have an air scrap on their hands. In 1925 he was captain of the American squadron which fought for France in Morocco.

He holds an honorary group captaincy in the R. A. F. as leader of the Eagle Squadron, made up of Americans and now undergoing training with hopes of being in the air as a combat unit before Christmas. The squadron actually is under the direction of William Erwin Taylor, of New York City.

Bombs Graze U. S. Embassy In Chungking

American Gunboat Is Slightly Damaged In Lunchtime Raid

Chungking, Oct. 25 (AP).—The United States Embassy barely escaped destruction today when ten bombs were dropped by three groups of Japanese planes around the embassy compound and its vicinity.

One bomb loosed a huge boulder which rolled down the Yangtze River bank and smashed into the U. S. gunboat Tutuila, anchored along the south bank near the embassy.

The gunboat, however, was barely damaged, and the embassy escaped harm.

Attack at Lunchtime

The raiders came over at lunchtime in one of their frequent raids on this much-battered provisional Chinese capital, sinking and smashing a large number of river junks and doing some scattered damage to shops and dwellings in the city.

About 75 casualties were caused on the river, but most of the people in Chungking had taken refuge and there were few killed and injured.

A British steamer was sunk and the Canadian mission was badly shaken.

Chinese on Offensive

Hongkong, Oct. 25 (AP).—Three Chinese columns in an offensive started yesterday against Nanning, Japanese-held capital of Kwangsi province, were reported today by the Central News Agency (Chinese) to have retaken several points in bitter fighting.

Central News said the Japanese were using tanks and warplanes in an attempt to check the onslaught.

Intensified fighting on other fronts also were reported with the Chinese taking the initiative.

Chinese Escape Trap

Shanghai, Oct. 25 (AP).—Denying claims of victory by Chinese in a three-column drive toward Nanning, a Japanese Army spokesman declared today that Japanese operations October 2-21 have been completely successful.

He claimed Chinese casualties from October 4-21 totaled 6,954, but admitted that 20 Chinese divisions allegedly encircled last week "apparently escaped."

Carol Asks U. S. To Help Restore His Freedom

Former King Carol of Rumania appealed to the United States Government yesterday to intercede in behalf of himself and members of his party now under detention in Seville, Spain.

State Department officials had no immediate comment. Carol, his friend, Magda Lupescu, and Ernst Urdareanu, former minister of the palace in Bucharest, were placed under virtual arrest Tuesday.

Auto Plants to Aid Output of Bombers

Knudsen Outlines Mass Production Of Plane Parts

Detroit, Oct. 25.—The Nation's automotive industry pledged anew today all its productive skill to the rapid fulfillment of the national defense program.

In closed meetings with William S. Knudsen of the National Defense Advisory Commission, representatives of the airplane section of the commission and a group of Army Air Corps officers, heads of the industry heard outlined a program of airplane parts production totaling $500,000,000.

Contracts for manufacture of these parts, intended for the construction of huge bomber planes, are to be allotted to the automobile industry between now and next spring, Knudsen said. With commitments already made for aviation engines, trucks, tanks, shells and other war material, they would bring to approximately $1,000,000,000 the total of contracts assigned to the automobile industry.

As a step toward mass production of aircraft, it is planned that the motorcar makers, cooperating with body, tool and die and parts and equipment manufacturers, shall make standardized airplane parts for final assembly in established aviation factories elsewhere.

The discussions, it was learned, dealt mainly with the problem of production of set assemblies for 12,000 bombing planes. Some of these would be of the four-motor type and others of the two-motor variety.

The gathering of top executives of the automobile industry included such figures as Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co.; C. E. Wilson, acting president of General Motors Corp., and K. T. Keller, president of Chrysler Corp.

"I received assurances," Knudsen said, "that all the productive skill of the industry will be available for the prosecution of the defense program. I expect great help to come out of this meeting."

Knudsen, a production genius with few, if any, equals in the industry, said he saw no reason why the airplane parts project discussed today should interfere in any way with normal productive activities of the automobile industry.

Channel Guns Duel Over Two Convoys

French coast appeared engulfed in great gusts of orange flame.

When British bombers temporarily turned their attention to Boulogne, the Cap Gris Nez battery of German big guns roared into action again, resuming its interrupted attack on the convoy.

Towns along the Kentish coast were shaken as a long succession of six-gun salvoes burst in the sea. Thousands crowded the seafronts of coastal towns to watch.

Berlin Blasted Three Hours

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 25.—British bombs exploded early today from Berlin to Rotterdam—from Hamburg to the west French coast and on war supply depots in far interior Germany—in one of the longest and most violent counterattacks yet delivered in six weeks of almost endless aerial attrition.

The attack on Berlin—the twenty-third of the war—was declared by the air ministry to have gone on intermittently for nearly three hours, the raiding pilots cutting down through great cloud banks 4,000 to 12,000 feet deep.

Two railway stations—the Potlitz-Strasse and Lehrter Stations—were hit hard for the second night in a row, the ministry said, and a "huge fire" set off down below guided squadron after squadron of planes which swept over the city. "Extensive damage" was claimed.

(In Berlin the German high command announced an unstated number of dead and injured in Berlin and Hamburg; said there was fire and property damage in the harbor and elsewhere in Hamburg; spoke of damage to houses and a lumber yard in Berlin.

[The German wireless broadcast that the number killed in Berlin was "extremely high," and accused the R. A. F. of "indiscriminate bombing of the German civilian population."

[It was announced in Berlin that 620,000 of the city's school children under 14 years old had been removed from the capital because of recurrent British bombing; that 42,000 had been taken from Hamburg and that an additional 30,000 would be removed from Berlin.]

The assault on the Reich's capital, while the most spectacular of this early morning bombing campaign, was only one of many.

The port of Hamburg was heavily attacked and hits specifically were claimed on docks, shipping, oilstores and a power plant.

At the same time, other British pilots took their bomb loads to now-familiar destinations — Hannover and Gelesenkirchen; the ports of Cuxhaven, Bremerhaven, Wilhelmshaven, Rotterdam, Le Havre and Lorient; the railway and supply centers of Emmerich, Munster, Hamm, Bottrop and Duisburg; back again to the Channel ports of Flushing, Ostend and Dunkerque.

[From German-held Amsterdam today it was reported that "a number of places" in Holland were attacked by the British during the day, including Flushing, where houses were smashed; Den Helder, a former Dutch naval base, and a sugar factory near Rotterdam, part of which was burned out with 25 persons killed.]

The targets were the old ones of many an attack—oil tanks, shipping facilities, airdromes, railway communications, stores of freight.

Speaking tonight to the Oxford University Liberal Club, Dingle M. Foot, parliamentary secretary of the ministry for economic warfare, reported:

"Ninety per cent of Germany's synthetic oil capacity has been bombed."

The admiralty announced the loss of a British destroyer, victim of a German mine, and the sinking of a German torpedo boat and an Italian supply ship by British submarines.

The Swordfish was credited with sending the Nazi torpedo boat to the bottom off the French coast, while the destruction of the Italian ship, of 6,000 tons, was credited to the Regent.

Aid for Families of Guardsmen Urged

First Lady Asks Help for Dependents Of Men in Service

Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday urged the establishment of "home guards" to help families of National Guardsmen who have been called to military service.

Speaking at her last press conference before election, the First Lady said something shouuld be done to adjust situations in homes from which wage earners have been taken away. She recommended the formation of local organizations to study the needs of these families and plan aid.

She suggested that such organizations line up available jobs for wives left without means of support, and also find some way to take care of small children while mothers are at work.

While expressing sympathy for those whose fathers, husbands and sons have been called to camp, Mrs. Roosevelt said it must be remembered the boys are just going away for a year's training.

One reporter asked the First Lady her opinion of the Willkie campaign button: "We Don't Want Eleanor Either." "People have a right to express their feelings," she replied, "but I don't see that it has much to do with the campaign."

Mrs. Roosevelt announced she will give a lecture at Colby College, Me., Wednesday.

"I thought if anybody in Maine wanted me," she said, "I'd better go."

There'll be "no campaigning," though. Her subject: "Problems of Youth."

First Lady's Message Cheers British Women

London, Oct. 25 (INS).—The women of embattled England tonight were heartened by a message of good cheer from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Writing in the Manchester Guardian, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"The women of this country (the United States) have watched with increasing admiration the calm women of England meeting their supreme trial.

"Their endurance, faith, self-sacrifice and wonderful organization will go down in history, because it is backing of this kind which makes it possible for men to win out in any situation.

"My congratulations to the women of England. May we all keep our faiths as they have done."

Sterilization Urged To Save Mothers Of 8 or More

Boston, Oct. 25 (AP).—"Sterilization in all women who have had eight or more children" was advocated today by Dr. Nicholson J. Eastman, Johns Hopkins University obstetrician, as a method of reducing maternal mortality.

Addressing a meeting honoring Dr. Walter Channing, founder of the 108-year-old Boston Lying-in Hospital, he added:

"In an analysis of 45,515 consecutive deliveries, we have found that women who have borne eight or more children experience three times the maternal mortality in subsequent pregnancies, and twice the stillbirth mortality met by women in the lower (child-bearing) brackets."

Tokyo Woos Moscow; Plans Concessions

May Abrogate Portsmouth Treaty To Better Face U. S.

By Hugh Byas

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Oct. 25.—Japan is getting ready to make substantial offers to Russia in return for an agreement removing Russian pressure in the Far East.

The government's precise intentions are effectively concealed, but when Lieut. Gen. Yoshitsugo Tatekawa, the Japanese Ambassador to Moscow, negotiates he will be fortified by the knowledge that Japanese informed opinion, especially in nationalist ranks, favors discussion of concessions that formerly would have been incredible.

Japanese opinion has made a complete about-face since the German - Italian - Japanese pact was signed, and Russia, formerly regarded as a pariah, is now being courted with brilliant offers. It is even suggested that Russia needs Afghanistan and India to make Soviet economy truly self-sufficient.

The expert on Russian affairs of the newspaper Asahi, a former Moscow correspondent, suggests that the Portsmouth Treaty between Russia and Japan be abrogated. That treaty constitutes the legal basis for Japan's immensely valuable Siberian fisheries and the mere suggestion of a concession in that direction shows the length to which the advocates of a Japanese-Russian entente are willing to go.

Nothing short of a major turn in the policy toward Russia can save Japan in "the eventual struggle with the United States" in the view of Masao Maruyama, the Asahi expert. That struggle, he believes, is inherent in Japan's pact with the Axis powers.

"That Japan will find herself confronted across the Pacific by a resentful and powerful United States is inevitable," he said. "Without a determined stand on our part cooperation with Germany is impossible."

"If Japan's armed might," he said, "is deflected from Russia and turned southward and a Japanese-United States war results, nothing could be more desirable for the Soviet Union. It is as valuable for Russia as it was to have the German spearhead turned toward Britain."

Astronomer Ends Mystery Of Twin Star

100,000,000-Mile "Pinwheel' Caused By Cast-Off Gases

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Oct. 25.—A Chicago astronomer tonight lifted the veil from Beta Lyrae, double star that has baffled scientists fon centuries.

Dr. Otto Struve, director of Yerkes Observatory, said the twin star generates a 100,000,000-mile pinwheel that flashes an array of colors across the heavens as gases of the two bodies unite.

Scientists have spent more than $1,000,000 trying to fathom the mystery. They have long agreed that the star consists of two suns revolving around each other in 13-day cycles and that one set of spectral lines comes from the larger body. They never before have been able to explain the other set of lines which Dr. Struve describes as a "nebulous ring of gas," spiraling around the larger star.

So Hot It Is Blue

This larger body is a supergiant, so hot it is blue. The cool and smaller star, which turns around it, cannot even be photographed.

"The spiral revolves around the star," Dr. Struve explained, "and matter is constantly streaming along the arms of the spiral form from the supergiant into infinite space at 100 miles a second. The whole object is like a pinwheel firecracker.

"Imagine a giant sun, so large that a good portion of the solar system could be hidden within its confines. A short distance away is another sun, yellow and relatively cool, though hotter and considerably larger than our sun.

Pull Is Tremendous

"Its pull of attraction upon the supergiant is tremendous and finally some of the outer gases of the latter coalese with the gases of the yellow sun.

"As soon as contact is established between the two stars, matter starts rushing from the supergiant. Some of it sweeps along the surface of the yellow star, where it is cooled and reduced in speed, until it finally returns to the parent star. Probably less than half the erupted matter ever returns into an ever-widening spiral arm."

The Chicagoan spoke at the opening of a lecture series at the new $150,000 observatory of Case School of Applied Science.

New Defense Amortization Rules Issued

Treasury Expects Regulations to Save Business Millions

New rules that may save manufacturers millions of dollars in taxes on emergency defense construction were issued yesterday by the Treasury.

The regulations, that may govern taxes on an estimated $3,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 in new plant construction, tell manufacturers what they must do in order to be allowed to charge off the value of their new plants in five years for tax purposes.

The new rules on rapid amortization of defense facilities were issued under the Second Revenue Act of 1940, which gave corporations this new privilege of depreciating certain plants in five years, rather than in the customary 15 or 20 years, provided the facilities were of an emergency national defense nature.

June 10 Is Guiding Date

Only construction which actually takes place after June 10, 1940, can qualify for the speedy amortization, the Treasury ruled. This means, officials said, that five-year amortization could not be claimed for a portion of a building erected before June 10, even if the entire structure, completed after June 10, were used for national defense purposes.

A flat requirement was made, in conformance with the tax law, that the privilege will be granted only when the National Defense Commission and either the Army or Navy certify the necessity of the new construction.

Taxpayers were given permission to elect either the new five-year plan of depreciating their new construction, or to continue with the slower, normal charge-off allowances.

But in what officials said was an attempt to give the broadest possible interpretation, the rules allow a manufacturer to switch from normal depreciation to rapid whenever he wishes, and even to switch back again to normal.

Cannot Lose Right

Tax experts pointed out that many firms may not choose to use the new provisions for 5-year amortization, out of fear that after the 60-month period the national emergency would still be in force, their profits would be high, but they would no longer be permitted to make tax deductions for depreciation.

Under the regulations a manufacturer who is being reimbursed by the Government for undertaking new construction is not entitled to the fast amortization privilege unless the Defense Commission and either the War or Navy Departments certify that the public interest has been protected.

What "protection of the public interest" would mean was not up to the Treasury, officials said. That term was left to be explained by the Defense Commission.

Officials said that the new rules mean that once a manufacturer gets the amortization privilege for a piece of defense construction he can not lose it.

Elastic Taxes Urged to Cure Business Ills

TNEC Report Would Vary Rates With Economic Changes

"Elastic" taxes that would stretch upward in good times and downward in depression days were suggested yesterday as a remedy for economic ills.

The suggestion was contained in a special report submitted to the Temporary National Economic (Monopoly) Committee by Commerce Department experts. Adolph J. Goldenthal, of the department's National Income Tax Division, wrote the report.

Noting that people in the highest income class get a larger share of all income in prosperous times and a smaller share in bad times, the report suggested elastic taxes as a method of evening the business cycle.

The suggestion was explained as "a system whereby personal income tax rates would be raised during periods of prosperity and lowered during periods of depression."

This flexible system, the report argued, might iron out the sharpest discrepancies in income and thus might make upward and downward swings of the business cycle less severe.

Finding that salaries and wages were a larger share of income in depression times and that dividends and net profits from sale of property played a larger role during prosperity, the report also suggested that differing types of income be taxed in varying amounts.

Elasticity of taxation in this case would take into consideration, the report said, that "some types of income are regarded as being socially more beneficial than others."

Under this "rubberized" system of taxation, for instance, dividends might be taxed more heavily than wages.

Studying the period 1918-1937, the researchers found that income concentration had increased during periods of business expansion and declined during periods of business contraction.

Four English Children Arrive At War Havens in District

First Group Destined for Homes Here Are Shielded From Curious; Boy, 12, Tells Of Sighting U-Boat While in Mid-Ocean

Guarded from the public as carefully as if they bore secret military information, four English children arrived in Washington yesterday to find new homes in a strange land.

As they stepped off a train at Union Station, they were identified by Miss Elizabeth Kehr, of the Children's Protective Association, who accompanied them from New York.

Gerald, 12, and his sister, Davina, 6, from Islip, and two sisters, Brenda, 6, and Miriam, 12, from Ilford, a suburb of London.

The last names of the young refugees from Britain's war zones and the homes to which they are going were not divulged by officials of the Washington branch of the United States Committee for the Care of European Children, through which agency they came here.

Gerald and Davina arrived in Halifax on the Empress of Australia three weeks ago, after a 10-day voyage from Glasgow.

"There was only one bit of excitement," said Gerald. "That's when we sighted a U-boat about half-way across. The destroyer with us chased it off, and we don't know what became of it."

Grave Miriam said that she and her sister had been through several air raids.

"It got so we didn't go into the shelters though," she added. "You see, they were too damp and a lot of them were full of water."

She and Brenda landed in Montreal after an uneventful trip aboard a White Star Liner from Liverpool.

Showed No Amazement

As the children were hurried through the station in the midst of a crowd of reporters, photographers, social service workers and the curious, they caught only a worm's eye glimpse of their new city. They looked about them guardedly, consciously refusing to show amazement at anything, obviously determined "to make a go of it."

Awaiting the children were the homes of three families with children of their own. Each family has an average income of at least $10,000 a year—the same economic background from which the children come, it was said.

All will go to District public schools and will be aided in their adjustments by as little fanfare as possible, it was said.

He leaves both parents and three brothers, Theodore S. Mason, jr., and William Mason, both of Rockville, and Welford Mason, of Philadelphia. He was a lifelong resident of Rockville.

The funeral will take places at 3 p. m. today from the family home in Rockville, burial to be in Rockville Union Cemetery. The Rev. Henry K. Pasma, pastor of the Rockville Presbyterian Church, will conduct services.

Social Workers Urged to Scotch Baseless Rumors About Draft

Social service workers can expect their duties and responsibilities to be appreciably increased by the Selective Service Act, the family welfare division of the Council of Social Agencies was told yesterday.

The speaker at the luncheon meeting, held at the Y. W. C. A., was Conrad Van Hyning, principal assistant director of the District Board of Public Welfare.

Rumors of all kinds, job disruptions, disturbance of normal routines in homes of conscripted men—these and a myriad other factors will arise to add to the burdens of case workers desirous of keeping affected families on a steady keel, Van Hyning declared.

Marriages a Problem

"Mrs. Smith will wonder why her son was called and Mrs. Jones' wasn't, though both boys were in the same classification. The large number of hasty marriages in recent months will lead to other social welfare problems.

"Young men who were the 'big brothers' in their homes or who were helping put someone through college will when they go to camp, leave behind family problems that case workers will be called on to help solve."

Accordingly, the speaker asserted, those workers should prepare themselves at once by becoming familiar with the Selective Service Act and rules, keeping themselves alert to mass psychology and closely observing the legislative processes bearing on the issues.

Family welfare advisers, he said, can do much to scotch baseless rumors, such as the one that men on WPA are not considered to have dependents because they are unable to support them adequately.

Should Banish Anxieties

They can, and should, relieve other unfounded anxieties and help straighten out job substitutes for selectees who are thrown out of work when the latter return from camp, he added.

All these new duties, however, should not result in case workers' neglecting their normal peacetime responsibilities—delinquency, housing, etc.—Van Hyning warned.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the family welfare division, presided over the meeting.

Catholic Women Choose President

Mrs. Hannah Schwartz, of Gaithersburg, Md., was elected president of the Montgomery County Federation of Catholic Women's Clubs at a meeting at Olney Onn, which was attended by approximately 150 members of various affiliated organizations. She succeeds Mrs. Roger Shaw, of Rockville, and will serve two years.

The other officers chosen were: Vice president, Mrs. John Weisman, Glenmont; secretary, Mrs. Louis Beall, Kensington; treasurer, Miss Nellie Hargett, Olney; auditor, Mrs. John H. Herrick, Kensington; parliamentarian, Mrs. John Brennan, Washington.

The Rev. John J. Coady, pastor of St. Peter's Church, Olney, delivered the address of welcome. Mrs. Shaw presided.

Preceding the meeting, luncheon was served, the Sewing Club of St. Peter's Church being hostess.

4 Marine Colonels To Be Promoted

Officers Will Get Brigadier Rank as Vacancies Occur

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the promotion of four Marine Corps colonels to be brigadier generals of the line.

The officers, recommended by a selection board headed by Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, will be advanced as vacancies occur in the upper rank. They are Col. Charles F. B. Price, member of the Naval Examining and Retiring Boards here; Col. Julian C. Smith, chief of staff of the Quantico (Va.) Marine base; Col. Roy S. Geiger, veteran Marine flier and now a student at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., and Col. Charles D. Barrett, director of plans and policies at Marine headquarters here.

Col. Price, 59, was in command of the Fourth Marines in Shanghai from 1936 to 1938, and has served on expeditionary duty in various parts of the world including command of the Second battalion, Eleventh Marines in France. Born in Germany of American parents, he entered the Marines in 1902, and holds the Distinguished Service Medal and Nicaraguan Medal of Merit.

Col. Smith, 55, is a native of Cecil County, Md. He entered the Marine Corps in 1909, and served in Cuba, Panama, Mexico, Haiti, Santo Domingo and Nicaragua. He was awarded the Navy Cross for services with the National Guard of the latter nation.

Col. Geiger, 55, is a former director of Marine Corps aviation. He won the Navy Cross for distinguished service as commander of a Marine air squadron in France in the World War. He was appointed a second lieutenant in 1909 after service in the ranks.

The fourth officer named for advancement also served in France in the World War, taking part in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. Col. Barrett, 55, who makes his home in Alexandria, commanded the Fifth Regiment of Marines at Quantico before coming here last June.

3 Brothers Seized In D. C. Draft Case

While police ordered special details to the schools to keep order, selective service officials last night took last-minute measures designed to alleviate congestion.

It had been feared considerable confusion would occur because thousands of registrants in each area would have to peruse voluminous lists, not arranged alphabetically but only in the number sequence.

Duplicate Prepared

At least one selection unit—that of the seventeenth area—was preparing a duplicate list cross-indexed alphabetically. Registrants are expected to be able to find their names in a matter of seconds with the alphabetical arrangement reported by the board clerk, Mrs. Frances Dulin.

As local boards rushed to complete lists in time for today's deadline, one board member was stricken, according to physicians because of overwork and a heart ailment. The official, Clarence Redman, 65, a member of board No. 6, of 4206 Arkansas Avenue Northwest, was unconscious but declared out of danger at Emergency Hospital last night.

Other boards besides the seventeenth are expected to follow the suggestion of Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of registration, that some alphabetical system be adopted. The draft official proposed clerks be assigned to sections of the lists bracketed alphabetically—as one clerk handling all serial numbers of persons whose names start with letters ranging from A to K—to whom registrants would go directly rather than examine unalphabetized lists unaided.

Presaging the jams expected today at local boards here was a line of 90 men who waited upwards of an hour for the posting of the list at Arlington County Court House, to learn their serial numbers, of vital importance after the lottery Tuesday. In Montgomery County, Md., on the other hand, local boards mailed out postcards informing registrants of their numbers.

Open Tonight

Draft board headquarters will be kept open from noon to 8 p. m. tonight and from 4 to 8 Monday and Tuesday evenings to give registrants ample time to ascertain their numbers.

President Roosevelt yesterday made public the last of six volumes of selective service regulations. Among its provisions was one specifying drafted men must be allowed at least five days to conclude personal and business affairs before being inducted.

As a team of eight quick-fingered stenographers stuffed numbers into the tiny nontransparent capsules, approximately 10,000 of which will be drawn from the "goldfish bowl" Tuesday by Secretary Stimson, tabulations showed 6,175 local boards had been appointed throughout the country. The number may be increased slightly with the splitting up of several large areas on orders of Director Dykstra.

Two Howard U. Educators Get Defense Posts

Maj. Campbell C. Johnson

Campbell Johnson, Judge Hastie Will Help With Draft

Two Howard University faculty members were named yesterday to executive posts in the national defense program. One will take up duties in the War Department, the other in the office of the selective service administrator.

Appointment of Campbell C. Johnson, secretary of the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. and an instructor at Howard University, as executive assistant to Clarence A. Dykstra, national selective service administrator, was announced at Dykstra's office. Last night the War Department announced President Roosevelt had named Judge William H. Hastie, dean of the Howard University Law School, as civilian aide to the Secretary of War.

To Advise on Racial Matters

As executive assistant to the director, Maj. Johnson will aid Dykstra in administrative affairs. A major part of his duties, it was understood, will be in advising selective service officials on racial phases of the draft.

The appointment was the second during the day that placed colored persons in high defense positions. Earlier, Col. Benjamin O. Davis was promoted to the grade of brigadier general, the first Negro ever to be named to the post.

A native of Washington, Johnson served in the World War as a captain of infantry. Returning here after the Armistice, he formed the R. O. T. C. unit at Howard U., and served as its first instructor of military science and tactics.

A graduate of undergraduate and law schools of Howard, the new executive assistant practiced law for two years before assuming the secretaryship of the Y. M. C. A. He is a member of the District Parole Board.

Johnson is a board member of almost every large community welfare organization in Washington, including the Family Service Association, the Council of Social Agencies, the Community Chest, the Washington Housing Association, and the Southwest Community House. He is married and the father of one son, Campbell C. Johnson, jr., 18. His home is at 1125 Columbia Road Northwest.

Amherst, Harvard Graduate

Judge Hastie's duties will be concerned with "the development and administration of policies looking to the fair and effective utilization of Negroes in all branches of the armed forces," it was announced.

In accepting the office Judge Hastie declared he has been "consistently opposed to any policy of discrimination and segregation" in the armed forces. He said that he hoped he will be able "to work effectively toward the integration of the Negro into the Army and to facilitate his placement, training and promotion."

Judge Hastie is a graduate of Amherst College and the Harvard Law School. He was formerly assistant solicitor in the Department of the Interior, and was later a Federal district judge in the Virgin Islands.

strong opposition to the creation of a separate air arm, equal to the land and sea forces. Many fliers and others, including Republican Presidential Candidate Wendell Willkie, have advocated that the United States follow the lead of Great Britain, Germany and most other major powers in this regard.

Colored General Named

President Roosevelt also disclosed the temporary promotion of 26 other officers to brigadier or major generals and the reassignment of several other ranking officers.

Among those advanced to brigadier general, was Col. Benjamin O. Davis, first Negro ever to be promoted to be a general officer. A native of Washington, Gen. Davis has spent 42 years in the military service.

Others promoted to brigadier general were Lieut. Col. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service headquarters executive; Col. Ulyses S. Grant, grandson of President U. S. Grant, and the commanders of the Army's six manufacturing arsenals. Grant will command a training center.

In promoting the commander of the GHQ Air Force, the War Department declared that the "time has now arrived" for it to return to its status as a "tactical fighting force." Established five years ago, for the past year the force has been mainly training new plane combat crews. Headquarters of the force will move shortly from Langley Field, Va., to Bolling Field here.

The reorganization of the Air Corps was made necessary, a War Department announcement said, by the air expansion program, which requires more prompt action and adds much detail to War Department work. Gen. Arnold will be the third deputy chief of staff.

Davis to Command Cavalry

Army officials said that it was planned that Gen. Davis would command a new brigade of the Second Cavalry Division, to be formed by the concentration of the Ninth, and Tenth Cavalry regiments at Fort Riley, Kans. These regiments have been scattered, one troop of the Tenth having been stationed at Fort Myer, Va., for many years.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
COL. BENJAMIN O. DAVIS,

If the assignment is made, military men see some problems to be solved. Both the colored regiments now have white officers, and the only other colored officers in the Regular Army are Capt. Benjamin O. Davis of the Infantry, the new general's son, and three chaplains. Either colored reserve officers would have to be assigned to the new brigade, or the Army's long-standing policy of not assigning colored officers to duty with white officers set aside.

This rule was recently reaffirmed in a White House statement on the policy to be followed in regard to the services of negroes in the Army.

Colored leaders expressed dissatisfaction with the statement.

Gen. Davis, however, it was noted, is due for retirement for age next July.

Other promotions yesterday, creating in all, 26 temporary additional general officers in the Army, include:

To Be Major Generals

Brig. Gen. John F. Curry, air district commander.

Brig. Gen. Walter K. Wilson, corps commander.

Brig. Gen. Ernest D. Peek, corps commander.

Brig. Gen. Fulton Q. C. Gardner, who will command the caostal and antiaircraft defenses of Hawaii.

Brig. Gen. Sanderford Jarman, who will have a similar post for the Panama Canal Zone.

To Be Brigadier Generals

Cols. John C. McDonnell, John B. Brooks and Carlyle H. Wash, Air Corps wing commanders.

Col. Clinton W. Russell, chief of staff, G. H. Q., Air Force.

Cols. Forrest E. Williford, Arthur G. Campbell and Robert C. Garrett, commanders of the coastal and antiaircraft artillery at Sandy Hook, N. Y., Virginia Beach, Va., and Portland, Me.

Col. Joseph A. Atkins, chief of staff of an army.

Col. Jack W. Heard, commandant, armored force school.

Cols. Edward M. Shinkle, Gilbert H. Stewart, Rolland W. Case, Norman F. Ramsey, Alexander G. Gillespie and Walter P. Boatwright, commanders of Picatinny, Springfield, Rock Island, Watervliet and Frankfort Arsenals.

Col. William A. McCain, commander, Philadelphia quartermaster depot.

Col. Ray L. Avery, commander, Edgewood, Md., chemical warfare arsenal.

In another order, the War Department assigned Maj. Gen. Jay L. Benedict, superintendent at West Point, to command the Fourth Army Corps, with headquarters at Camp Blanding, Fla. At the same time, Brig. Gens. Oliver L. Spiller, Richard F. Cox and Edgard B. Colladay were assigned as commanders of antiaircraft training centers at Fort Bliss, Tex.; Hinesville, Ga., and March Field, Cal.

in war, he is seeking to prepare machinery to offset the shock in this country from any developments in any one of the four troubled zones.

The arrangements include machinery to freeze credits and cash balances in this country held in the name of the involved countries in case of Axis domination, preparations to get American nationals out of troubled zones, and the drafting of proclamations to set up necessary American safeguards in event of eventualities.

The anxiety of the United States over the prospects of France entering the war against Great Britain and the desire for information were transmitted through Gaston Henri-Haye, the French Ambassador, who conferred Thursday night with Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State.

The ambassador went to the State Department to urge an attitude of reserve toward conflicting unofficial reports on the French situation and to say that he had no official information himself. It was said by officials that one reason not even the American Embassy in Vichy has been able to obtain prompt information on the latest conferences of French and German leaders is that Laval has kept matters to himself, not even informing his own foreign office.

Henri-Haye was said to have found Welles anxious over the trend of events and for some exact information through official channels. One report was that this anxiety and desire for information was set forth in a formal communication to the ambassador. At least M. Henri Haye sent an urgent request to Vichy for information and also reported in detail the viewpoint and attitude of the United States as to what was given him by Welles.

Fifth-Column Inquiry Opens Monday

ment of Justice had been informed that they violated the law requiring foreign propagandists to register with the State Department, committed criminal conspiracy to effect their designs and violated other American laws.

Willauer's letter of authority, filed in the criminal clerk's office at the District Court, gave him all the powers of a Federal district attorney and the right to use them in any civil or criminal proceeding in Washington or "any judicial district where the jursidiction may lie." Thus, Willauer is authorized to track down the alleged Fifth Columnists anywhere in the United States.

"Strategy of Terror"

Willauer's broad authority was revealed less than 24 hours after President Roosevelt excoriated foreign propagandists whom he said "seek to divide us with their strategy of terror."

Ready for Willauer's use is a mass of material on propaganda activity which has been collected in months of inquiry by special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. This is said to be keyed to files seized by Dies Committee agents who raided the Transocean service offices. These files were sent by the committee to the State Department, which promptly referred them to the Department of Justice for investigation and prosecution.

German consuls and diplomatic officers have been widely accused of manipulations to influence American public opinion and weld together pro-Nazi groups in the United States. Should the evidence which Willauer will open up behind the locked doors of the grand jury chamber support these charges, the State Department would be in a position to demand that the offending officials be sent back to Germany.

Got $169,000 from Berlin

The International News Service quoted agents of the Dies Committee as saying that they uncovered evidence that Germany already has set up agencies for propaganda work and the economic penetration of the United States, as was done in France, Holland, Norway and other countries conquered by Germany.

Finns Face Hard Winter, Envoy Says

Hjalmar J. Procope, Finnish Minister, declared Thursday night that Finland, short of food and clothing, was facing a severe winter. He spoke before the Stanford Alumni Club at the Catholic University library.

In the war with Russia, the envoy said, Finland lost 10 per cent of its land area, industrial production and forests; 16 per cent of its railroads; 19 per cent of its vital wood pulp industry. There was little loss in population, since Finns in the lands ceded to Russia migrated to unoccupied territory.

Dr. John M. Hager was reelected president of the club.

Text of John L. Lewis' Address Urging Election of Willkie

Tells Labor Roosevelt Has Failed

Sees Threat of Foreign War if President Wins a Third Term

The text of John L. Lewis' address last night follows:

I address all Americans. Our country is at one of the crossroads of its political destiny. The issues run deep and will inevitably affect the well-being and lives of every American. They will also affect the population of every other civilized country, and may well determine the stability or instability of all the free institutions of our present-day culture.

I am conscious of the degree of responsibility which attaches to my words. I am a qualified representative of many organizations of labor, and other groups of citizens. It is not necessary to enumerate them, since my listeners are familiar with their identity. Suffice it to say that the direct and affiliated membership of these several organizations amounts to substantially 10,000,000 men and women. Adding to this number the numerical strength of their dependent families, there is achieved a sum-total of human beings amounting to approximately one-fourth of the total population of our Nation.

Abandoning my right to speak officially for this great segment of our population, I choose to speak tonight only in the role of a citizen and an American. I do so in all the pride of my heritage, and with a desire to protect and preserve that heritage, and likewise the heritage of my peers. Accordingly, tonight, I do not speak for labor, but on the contrary, I speak to labor and to all my countrymen.

1939 Speech Quoted

I do not control the vote of any one man or woman. I have no power and no influence, except insofar as those who believe in me may accept my recommendations.

On September 4, 1939, in a public radio address, I said: "The Nation cannot forever continue its appalling drift—thoughtless and sadly executed experimentation will not always suffice to beguile a suffering people. The internal national debt has already reached such proportions that it may never be liquidated by orthodox methods. In the face of the economic debacle in America, many of our statesmen are more concerned and agitated over the political quarrels in Europe. War has always been the device of the politically despairing and intellectually sterile statesmen.

"It provides employment in the gun factories and begets enormous profits for those already rich. It kills off the vigorous males who, if permitted to live, might question the financial exploitation of the race. Above all, war perpetuates in imperishable letters on the scroll of fame and history the names of its political creators and managers."

The foregoing statement constitutes the first basis of my personal opposition to the reelection of President Roosevelt for a third term as Chief Executive of the Republic. Those who hear these words, and who have studied the public addresses of the President, from his Chicago "quarantine speech" to his Charlottesville "stab in the back" address, and thence to Dayton and Philadelphia, will understand his motivation and his objective.

It is war. His every act leads one to this inescapable conclusion. The President has said that he hates war and will work for peace, but his acts do not match his words. I am opposed to any involvement of our country in foreign wars. I believe that every thoughtful and normal citizen is similarly opposed. They are willing, as I am willing, to contribute everything for any necessary defense of our geographical integrity, our families, our possessions, our liberties and our lives.

The flaming horror of the current war now engulfs many nations. Reason would seem to prompt a course of national action designed to restrict and abate the war, rather than to expand and intensify its scope and destruction.

Far-Reaching Powers

The present concentration of power in the office of the President of the United States has never before been equalled in the history of our country. His powers and influence in this Republic are so far-reaching that they intimately and vitally affect the lives and fortunes of every citizen. In like measure, they may affect the lives and fortunes of other nations and their populations.

How startling, therefore, is the spectacle of a President who is disinclined to surrender that power, in keeping with the traditions of the Republic. The suggestion of a third term, under these conditions, is less than wholesome or healthy. Personal craving for power, the overweening abnormal and selfish craving for increased power, is a thing to alarm and dismay.

Eminent Americans have analyzed this principle in a manner that should bring conviction to the heart of every questioner. No citizen with the proper regard for the maintenance of orderly, temperate and considerate government should lightly endow any politician or statesman with a brief of authority that, for all practical considerations, runs in perpetuity.

U. S. "Needs No Superman"

Power for what? Personal and official power to what end? In all history, the unwarranted exercise of continuously vested authority has brought its train of political and social convulsions, for which humanity has paid an appalling price in loss of liberty, in disorder, tragedy and death.

America needs no superman. It denies the philosophy that runs to the deification of the state.

Supports Republican Nominee

America wants no royal family. Our forefathers paid the price in blood, agony, privation and sorrow, requisite for the building of this Republic. Are we now to cast away that priceless liberty, which is our heritage? Are we to yield to the appetite for power and the vaunting ambitions of a man who plays with the lives of human beings for a pastime?

I say "No." And whether I stand alone, or whether I am sustained, as I think I will be by the overwhelming number of American citizens, I should retain these convictions. It is time for the manhood and the womanhood of America to assert themselves. Tomorrow may be too late.

Dictatorship Possible

If President Roosevelt is reestablished in office in the forthcoming election, he will answer to no man, including the Congress, for his Executive acts, that may create a dictatorship in this land. This election may be historically comparable to the controlled elections and plebiscites of some of the nations of the Old World. I ask my countrymen to pause briefly and think deeply before the die is cast on this grave issue.

On January 24, 1940, at Columbus, Ohio, in a public address, I said in part, as follows (quote):

"In 1936, a coalition was effected between the Democratic Party and organized labor. The resources of both interests were pooled—the objective being the return of the party to power in the election of the same year. Organized labor furnished money, speakers, party workers in every political subdivision and many millions of votes. It substantially financed the national committee, various State committees, congressional committees, Labor's Non-Partisan League, the American Labor Party, the Progressive National Committee and the Good Neighbor League. Psychologically and politically, organized labor created the atmosphere of success that returned the Democratic party to power with an ample margin of safety.

Faith Not Kept

"A political coalition, at least, presupposes a post-election good faith between the coalescent interests. The Democratic party and its leadership have not preserved this faith.

"In the last three years, labor has not been given representation in the Cabinet, nor in the administrative or policymaking agencies of Government. The current Administration has not sought nor seriously entertained the advice or views of labor upon the question of national unemployment or lesser questions affecting domestic economy, internal taxation, foreign trade, military and naval expansion, relations with foreign nations or the issues of war or peace. Labor today has no point of contact with the Democratic Administration in power, except for casual and occasional interviews which are granted its individual leaders. In the Congress, the unrestrained baiting and defaming of labor by the Democratic majority has become a pastime, never subject to rebuke by the titular or actual leaders of the party.

"As the current year opens, the Democratic Party is in default to the American people. After seven years of power, it finds itself without solution for the major questions of unemployment, low national income, mounting internal debt, increasing direct consumer taxation and restricted foreign markets. There still exists the same national unhappiness that it faced seven years ago."

Accusations Unanswered

The foregoing indictment has never been answered nor refuted, nor successfully denied by any single spokesman for the Democratic Party or the Roosevelt Administration. They cannot gainsay the cold, stark facts of that record. There is no spokesman in the Democratic Party, or in the Roosevelt Administration, intellectually capable of this task.

If this be true, what of the future? President Roosevelt is asking the American people to contribute to him at least four more years out of their individual lives. What will he do with those lives and this Nation in the next four years, and how does he propose to do it? He has not said, and he asks from the people a grant of discretionary power that would bind him to no course of action, except the unpredictable policies and adventures which he may later devise.

After all, Americans are not a Nation of guinea pigs, constantly subject to the vicissitudes of the economic and political experiments of an amateur, ill-equipped practitioner in the realm of political science.

45 Million Hungry

One of the Commissioners of National Defense recently called public attention to the fact that there were 45,000,000 hungry people in America. In his subsequent press conference the President rebuked the commissioner for the statement and asserted that the condition had no relationship to the problem of national defense.

It is authoritatively stated that 20,000,000 people in the United States are able to spend only 5 cents per meal per person. Consider the astounding facts: 45,000,000 people in this land suffering from insufficient food and undernourishment, 20,000,000 of whom are required to live on an actual expenditure of 15 cents a day. This, in a land of plenty, with its agricultural granaries overflowing with surplus farm commodities, which the farmer is unable to sell. Where now are the tears for the "ill-housed, ill-clothed and ill-fed?"

The Roosevelt Administration is trying to create prosperity by the making of guns and lethal weapons. It points to the increased volume of production. It forgets to state that the productivity of the individual worker has vastly increased since 1929, and that increased volume does not correspondingly mean increased employment of workers. It forgets to state that there are 9,115,000 men and women in America still unemployed, and that the national defense program of production, when it reaches its maximum, will fail 5,000,000 short of providing employment for all.

The Administration spokesmen forget to say what will happen to economic America when the 25,000,000 men now under arms in foreign nations, and the 70,000,000 citizens who service these armies, are returned to peacetime pursuits. The manufacturers of America and the workers of America will then have to compete in the remaining world markets with the quantitative production of foreign nations, whose workmen will occupy the relative economic and social status of chattel slaves.

Where will our country then sell its goods? Surely not in Europe, nor in the Baltic or Mediterranean areas. Surely not in Africa or the Orient. Surely, it is obvious that South American markets will be penetrated by the cheap labor products of the world commercial adversaries of the United States of America. What is being done by the Roosevelt Administration to safeguard our population from such an impending economic disaster

What is being done to modernize the marketing methods of the United States in foreign trade territories, so as to compete with the changed rules of international commerce?

As a literal fact, the record of the last seven years is proof sufficient that the Roosevelt Administration is incapable of meeting this situation and maintaining this nation's rightful share of world commerce. And yet, this Administration in nonchalant and sprightly fashion, bluntly asks the American people to grant it at least an additional four years of power, so it can continue to toy with the lives of men and the destiny of nations.

"A Gallant American"

If not Roosevelt, whom do I recommend to do the job of making secure our Nation and its people? Why, of course, I recommend the election of Wendell L. Willkie as the next President of the United States.

He is a gallant American. He has opened his heart to the American people. He is not an aristocrat. He has the common touch. He was born in the briar and not to the purple. He has worked with his hands, and has known the pangs of hunger. He has had experience in various fields of American enterprise, and is an administrator and an executive.

Some sources have suggested that I should withhold my support of Mr. Willkie because Messrs. Grace, Girdler and Weir were allegedly supporting him. This is specious reasoning. One could as well suggest that the communicants of a particular faith should leave their church because of the presence of a hypocrite in their midst.

Hope for Contracts

Aside from this, these gentlemen must possess some virtue, because President Roosevelt has awarded them many fat and lucrative Government contracts, at the expense of the public purse.

I may also add in passing that it as a reasonable hope that these gentlemen, acting in their corporate capacities, will soon execute collective bargaining contracts with the C. I. O.

Wendell Willkie has said that he will put the unemployed to work; that he will abolish pauperism. He has said that he will increase the national income by working to increase the wages and incomes of those employed.

He says that he will enlist the representative brains of the Nation to do this job. He says that he will take the representatives of labor into his Cabinet and into the policy-making agencies of government, to assist and cooperate in the economic rehabilitation of America.

He has said that he will reduce the cost of operation of our Government, and thus reduce the taxes imposed upon individual citizens.

He has said that he believes in and will enforce the right of labor to organize, and will promote collective bargaining between industry and labor.

He has said that he will preserve and maintain all social legislation previously enacted for the protection of labor and any other citizen.

Guarantee on War

Wendell Willkie has given his guarantee to the American people that if elected President, he will not send the sons of American mothers and American fathers to fight in foreign wars. He avers that he will not use the power and influence of this mammoth Nation to promote or create war, but rather exercise that power and that influence to abate war and promote and maintain peace between nations.

This statement of principles and objectives entitles Mr. Willkie to the support of every thoughtful citizen.

Can he accomplish such a task? many will ask. It is my considered judgment that if Wendell Willkie is elected President, this task can, and will be done.

Can we believe Mr. Willkie, some will ask. I reply that I have confidence in Mr. Willkie's integrity and honor. I do not think that he would wittingly deceive the people, or lead them astray for selfish purposes. He is a strong man. He is strong enough to enlist the services of other strong men to do the job of saving our Nation, whether from attack by external foes, or disintegration from disunity within. For long years, I have served the men and women of labor. While serving them, I have ever sought also to serve my country and all its citizenry. I have been able to carry on, only because my acts were sustained by the confidence of the millions who stand behind me.

The words I utter tonight represent my mature conclusions and my sincere convictions. They are expressed, because I believe that the men and women of labor, and all other Americans, are entitled to know the truth as I see it.

Offers to Resign

I think the reelection of President Roosevelt for a third term would be a national evil of the first magnitude. He no longer hears the cries of the people. I think that the election of Mr. Wendell Willkie is imperative in relation to the country's needs. I commend him to the men and women of labor, and to the Nation, as one worthy of their support, and as one who will capably and zealously protect their rights, increase their privileges and restore their happiness.

It is obvious that President Roosevelt will not be reelected for the third term unless he has the overwhelming support of the men and women of labor. If he is, therefore, reelected, it will mean that the members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations have rejected my advice and recommendation. I will accept the result as being the equivalent of a vote of no confidence, and will retire as president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations at its convention in November. This action will save our great movement, composed of millions of men and women, from the embarrassment and handicap of my leadership during the ensuing reign of President Roosevelt.

To the leaders of the C. I. O., its executives, staff officers and field representatives, I know, and have worked with each of you. Upon some of you, I have bestowed the honors which you now wear.

Through the years of struggle, you have been content that I should be in the forefront of your battles. I am still the same man. Sustain me now, or repudiate me. I will not chide you, and will even hope that you will not regret your action.

To the mine workers of the Nation, who know me best, and who have always been the shock troops in the forward march of labor, I say it is best for you, and for those you love, to help oppose the creation of a political dictatorship in free America.

In Labor's Interest

To the steel workers, the automobile workers, the shipbuilders, the maritime workers, the lumber workers in the Far Northwest, the textile workers, the white collar workers, and the men and women of labor in the miscellaneous industries, I say I have worked for you and have fought for you. Believe me now, when I say that your interests, and the interests of the families you support, lie in the acceptance of the truth of the words I speak tonight.

To the farmers of the Nation, I say that I know something of your problems. I was born and reared in an agricultural State. You cannot be prosperous while the urban and industrial population is idle and debased. The national income must be increased, so that your crops will move to market at prices that will sustain you. Your interest lies in aggressive support of Mr. Willkie.

To the youth of America, many of who will cast their first vote in November, I say that the road of opportunity for you lies in the election of Wendell Willkie for President. Surely, you wish to preserve the privileges, for which your elders and your forbears fought. Surely, you wish to widen the horizon of opportunity for yourselves and your contemporary citizens.

For Colored Voters

To the members of the Negro race in our Northern States, I say your incomes as a group are the lowest; your living conditions are the poorest; your unemployment is the highest; discrimination against you is the worst. Surely, you have no cause to believe that President Roosevelt is an indis-

New Deal Seeks His Votes, Says Browder

Speech by Lewis Favoring Willkie

approximately $45,000 for the radio arrangements.

Lewis, who maintained strict secrecy on his stand up to the hour of the broadcast, long since had broken with the man for whose 1936 campaign his organizations had contributed $500,000.

As far back as January he predicted Mr. Roosevelt's "ignominious defeat" if nominated a third time, but it was not until after two post-convention conferences at the White House that word spread he was "leaning toward Willkie."

Even then, prominent C. I. O. leaders stumping for the President refused to believe he would indorse Willkie. The Administration apparently was prepared. On Thursday, Secretary of Labor Perkins said an anti-third-term declaration by Lewis would have little effect on the workers. President Roosevelt the same day sent to Congress an indorsement of the Lewis-approved mine safety bill as a gesture to Lewis' United Mine Workers rather than to Lewis himself.

Republican leaders already had indicated they would welcome Lewis support, taking issue with Democratic contentions that such a declaration would not influence the labor vote. In Pennsylvania and West Virginia particularly, where the mine worker vote is a strong factor they predicted it would cut deep into Roosevelt strength.

Whatever his declaration's effect, Lewis last night sealed the end of his career in the C. I. O. movement if his guess is wrong. If Willkie is defeated he promised to relieve the C. I. O. "from the embarrassment and handicap of my leadership during the ensuing reign of President Roosevelt."

Studded With Invective

His indictment of Roosevelt, studded with investive, repeated charges first voiced at the Columbus (Ohio) United Mine Workers convention, that this Administration has lost "contact" with labor, no longer seeks its advice on basic issues, and has not kept "faith."

Declaring 20,000,000 people today must live on 15 cents a day, and 45,000,000 are undernourished, he asked "Where now are the tears for the 'ill-housed, ill-clothed and ill-fed'"?

Americans, he said, will not be "a nation of guinea pigs" subject to the "political experiments of an amateur, ill-equipped practitioner in the realm of political science."

Asserting that the country needs no "superman" and wants no "royal family," he said this election may be historically comparable "to the controlled elections and plebiscites of some of the nations of the old world."

The Roosevelt Administration, he charged, was trying toe create prosperity by the manufacture of armament, but said national defense production at maximum would fall 5,600,000 short of absorbing the 9,115,000 unemployed.

Sees Trouble Ahead

He said the New Deal had done nothing to safeguard the working population or American manufacturers and markets from the world-wide competition of cheap labor and products that will follow the war. On its record, he said, the Administration is incapable of meeting that situation.

Recommending the election of Willkie, he praised the Republican nominee as a man with "the common touch," experienced as an administrator and executive, "born to the briar and not to the purple."

Declaring a third term "a national evil of the first magnitude," Lewis concluded with a fervent appeal to the men he has worked with "in the forefront of your battles."

To the United Mine Workers, and to each of the major C. I. O. units by name, he urged that "your interests, and the interests of the families you support, lie in opposing "creation of a political dictatorship in free America."

To the farmers, American youth, members of the Negro race, registrants for conscription, women, labor and the Christian church, he addressed separate appeals, urging in each case that their welfare depends on Willkie's election.

For himself, he said:

"I fear only for the people, and for our country. I am joining with Mr. Willkie in trying to do my part. I shall believe, my countrymen, that you will do likewise."

Rep. Norton Hits Willkie's Record

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House Labor Committee, declared tonight that the "real issue" of the Presidential campaign was "the people versus special privilege."

NORTON

Speaking to the voters of New England in a Yankee network broadcast, Mrs. Norton praised the Administration of President Roosevelt, urged his re-election and attacked Wendell Willkie's "record" and his attitude toward women in public office.

Willkie's "record as president of Commonwealth & Southern discloses," Mrs. Norton said, "that he fought by every means at his command the efforts of President Roosevelt to establish Tennessee Valley Authority, known as TVA."

National Committee Counsel Makes Denial Of Communist Charge

By John B. Oakes

Post Staff Writer

Earl Browder, Communist nominee for President, told a Senate committee yesterday that Democratic "machine leaders" in the State of New York were attempting to "force" Communists to vote Democratic by the expedient of barring the Communist Party from the ballot.

The allegation was immediately denied as "completely without foundation" by Sol A. Rosenblatt, counsel for the Democratic National Committee. The Democrats "wish no part of Mr. Browder or what he stands for," Rosenblatt added.

Asserting that the Communists in New York hold the balance of power this year, Browder accused the Democrats of trying to keep his party off the ballot through "wholesale organized corruption, fraud, intimidation and violence."

Forcing "Cooperation"

Democratic leaders, said Browder, thought that "if they could remove us from the ballot, they could force us to give the cooperation which in 1938 we gave voluntarily." The hearing was before Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, chairman of the special Senate Committee Investigating Campaign Expenses.

Browder, whose conviction for fraudulently obtaining a passport is now pending in the Supreme Court, said his party had been ruled off the ballot because of an insufficient number of signatures on the nominating petition.

Explaining that New York law requires petitions to have 50 signatures from each county, Browder charged that some 100 signers in Greene County had been intimidated into testifying in court that "they did not know what they were signing and therefore they wanted their names removed."

Appeal Is Pending

(The party was ruled off the ballot by Supreme Court Justice W. H. Murray, but the order was appealed and is now pending before Justice James P. Hill, of the Appellate Division.)

Browder asserted that persons claiming to be American Legionnaires had told petition signers that unless they withdrew their names, they would lose their jobs, their pension rights, their citizenship.

"This is not merely an example of the general persecution of the Communist Party," Browder declared, "but it's a special project of the Democratic Party to secure an advantage over the Republicans."

The Communist leader, who is under sentence of four years in prison and a $2,500 fine, was asked by Senator Gillette why he assumed the Communists were expected to vote Democratic if they could not vote for their own nominees.

"My assmption is based on the 1938 election," Browder replied, pointing to the 100,000 votes received in that year by the Communist nominee for Representative-at-large from New York. The Communists withdrew their gubernatorial nominee in favor of the Democrats, he said, adding that the Democrat, Governor Lehman, won by only 64,000 votes.

"If we hadn't withdrawn, Dewey (Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican nominee) would have been elected," Browder maintained.

In West Virginia, Browder complained, the Communist nominee for Governor has recently been sentenced to 6 to 15 years in the penitentiary on a charge of fraudulently securing signatures to election petitions.

At the close of Browder's statement, Democratic National Committee Counsel Rosenblatt caustically remarked, "I know of no one better qualified to speak on the theory of fraud than Mr. Browder."

"You're being imposed upon," he told Senator Gillette, "to listen to matters that the court wouldn't consider as proper evidence."

Senator Gillette replied that he didn't feel the committee was being imposed upon. But, broadly hinting that the committee had no power to deal with the matters Browder complained of, Senator Gillette observed that "we cannot sit as a court of review on any judicial matter that has been determined."

Subpenas Asked

Prior to Browder's appearance, Rosenblatt asked the committee to issue subpenas against Gerard Nolen, president of the Bankers Life Insurance Co., of Des Moines, Iowa, to see if he violated the law by telling his employes how they should vote at a meeting in the company's offices.

Rosenblatt also asked subpenas against three other life insurance companies — Metropolitan, New York, and Guardian—to determine whether they allowed their mailing facilities to be used in disseminating political propaganda.

A "categorical denial" of Rosenblatt's charge came from Robert E. Smith, secretary of the Peoples Committee to Defend Life Insurance and Savings, of New York.

Declaring that no insurance companies were involved, Smith said his committee had sent out "maybe 50,000" letters. He claimed that its publicity was so effective that "10 men have switched from Roosevelt to Willkie" for every dollar the committee has received.

Former Representative Samuel B. Pettingill, chairman of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, told Senator Gillette his organization was not a "political committee" and that the practical political effect it may have in the forthcoming election was only "incidental" to its stand against a third term.

The Presidential Campaign

Lowden Sees Dictatorship in 3d Term

Oregon, Ill., Oct. 25 (AP).—Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois and dean of the State's Republican Party, spoke out tonight against a third term for President Roosevelt, declaring it carried with it a threat of dictatorship.

LOWDEN

It was the first address delivered by Lowden in the Presidential campaign. The 79-year-old Illinoisan spoke by radio from this small community, a few miles from "Sinissippi," his farm home.

"If the present practice of centralization of power in the President should proceed for another four years, I fear that it will become impossible to dislodge the bureaucracy entrenched in Washington," he said.

Lowden recalled that when he was a Congressman he repeatedly introduced a resolution for a Constitutional amendment extending the term of the President to six years and making him ineligible for reelection.

"I believed then and I believe now that such a provision would vastly improve our government, and secure the liberties of our people against a dictator," he said.

Lowden claimed that "extraordinary power" had been conferred on President Roosevelt during national emergencies, adding: "He has never given back that power to the people."

"In all the world there are only three important rulers, aside from Franklin Roosevelt, who possess so much power. And they are Josef Stalin, Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini."

"We are drifting rapidly toward war. This terrible calamity, in my opinion, can safely be averted only by the election of Wendell Willkie. We have succeeded in incurring the enmity of the larger part of the world. We have forgotten the amenities of international intercourse. There is no sense in our going out of our way to offend the ruler of any nation by intemperate speech. This has never been in the American tradition."

'Big Money' Behind Willkie—Wickard

Van Wirt, Ohio, Oct. 25.—Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard declared here tonight that the country has decided to reelect President Roosevelt, but "the opposition is making one last desperate effort to 'blitzkrieg' the election."

WICKARD

Supplied with "Wall Street millions," he told his audience, Republicans are utilizing billboards, full-page advertisements in newspapers and the radio in an effort to regain control of the Government and "open the door to the special privileges to which Wall Street became accustomed during the twenties."

Praising the Administration's defense record he said:

"Roosevelt saw these were coming. He warned us of them months—yes, even years—before they occurred. For his foresight he was branded an alarmist. Throughout his Administration the President has been systematically strengthening our Navy. He has repeatedly urged increased armament expenditures, only to have them resisted to the utmost by Republican opposition in Congress. Now those same persons who called the President a warmonger and who did everything in their power to block our efforts to rearm, blame him because we are not better prepared. . . .

"The President knows the foreign situation."

He cited Wendell Willkie's declaration at Des Moines, Iowa, that "if elected President I will not take away any of the benefits gained by agriculture during the past few years."

But, Wickard said Willkie, in October, asserted:

"I intend . . . to let the good black soil of America produce all that it can."

"I know that a good many farmers studied that remark and wondered how soil conservation and acreage adjustment would fit into a program of 'letting the good black soil of America produce all that it can,'" Wickard added.

Tobin Says Lewis Aids Those 'Who Tried to Crucify Him'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 25.—Daniel J. Tobin, general president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (A. F. L.) and chairman of the National Democratic Labor Bureau, said in an address tonight that John L. Lewis, in announcing his support of Wendell L. Willkie, had aligned himself with those who have "tried to crucify him and crucify me."

Tobin and Secretary Ickes, who called the Republican convention a "put show," spoke at a Democratic labor rally at the Chicago Stadium.

Referring to "the head of the 'C. I. O.'" Tobin said that before the Presidential campaign Lewis "gave me every assurance—at least I understood him to assure me—that he would do nothing to injure our program."

Charges Impossible Requests

Tobin charged that "this man" made certain requests "of the President of the United States that would have been impossible and possibly illegal to grant."

Tobin did not enlarge upon the requests he charged were made of the President, but he said the Attorney General recently gave an opinion on one of them.

"This man has gone over to the side of those who have crucified us both—the enemies of labor," Tobin said vehemently. "I find him lining up with the men who have tried to crucify him and crucify me—Mr. Weir and Mr. Girdler.

Not Based on Members

"They are now on the side of the same leader in an endeavor to elect Willkie."

Tobin said he had received assurance from many leaders of labor, including officials of the United Mine Workers, that Lewis' "announced support of the Republican Presidential nominee was not based on the feelings or decisions of the members of their organizations.

Philadelphia, Oct. 25.—Coincident with John L. Lewis' indorsement of Wendell L. Willkie, officers of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers (C. I. O.) telegraphed tonight a pledge of "continued loyalty and enthusiastic support" to President Roosevelt.

The message, signed by three Philadelphians—Alexander McKeown, president; William Smith, secretary-treasurer, and Alfred Hoffman, first vice president and Edward F. Callaghan, second vice president, of Chattanooga, Tenn.,

Rockford C. I. O. Reaction

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 25 (U.P.).—The Rockford C. I. O. Council, claiming to represent 6,000 members, tonight repudiated John L. Lewis for his support of Willkie and reiterated its endorsement of President Roosevelt.

Haywood Indorses Lewis

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Allan S. Haywood, national organizing director of the C. I. O., said tonight that he and many other C. I. O. officials had assured John L. Lewis, after he announced his support of Willkie, that they "indorse his statement and pledge continued fealty to his leadership."

Haywood said he was joined in his indorsement by Walter S. Medhurst, Peter Mosele, organizing directors; Harold J. Straub, national director of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee, and members of organizing staffs.

He added that he had talked with directors in Buffalo, N. Y.; Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Wilmington, Del.; Newark, N. J.; Allentown, Pa., and in Rhode Island and that "all gave assurances that they were with Lewis."

Favors Roosevelt, Lewis

Boston, Oct. 25 (AP).—Donal M. Sullivan, president of the American Newspaper Guild (C. I. O.), said tonight after hearing John L. Lewis' indorsement of Wendell Willkie:

"I remain in favor of Mr. Roosevelt for President of the United States and John L. Lewis for president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. . . . I do not regard Mr. Willkie or Tom Girdler as 'gallant Americans.' I do not trust Mr. Willkie or his business backers."

Socialist Comment

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Travers Clement, national campaign director of the Socialist Party, said tonight in a statement that "John L. Lewis has returned to the faith of a corrupt, moribund, reactionary Republican Party—for which he carried the torch even against the late Robert La Follette in 1924."

Flynn Didn't Hear Him

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, said tonight that he had not listened to Lewis' indorsement of Willkie, which was concluded just as Flynn was scheduled to begin broadcasting. He said any comment on the Lewis speech should come from Washington.

"Betrayed," Says Abramson

Paterson, N. J., Oct 25 (AP)—Irving Abramson, first vice president of the New Jersey State C. I. O., said tonight John L. Lewis had "betrayed organized labor for the monied interests of Wall Street" by indorsing Willkie.

Norris Says Willkie Opposed Coulee

Grand Coulee, Wash., Oct. 25 (AP). Standing on top of the world's greatest engineering structure — Grand Coulee Dam—Senator Norris, of Nebraska, urged the reelection today of President Roosevelt as the man whose vision had made the great project possible.

NORRIS

And, looking up-stream over the 150-mile Columbia River Reservoir which will supply water for the 1,200,000-acre Columbia Basin reclamation project in connection with the dam, he added:

"Does not every one of our people know that if Wendell Willkie had had his way, you never would have had either one of these dams constructed?"

He referred to Bonneville Dam as well as the Grand Coulee. Both are on the Columbia River.

"He (Willkie) has publicly condemned both of them.

"On January 25, 1937, as quoted in the New York Herald Tribune, he said the Government dams for power purposes were 'uneconomic and fallacious.' . . .

"But after Mr. Willkie was nominated for the Presidency . . . in his Portland speech on September 20, 1940, he announced:

"'If I am elected President, Senator McNary and myself and these Congressmen and Holman, whom I hope you will send to Washington with me, will see to it not alone that that investment in those projects is not lost but that it is completed and that it is operated for the full benefit of this and adjoining areas.'"

Willkie Ready To Debate Thomas

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Wendell Willkie today agreed to a public debate with Norman Thomas, Socialist Party candidate for President, provided Thomas could "persuade the third-term candidate on the Democratic ticket to participate so that all sides of these issues may be presented."

Willkie's telegram, made public by the Socialist campaign committee, was a reply to Thomas' challenge yesterday to debate at Elmira, N. Y., where Willkie spoke in a public park which the Socialists said was previously denied their candidate.

Willkie, Roosevelt Alike, SaysThomas

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist Presidential nominee, declared tonight that Wendell Willkie has been "captured by the same interventionist school" as President Roosevelt and "there is nothing left for peace lovers to do but vote Socialist."

THOMAS

"I do not challenge the President's subjective sincerity," Thomas said in a prepared rally address, "but one may wish for peace on dangerous or impossible terms. He is today gambling our own liberties and the lives of our people on the protection of Shanghai or Singapore, although in May he told us that we could barely protect Omaha."

The Republican Presidential nominee, Thomas said, "Is if anything even more than the President the spokesman of that dying private capitalism which, having failed to conquer poverty at home, seeks expansion through armament economics, imperialism and war."

Willkie Beyond His Depth—Pinchot

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Gifford Pinchot, former Republican Governor of Pennsylvania, declared tonight that he was for the reelection of President Roosevelt because "he knows what it is all about," and "Mr. Willkie is beyond his depth."

PINCHOT

Willkie "may be able to handle a public utility holding company," Pinchot said in a radio address "but he is clearly incompetent to guide our country through the greatest world-cataclysm of all time."

"If these were ordinary times," the two-term former Governor continued, "I would be heart and soul against Mr. Willkie for what he is and for what he has done. I would oppose him most of all because he is the spearhead of big business in its attempt to get back the domination it used to have over the Government and the people of the United States."

Nazis Want Willkie, Wallace Asserts

Part of Their Plan To Weaken U. S., He Says in Philadelphia

By the United Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 25.—Henry A. Wallace, Democratic candidate for Vice President, said tonight that "Nazi support" of Wendell L. Willkie is part of Adolf Hitler's plan to weaken and eventually conquer the United States.

"The friends of the totalitarian powers have decided that the ignorance and lack of leadership of the Republican candidate qualify him as their candidate," Wallace said in his most unrestrained attack yet delivered against Willkie. The former Secretary of Agriculture spoke in the Third Regiment Armory, from which his speech was broadcast nationally.

He accused Willkie of "moral confusion . . . ignorance and lack of leadership," and said "his mind is in a state of confusion."

Wallace did not mention Willkie by name, referring to him only as the "Republican Presidential candidate."

A Republican victory in November is a necessity for the dictator plans to "overthrow our peace and our liberties," Wallace declared. He added that totalitarian agents have been ordered to spend money and effort to "remove from their path the greatest power for protection of our peace, the Administration and leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Wallace several times emphasized that he did not question the patriotism of Willkie, but said he has appeared "to the Nazi leaders as the element of weakness that they need for their designs."

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, in a prepared speech discussed "Mr. Willkie and his anti-labor associates—the Big Four of the utility Presidential campaign..." The associates, he said, were Ernest Wier, steel executive; Thomas Girdler, president of Republic Steel Co., and Joseph N. Pew, president of the Sun Oil Co.

"Never before in the history of our country in any Presidential campaign has there been such a bold front, such premeditated plans and such determined efforts to fight labor," he said.

Flynn Assails G.O.P. Campaign

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, charged tonight that after several shifts in campaign strategy, Republican forces, "in utter desperation yielded to the technique which the dictators have found so successful in extending their power over the people—the technique of threat, terror and fear."

FLYNN

In an address for delivery over the N. B. C. blue network, Flynn added:

"In this campaign, a flood of scurrilous literature prepared by high-powered character assassins attacking President Roosevelt and his family is pouring over the Nation on a scale unknown perhaps since Lincoln's time.

"Every possible appeal to hatred, bigotry and intolerance is included in this stream of muddy poison propaganda.

"The President is openly called a 'dictator' and his Administration is described as the real 'Fifth Column.' Apparently no lie is too gross or malicious for circulation, including the charge that he is a traitor to his country."

Flynn urged redoubled activity on the part of Roosevelt supporters, saying, "we have this election won. We must not throw it away because of overconfidence."

The Political Arena

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 25 (AP).—Roger W. Babson, the Prohibition Party's candidate for President, and Edgar W. Moorman, Vice Presidential candidate, today were denied a place on the Pennsylvania ballot at the November election. Dauphin County Court Judge John K. Fox ruled the party failed to file nomination petitions with the election bureau in proper time.

BABSON

Bullitt's Brother Favors Willkie

Philadelphia, Oct. 25 (AP).—Orville H. Bullitt, brother of Ambassador William C. Bullitt and long identified with the Democratic Party in suburban Montgomery County, favors the election of Wendell L. Willkie.

In a statement yesterday with C. Jared Ingersoll, railroad executive, the brother of President Roosevelt's envoy to France, denounced the President for "seeking to perpetuate one-man rule of America." Bullitt is a banker.

Byrd, Unopposed, Spent Nothing on Campaign

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, reported to the secretary of the Senate yesterday that he had spent nothing and received no contributions in his campaign for reelection. He has no opposition. Senatorial candidates are required by law to report their campaign costs.

McNutt Addresses $100-a-Plate Dinner

Philadelphia, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Democratic campaign chest was richer by at least $100,000 today—proceeds of a $100-a-plate dinner at which Paul V. McNutt, Federal social security administrator, declared that the New Deal's Republican opposition is "haunted by the ghosts of an outmoded generation."

Cobb Sees Threat In Third Term

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 25 (AP). Irvin S. Cobb, author and "life-long Democrat," urged tonight the election of Wendell L. Willkie, saying election of President Roosevelt for a third term would bring threats of dictatorship and involvement in war through "meddling" in foreign affairs.

COBB

In a radio broadcast, Cobb said: "Most of all I shall be glad to vote for this man Wendell Willkie because he shares with us that principle that is the oldest principle of the Democratic party, namely that no man whatsoever shall hold the Presidency for more than two consecutive terms.

"* * * He has set his face like flint against nepotism, against the danger of a dictatorship. . . . Hitler was elected to three consecutive terms in authority before he became a dictator. Mussolini was also thrice elected to his job before he turned despot. This third-term thing seems to be the turning point for entrenched tyranny!"

Text of Willkie's Speech Pledging to Extend Social Gains by Creating Millions of New Jobs

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 25.—Following is the prepared text by Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate, at Wilkes-Barre tonight:

Last night in Akron, Ohio, I spoke about the need in this country for a broader understanding of the meaning of collective bargaining. I showed how the New Deal had approached the question of collective bargaining from a reactionary standpoint. It has viewed collective bargaining as a mere contest between opposing factions in our economy. It has created bad blood between certain groups in industry and certain groups in labor.

It has created plenty of fights, but no jobs. We want to do away with the fights and create jobs.

The true purpose of collective bargaining is to achieve coordination of effort by the American people. It is our purpose with the help of the leaders both of labor and of industry, to put an end to this era of bad feeling. I want to unify the spirit of America. With the help of both labor and industry, we shall make these really the United States.

Tonight I want to carry that discussion a step further. I want to talk with you about the need for a coordination of effort, not merely between labor and industry, which includes both workers and employers, on the one hand, and agriculture on the other.

It may seem to you here in this highly industrialized area, as though the problems of the farmer are very remote, and it may seem to the farmer in Iowa, or Nebraska, or Kansas, as though the bitter problems which you face here in Wilkes-Barre are very removed from his concern. But the truth is that the farmer and the industrial workers are inter-dependent.

Does Not Go Far Enough

The solution to your problems does not lie solely in Wilkes-Barre. It lies in considerable measure out in the other regions of the country which constitute the market for the products of industry. Similarly, the solution to the problems of the farmer does not lie solely in the agricultural regions. It lies very largely in the farmer's market—the industrial workers, who buy the food that is raised on the farm.

For seven and a half years we have had an administration in Washington that has tried to divide us into classes. It has sought to solve the problem of the farmer merely by paying him needed benefits without affording him a market. It has sought to solve the problems of the workers by passing social legislation and providing relief. The purpose of these efforts is good, as far as it goes. But it does not go far enough.

They do not solve the basic problems. They do not bring about a unified recovery or improvement of industrial activity and of farm prosperity. The farmer is entitled to a fair income that will make him independent of benefit payments. The worker is entitled to a job at fair wages so that he can be independent of the relief administration.

The failure of the New Deal has been its failure to understand the true relationship between the various elements in our economy. The truth is that we live in one nation and we earn our living in one economy. No program for American recovery will ever work unless it is designed to bring about better living conditions and greater security for all our people. That is our program.

Each Is Other's Customer

The farmer must take an interest in the problems of the industrial worker just as the worker in industry must be concerned with the problems of the farmer. Each is the other's customer.

The improvement of living standards for industrial workers is not merely a concern of labor. It is a vital, a real concern of all of us.

That is one reason why I am completely and wholeheartedly behind every social gain that has been made in this country. But I want to go much further than we have yet gone. I want to expand those social gains and to make them absolutely secure by building beneath them a solid foundation of economic recovery.

You cannot have the benefits of social security unless you have a job. You cannot get the benefits of the National Labor Relations Act, of unemployment insurance, or of the Wages and Hours Act unless you have a job.

To spread the benefits of such legislation to all our people, to make them work, to make them sound, we must have a Nation of men productively employed, creating the goods the Nation needs, earning the money with which to support themselves and their families in a decent American way.

We see a land filled with more natural wealth than any country on earth, a land with mineral riches underground and bounteous crops on the surface of the earth. We see a skilled population, able and willing to work; men who know how to convert these natural resources into the things we all want—food, clothing, shoes, automobiles, houses and radio. That is the bright side of the picture.

Now look at the other side of the picture—at many of the men, women and children whose lives depend on industry. We see undernourished children living in houses without enough sanitary facilities, under conditions which are bad for their health of body and their health of mind. All young growing things need nourishment, fresh air, sunlight and room in which to grow. You would think that these were simple things, cheap things. Yet how many are without them who should have them?

We see worried, anxious mothers, old before their time, who must bear the burden of housework and of raising a family without any of the modern conveniences which could so lighten the task. And we see men, the heads of families, anxious and worn. Over their heads constantly hangs the fear of loss of work, the fear of injury and loss of earning power, the fear that old age will find them without security and without hope.

In pictures like these lie the challenge of our society—the challenge to make that picture brighter.

The very least we can do to begin is to see that it does not get darker. We are all agreed on that. That is why we have adopted such things as unemployment insurance, workmen's compensation, old-age pensions, laws preventing sweatshop wages, sweatshop hours and Federal relief.

Some of these safeguards have been adopted under Democratic administrations in our various States and in our Federal Government. Some by Republican—but the important thing is that they are done and they are beyond partisanship.

In this campaign, none of these social gains are at issue. No matter who wins the election, these laws will be retained.

We want to see them reinforced and improved.

My point is that all this social legislation is not enough. A civilization in which millions of our fellow men are barely existing, in which children are not getting enough to eat, in which young people cannot find jobs and old people have no security—that is not a successful civilization.

We are constantly told that no one shall starve in America. That is not good enough. We are not satisfied merely that our children shall not starve. We want them to have lots of good food. We want to build them up. And we want to build up America.

Of course, we must keep our social gains, but we must go ahead. It is a simple proposition that I put to you tonight.

Problem of Production

Here are countless women who want washing machines and here are plenty of men who know how to make them. Here are countless families who want better houses, and here are innumerable men who know how to build them. Here are millions of children who need more milk and meat and vegetables, and here are countless farmers who know how to produce them.

That is the proposition. By all the rules of justice and common sense, those who can produce those things should be able to produce them; and those who need them should be able to get them.

But what is actually happening? We have people on the farms who need the products of industry while 9,000,000 men are out of work and many factories are idle. We have people in the cities who need the products of the farm and the farmer cannot sell the crops he raises.

Obviously there is bad management and inefficiency here.

We have had an Administration which pays the farmers to curtail crops while it discourages the expansion of industry which would make a market for those crops. We have had an Administration which sets labor against management and industry against the farmer, instead of calling the leaders of labor, industry and agriculture together to work for a better standard of living for all.

Dependent upon size of income, between 25 and 45 per cent of the total living expenses of American families goes for food, products of the farm. Any increase in the earnings of the industrial worker will be reflected in increased income for the farmer. And that means better markets for the products of industry.

True of Lower Third

This is especially true of workers in the lower-income groups. If the one-third of our people who receive the lowest incomes were able to spend as much for food as the middle third, they would spend over $2,000,000,000 additional for the products of the farm. Those with the lowest incomes spend more than 50 cents out of every $1 for food. For every $1 of increased income they receive, one-half will go for the purchase of food.

The statisticians of the Department of Commerce have estimated that an increase of from 10 to 20 per cent in industrial activity would increase the real income of the farmer and of farm laborers and tenants by almost exactly the same percentage.

So every element in our country has a direct interest in seeing increased industrial activity. That is the way to more jobs. That is the way to opportunity for our young people. That is the way to a better income for the farmer and to a higher standard of living for every one. And that also is the way to a strong national defense.

The greatest task that lies before us in achieving the goal of a strong and prosperous America is to revitalize our industries.

On many occasions I have discussed the question of what makes a job. In our industrial society, before you can have a job you must have the plant and equipment with which men can work. On the average it takes about $4,000 invested in plant and equipment to put a man to work in industry.

In order to find new jobs for our young people who are growing up every day and in order to maintain and expand our industrial plant so that there will be additional jobs to absorb the unemployed, we must have a constant flow of new productive investment, and that is just what we have not been getting under the New Deal.

During the entire period from 1933 to 1939, inclusive, the amount of new capital that went into the construction or purchase of new plants and equipment was less than for the single year 1930!

That is one fundamental reason why we have not been getting ahead. The New Deal started out with the idea that our industrial plant was all built. The third-term candidate told us in 1932 that "a mere builder of more industrial plants . . . is as likely to be a danger as a help." And the inevitable outcome of that defeatist attitude is that today the Democratic National Committee tells us that no man now living or who ever lived can provide jobs in private industry for all American workers.

Now, when you get a management in any line of endeavor that does not believe there is any solution to its problems—when you get a management that throws up its hands and gives up in despair—then so long as you keep that management you will never get ahead.

Irrespective of Mr. Roosevelt's motives or intentions, I ask you if this isn't a reasonable proposition:

Here you have had a management in the affairs of your Government which has had a fair trial of eight years and in all that time it has been unable to solve the problem of the farmer, revive industry, or provide our people with jobs. And now that management tells us that it can't be done.

Under such circumstances, what have you got to lose in making a change? Isn't it about time to get management that believes in the future of this country and believes that the job can be done.

I ask you to put me to work. I know that this job can be done.

W.Va. to Check If D. C. Voters Paid State Tax

G. O. P. in Border Areas Plan Contest Of Absentee Ballots

Government employes living in Washington but registered in West Virginia will be checked to ascertain whether they have paid State income taxes if they vote November 5, according to information received by Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia.

Republicans in border counties closest to the National Capital are threatening not only to challenge the legality of absentee ballots cast from the District, but will investigate income tax returns as well.

Ernest K. James, State income tax commissioner, has informed Senator Holt that Federal workers who claim a voting residence in West Virginia are clearly required to pay the income tax.

"The law in this State requires all citizens, whether residing in this State or in another State, or abroad, to file income tax returns with this State," James wrote.

Senator Holt, who expressed a desire to "see the whole mess cleaned up," said he would give the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee adequate time to make a thorough investigation before taking a hand in the inquiry.

He said it was "common knowledge" in West Virginia that Washington is the State's corrupt borough" and that absentee ballots were often decisive in carrying counties where the contests were close.

Senator Holt has received several letters from bona fide Washingtonians who say they have been urged to register in West Virginia although they are not nor never have been residents of the State.

D. C.'s 'Oldest Active Democrat' Suffers in Voteless Anguish

Never Saw Republican Worthy of His Vote, Says Mr. Lyddane, 92

THOMAS LYDDANE

A claimant to the title of Washington's oldest active Democrat (who qualifies himself on grounds that he never saw a Republican he would vote for during his 92 years on this earth) turned up yesterday as the symbol of how a man of aggressive political views suffers anguish in this voteless town.

Right now he had rather vote for Roosevelt than any candidate in his recollection and he remembers when Lincoln was inaugurated the second time. This Democrat, Thomas O. Lyddane, 50 Nicholson Street Northwest, has, in fact, never voted in any Presidential election, thanks again to his residence in Washington.

Which is one thing to him while the other thing is that now he would like to help cut down that two-State gain which he thinks the Republicans will show this time above what Landon did. Lyddane, inveterate reader of politics and listener to political speeches on the radio, grants Willkie four States.

Lyddane is a native of Rockville, Md., but has been a resident of Washington since he was 13 years old. From his front porch, where Lyddane discusses Willkie's chances, 'Roosevelt's greatness," how much consideration should be given to any Republican and this business of living in a voteless town when Democrats are running for office, the third-term aspect of the campaign is told off in an old voice.

He thinks if those old founding fathers were alive now and aware that Roosevelt wants a third term they would change their viewpoint. He will stay up as late as anybody the night of November 5.

For Absentee Voters

The District Communist Party announced yesterday that it had opened an absentee voters' bureau at 527 Ninth Street Northwest, rooms 207-208.

Press Society Chief Demands Flynn's Ouster

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 25.—Oliver Holden, executive director of the American Press Society, called upon President Roosevelt today to remove Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn "from the post he dishonors."

In an open letter to the President, Holden said that Flynn's recent assertion that 90 per cent of the American press permits its news to be controlled by financial interests and advertisers constituted an indictment of every type of editorial worker.

"Mr. Flynn thus accuses the employes who gather, write, edit and interpret the news for 90 per cent of the American press," Holden said, "of engaging continuously and systematically in prostitution of their profession."

Holden said that he had called upon Flynn either to produce evidence to support his charges or retract and apologize.

To support his assertion, the Democratic chairman, Holden wrote, "piles falsification upon falsification to deceive the American public. Thus he shows himself and not the news workers he slanders as the one who prostitutes the truth and the integrity of the news."

Chief G-Man Cited for Exposing Fifth-Column Sabotage

Nice Reports $6,772 Spent In Senate Race

Harry W. Nice, former Governor of Maryland and now Republican candidate for the Senate, yesterday reported campaign contributions totaling $9,580.65 and expenditures to date of $6,772.24. The report was filed with Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate.

Most of Nice's contributions were of small amounts. The largest were $1,000, by Robert M. Guggenheim, and two donations of $2,000 and $1,000 by the Senate Republican campaign committee. Nice himself has contributed $960.

Senator Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, who is running for reelection, has not yet filed his financial report.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, submitted a statement in lieu of a report, saying:

"I have received no funds and have made no disbursements since my nomination to the Senate."

Senator Byrd has no Republican opponent although Communist and Socialist candidates have been nominated.

time in the history of American politics, class hatreds and bitterness have been so aroused that there have been attempts to stop the ordinary courtesies of free discussion."

"I say to you that this Administration cannot unite the American people," he continued.

En route here Willkie demanded that President Roosevelt explain why he urged Congress to adjourn last June instead of asking it to stay in session to make defense appropriations.

In a series of talks through southern New York, the Republican Presidential nominee said the President had "proclaimed that he foresaw the war in Europe."

"Did you hear him preaching to the American people the war is coming, you must defend yourselves?" Willkie asked.

"He said to Congress last June, 'Go home, go home. There is no necessity for your being here. I can handle the international situation.'"

"Fortunately for the country," the candidate added, "opposition leaders held Congress in session, and additional defense funds thus were appropriated."

Willkie addressed crowds in Jamestown, Salamanca, Hornell and Elmira before going late in the afternoon to Binghampton and then to Scranton, Pa. The day was chilly and damp, and the nominee said the weather, plus constant use of his voice in recent weeks, had made his voice husky.

Willkie announced today that he would continue to respond promptly to all of Mr. Roosevelt's campaign addresses. The replies will be made within 24 to 48 hours, he said, depending on the availability of radio time.

After his address in Wilkes-Barre tonight, he will go to New York for a heavy Saturday schedule. He will attend the World's Fair and the Fordham-St. Mary's football game in the afternoon. He will speak in the evening at the Grover Cleveland High School, Ridgewood, Queens; Jamaica High School, Queens; Technical High School, Brooklyn, and Italian Hall, Brooklyn.

At Binghamton, Willkie drove through crowded streets to the county court house. There were loud cheers, but some of the crowd carried pictures of President Roosevelt and booed the Republican candidate.

Willkie kept his overcoat buttoned about him in the chilly late afternoon air. His voice increasingly hoarse, he said that he had been accused "of being a businessman."

Declaring he wanted to admit he had been one, Willkie added, "I never made a dollar in my life in any business I was ever connected with except in salary paid to me as an officer or director."

1,000 Per Cent for Rail Worker

At Hornell, N. Y., an unscheduled stop, Willkie said he was "1,000 per cent" for railroad workers. An increase in business, he added, would increase the number of railroad employes and would improve their chances for higher wages.

Willkie left his train at Elmira, N. Y., to speak in the public square. Wearing a heavy overcoat because of damp cold, he jumped to the railing of the platform in response to a cheer from the crowd.

"I want to take America off the road of bankruptcy," Willkie said, "so that we can preserve for labor and all the other American people the social gains we have made in over 150 years of struggle."

Republican Sees Roosevelt Sweep

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Asserting that President Roosevelt had "initiated preparations for world safety and peace that cannot be taken over at this time by any other human being," former Gov. Chase S. Osborn, of Michigan, today predicted the President would carry every State in the Union.

In a statement issued through the Committee of Regular Republicans for the Reelection of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Osborn termed the opposition to Roosevelt "unpatriotic, unintelligent, and illegitimate."

Roosevelt Says He'd Not Resign

was marked down for the week's opener.

His Monday itinerary, rivaling any of Wendell Willkie's busiest days:

Sunday night departure from Washington; a greeting at Kearny, N. J., next morning by mayors of northern New Jersey communities; a tour of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. plant at Kearny; a motor trip through Bayonne, N. J., to Staten Island; ground-breaking ceremonies at the Battery for the Staten Island-Manhattan tunnel; a visit to Roosevelt Park, lunch at Hunter College, brief stops at Queensbridge Housing development and LaGuardia Field, inspection of the R. O. T. C. at Fordham University, dinner aboard train and speech at 9 p. m. at Madison Square Garden.

Under questioning, the President again said he had no plans for a western trip unless the foreign situation quiets down. Asked if he would go to Chicago, he indicated there had been a misunderstanding about any such plans. As long as the international situation continues what it is, he said, he would travel no farther than 12 hours from Washington.

When the situation quiets, he said, there are a number of other places he would like to go, including the Middle West and, after election, a trip to Warm Springs, Ga., for Thanksgiving.

His statement that he would continue four years in office if reelected came in response to a question by Edward E. Wilcox of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

The question was:

"In your Philadelphia speech, you said, 'We are determined during the next four years to make our objective—a job for every young man and woman in America—a living fact.' Does this mean that, if reelected, you will, God willing, serve the full four-year term?"

"Of course," replied the President. He remained quiet for a moment, and then added: "I'm glad you put in the 'God willing.'" pensable man; and surely you believe that Wendell Willkie can and will do more for you than has been done in the last seven years. As a proven friend of the Negro race, I urge you to vote for Willkie.

You millions of young men, who have qualified for the peacetime military draft, have you cause to rejoice? You, who may be about to die in a foreign war, created at the whim of an international meddler, should you salute your Caesar? In cold, common sense, I think you should vote for Willkie.

You members of the Christian Church, why should you vote for and support the man who ignores home considerations and practices the modern sorcery of war mongering?

Labor and the Christian Church are the first victims of the social and political convulsions which follow war and one-man government.

To the women of our race, I say perhaps you can do the greatest part of all. May I hope that on election day the mothers of our sons will, in the sacred ballot, lead the revolt against the candidate who plays at a game that may make cannon fodder of your sons.

For myself, it matters not. I do not fear the bravos of the Roosevelt Administration. I fear only for the people, and for our country. I am joining with Mr. Willkie in trying to do my part, I shall believe, my countrymen, that you will do likewise.

Good night.

Church of the Week

New Trinity Episcopal Rectory To Be Completed This Winter

By Robert Tate Allan.

The new rectory of Trinity Episcopal Church, Piney Branch Road and Dahlia Street Northwest, is expected to be completed this winter, the Rev. Reno S. Harp, rector, indicated yesterday.

Second unit in a three-fold building project, the Early English-styled residence is gradually rising on the west side of the stone church, erected in 1937 at a cost of $55,000.

Plans call for construction of the third unit—a parish house—in the "not too distant future," according to the enterprising rector, who led the movement to reduce the building debt by $6,000 since 1937.

Has Many Activities

The firm of Faulkner and Kingsbury are architects and O. T. and W. A. Carr the builders of the rectory. The church was designed by Philip H. Frohman, architect of the Washington Cathedral, and built by Martin Brothers.

Among the most active parishes in the city, Trinity Episcopal Church now has a busy round of spiritual, social service, missionary, educational and social activities, revolving around the church school, Ladies' Guild, Woman's Auxiliary, Men's Club, Altar Guild, Senior Fellowship, Young People's Fellowship and other organizations.

The Rev. Mr. Harp is proud of his church school, one of the largest in the Washington Diocese, with 325 members and an average attendance of 275. Headed by J. C. Runyon, the school gave more than $350 toward the Joash Chest building fund last year.

Contributed $1,600

"The whole parish, from the youngest to the oldest, contributed a total of $1,600 toward the building fund in 1939," said the Rev. Mr. Harp.

The rector has a dependable organization in his men's club, the members of which rolled up their sleeves, donned white aprons and served a dinner in the church school assembly rooms last Monday night.

Organized three years ago under the leadership of Carl Hoglund, also chairman of the church building committee, the group supervises the beautification of the church grounds. With F. F. Lovell as president, they meet monthly. Every January they serve a roast beef dinner for the benefit of the church.

Another live-wire organization is the Senior Fellowship, composed of young married couples and others between the ages of 21 and 40. Formed last fall, the group undertakes to make new church members feel at home. J. M. Butler is president.

Women's Group Active

An active money-raising organization of the parish is the Ladies' Guild, led by Mrs. Oliver Scott, which contributed $1,500 toward erection of the church and which raises more than $1,000 annually toward the parish's upkeep.

Other women's groups are the Daughters of the King, of which Mrs. Frank Whitney is president; the Woman's Auxiliary, led by Mrs. Horace Browning, and the Mothers' Class, of which Mrs. H. D. Lawson is president.

John Ganfanl heads the Young People's Fellowship, which meets on Sunday nights, and is now studying the work of organized social agencies.

Members of the vestry are Richard K. Smith, senior warden; Edward J. Waterfield, junior warden; Robert M. Miller, registrar, and Joseph A. Ewing, William H. Archer, Herbert D. Lawson, R. Perry Yeatman and Alton J. S. Eccleston.

Native of Frederick

T. K. Burrows is church treasurer; Mrs. Lura Wilson, parish secretary; Mrs. Ruth F. Vanderlip, A. A. G. O., organist, and J. M. Butler, chairman of ushers. Crucifers are Redfied Allen, Richard Haight, Horace Siegler, jr., and Browning Spence.

A Frederick (Md.) native, the Rev. Mr. Harp was educated at Johns Hopkins University and Union Theological Seminary, New York, and since coming to Trinity in 1934 from Christ Church, West River, Md., he has increased its communicant membership from 400 to 625, and the church school from 75 to 265.

He and Mrs. Harp, now living at 7003 Piney Branch Road, have one son, Reno S. Harp 3d, 9 years old. The rector's father is Reno S. Harp, sr., Frederick lawyer.

"WHAT A FRIEND WE HAVE IN JESUS"
. . . JOSEPH SCRIVEN . . .

What a Friend we have in Jesus,
All our sins and griefs to bear!
What a privilege to carry
Ev'rything to God in pray'r!
O what peace we often forfeit,
O what needless pain we bear,
All because we do not carry
Ev'rything to God in pray'r!
The author, who consecrated his life and fortune to the service of God, wrote these words as a comfort for his Mother, not as a hymn. But he consented to their being published so that others could gain spiritual help from them also.

WHO LEADS NOW IN THE GALLUP POLL?

See Sunday's Post for Latest Figures

THE first two Gallup Polls on Willkie vs. Roosevelt showed Willkie ahead in electoral votes. The 3rd and 4th polls showed Roosevelt ahead. The 5th poll—October 18—showed Roosevelt still leading, but by a reduced margin. Has the tide turned? Is Willkie becoming stronger? Will he be swept into the White House on a last-minute wave of enthusiasm, like that which won him the nomination in Philadelphia? Get tomorrow's Post—look over the Gallup Poll figures on up-to-the-minute sentiment, State by State. And then make your own prediction!

For five years Gallup has been polling the Nation. His polls have been checked and verified by 12 elections—National, State and local. In all that time his margin of error has averaged less than 4 percentage points. More important—he has always predicted correctly in these 12 elections—who would win! Only the Gallup Poll brings you State-by-State reports and can point to such an amazing record of accuracy. Gallup Polls are published in 130 leading newspapers . . . because editors know that Gallup's methods are right!

Speaking Of Democracy

Statisticians are once more busy estimating the number of potential voters, eligible voters and voters who are likely to cast ballots on November 5. As usual, they are forced to eliminate an entire city of disfranchised citizens—the city of Washington.

Estimates prepared by the Associated Press place the number of potential voters in the 48 States at 80,528,000. Only about 60,000,000 of these are eligible to vote, however, and the actual number of ballots to be cast is not likely to exceed 50,000,000. This means, of course, that a vast number of Americans will fail to exercise their right of participating in the selection of public officials.

Some will be denied this basic democratic right for lack of educational requirements, for failure to pay poll taxes and on various other pretexts. Only in the District of Columbia, however, is disfranchisement complete. Washingtonians come under a blanket exclusion from the group of "potential" voters, along with persons under 21, aliens, and inmates of penal and mental institutions.

So long as Washington was a small city with a high percentage of temporary residents, this breach in our democratic system was not so conspicuous. But now the District is a metropolis of more than 663,000 inhabitants. The number of local residents who should be entitled to vote exceeds the number of potential voters accredited to 12 different States. Yet this large and growing community remains utterly without a voice on election day.

Enthusiastic party workers estimate that as many as 120,000 residents of the Capital may cast ballots in their home States. That guess is probably overoptimistic. But even if absolute voters here are that numerous, they account for only a fraction of the citizens who should be entitled to join in the march to the polls under any genuine democratic system.

There never was a time when the Nation could justify this denial of a basic right to residents of the Capital. Considering the growth of the city and the present crisis for democracy, it becomes the more imperative that the District be Americanized. Because of indifference in some quarters and because of difficult problems of adjustment, that will not be an easy task. But it should certainly be regarded as one of the essential steps in the revitalization of democracy about which we have heard so much in the Presidential campaigns.

Stating A Truism

Secretary Knox was voicing a truism when, in response to a question at a press conference, he declared that so long as the American flag flies over the Philippines the Navy will be "ready to defend them." Yet it was good statesmanship to have that fact emphasized at this time.

Recent developments in the Far East have placed the Philippines on the horns of a dangerous dilemma. According to present plans, the islands are to receive their independence in 1946. By that time the international situation and the state of Philippine defenses may be such that the new nation will be free of the threat of aggression.

But all present indications suggest that the storm clouds over the western Pacific are moving closer to the Philippines rather than away from them. Japan's occupation of Indo-China has sandwiched the islands between Japanese-dominated territory. And the Philippines happen to be a tempting prize for any aggressor.

Whatever the future may hold for the Philippines after 1946, however, there can be no gainsaying the fact that until then the United States has a solemn obligation to defend them if they are attacked. It might prove no easy task. There are no modern naval bases in the Philippines, so that the defense of those islands must, under existing circumstances, be based on Hawaii. Nor do the islands possess an armed force or air power adequate to their potential needs.

The War Department has wisely ordered the transfer to the Philippines of two of its crack pursuit squadrons. Similarly the search by the Navy Department for new naval bases in the Pacific, announced by Secretary Knox some time ago, is logical and proper. If the islands' defenses are strengthened, and if America's determination to live up to her obligations in that area is made unmistakably clear, the Japanese will think twice before attempting to seize the Philippines.

"It Is Later Than You Think"

What the United States needs is a Secretary of Time!

He should be a two-fisted, 24-hour-a-day fighter, who would be able to make every official in our Government, every citizen in our country, realize that every minute is priceless in the race for proper defense of this Nation and help for Great Britain.

The need for speed, and more speed, is pressing.

Every report by officials considers the Army, the Navy, the armaments of next year, or the year after. Machine tools in a year or two! Army tanks in a year or two! Navy bases in a year or two!

And every minute the heat of the European blaze is hotter—and closer!

We know as well as anyone that machine tools cannot be made by shouting or table pounding.

We know as well as anyone that airplanes cannot be constructed overnight.

We know as well as anyone that battleships do not slide off the ways like automobiles off an assembly line.

But we also know that American genius can accomplish the impossible.

We know that if every official of this Government, every citizen of the country, could spend one night in London, one day in stricken France, if a magic carpet could carry them on a lightning trip over countries where the light of liberty has gone out, the transformation in this country would be electric.

Somehow things would be done. Barren wastes would become naval bases far ahead of time. Blue prints would more speedily become airplanes. Raw recruits would be transformed at double step into the best soldiers in the world. Warships would be completed months ahead of schedule. Politicians would become patriots.

Our peril is so great, our time to prepare so limited.

"It is later than your think!"

A Staggering Problem

According to Chairman Edward T. Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee, Congress, during its present session, has appropriated or authorized the expenditure of $13,106,000,000 for national defense purposes. In addition it has made long range commitments for naval expansion in excess of appropriations, estimated to cost $4,586,000,000. Appropriations and authorizations for all purposes (exclusive of the naval expansion figure) amount to the imposing sum of $23,135,000,000—the largest total ever voted in a peacetime session.

Mr. Taylor's analysis brings forcibly home to every American the magnitude of the task which we have undertaken. It likewise emphasizes the utter impossibility of supporting such budgetary outlays, except for a limited period in response to an emergency.

Of course, these extraordinary defense outlays will be spread over a period of years, so that there is no question of having to finance a $23,000,000,000 spending program within 12 months. Nevertheless, the impending deficits are certain to be formidable. The rate of spending and the consequent size of deficits will depend largely upon the speed with which defense plans can be executed.

A foretaste of what is to come has been provided by the revised budget estimates of the Treasury for the current fiscal year. Expenditures for the year have been placed at $12,058,000,000, and net receipts at $6,367,000,000, leaving a deficit of $5,691,000,000. Returns from the recently passed excess-profits tax may add about $200,000,000 to revenues during the present fiscal year, thus making a slight reduction in the deficit.

Even if we did not have to grapple with an emergency defense problem, we should be far from balancing the budget. Representative Taylor reports that a net sum of $6,982,000,000 was appropriated at this session for nondefense governmental functions. That total did not include any outlays for the Army and Navy—not even the cost of the regular establishments. The main items it covers are agricultural relief, work relief, interest on the national debt and public works.

The stimulus of defense spending will increase taxable incomes and add somewhat to tax receipts during the coming fiscal year. But from present indications the entire cost of the emergency defense program will be added to the public debt as well as part of the cost of the regular establishments. Expenditures in recent years have relentlessly outstripped the rise in current tax receipts. The defense program has merely widened the gap between income and outgo and made it the more imperative to eliminate less essential expenditures.

Efforts to discourage retrenchment on the ground that it would obstruct defense plans should be vigorously resisted. For a strengthening of the financial structure of the Government is an integral part of defense. The defeatist spirit which has frustrated earlier attempts to bring expenditures within the limit of our taxing capacity has become far more dangerous now that spending for defense is imperative.

Mr. Lewis' Bombshell

There was amazement in many quarters last night when John L. Lewis unloosed the full fury of his sharp tongue against the candidacy of President Roosevelt for a third term. Even though his break with the New Deal had long been foreshadowed, his words dropped like bombshells into the 1940 campaign.

Mr. Lewis indicted the Roosevelt Administration on many counts. He fears that the President is leading toward war. He lashed at the Administration for failure to achieve economic recovery and for piling up a mountainous debt. And these points were used to give particular emphasis to his antipathy for a third term. "In all history," he declared, "the unwarranted exercise of continuously vested authority has brought its train of political and social convulsions, for which humanity has paid an appalling price in loss of liberty, in disorder, tragedy and death."

The fact that Mr. Lewis spoke on this issue is probably more important than anything he said or could have said. For it illustrates the wide diversity of forces that are now allied for the single purpose of preventing any man from establishing an indefinite claim upon the Presidency. No other current issue would have united in one cause men of such diverse interests as former President Hoover, the leader of the C. I. O., Senator Johnson and Alfred E. Smith—to name only a few.

In this respect the third-term controversy is comparable to the fight over the President's effort to pack the Supreme Court. After his second inauguration in 1937 Mr. Roosevelt was at the peak of his popularity. It was taken for granted that he could secure the enactment of any legislation to which he might lend wholehearted support. But liberals and conservatives alike from all parts of the Nation united to thwart his assault upon an independent judiciary.

Now the President is attempting to perpetuate himself in office beyond the period at which tradition and sound usage say every Chief Executive should step aside. If he wins, the unique balance in our system of government will be in jeopardy. One of the most important bars to dictatorship will be down. It does not necessarily follow that the President would make himself master of the country, as other popular leaders have done in many parts of the world. But the path to excessive personal power would be at least partly cleared, and the temptation to take it would be strong.

It is true that the Nation faces an emergency. For that very reason, however, safeguards against personalized government are the more important. What is the nature of the world-shaking movement that threatens us? Regardless of whatever else it may be, it is a revolution against democracy. It is the gravest sort of fallacy to talk of resisting this totalitarian menace by weakening the structure of our own democratic system.

In this critical period, moreover, the Presidency must necessarily be a powerful office. We will have to rely upon the Chief Executive for leadership in speeding up the defense program, for inspiration in reviving our industrial strength and for wise conduct of our foreign policy. The national interest cannot be properly safeguarded in such a period without placing enormous responsibilities on the President.

With a third-term Executive in the White House every threat to our safety would produce a double crisis. For at every turn Congress would have to choose between dangerous delays and befuddlement, on one hand, and perilous concentration of power in an ambitious President on the other. The third term would thus remain a baffling issue, even after the election, in the hour of our greatest need for national unity and strength.

That is why many men of many different convictions and interests are uniting their influence to oppose the President's reelection. There is nothing strange in this teamwork. The fact that the leader of the C. I. O. has thrown his influence behind a former business executive indicated only profound convictions that another crisis in American government is at hand.

It is now unmistakably clear that the fears which have driven Mr. Lewis into the anti-third-term camp will be foremost in the minds of millions of voters when they go to the polls on November 5.

"Persons subnormal mentally make a mistake in trying to secure an education," says a college professor who seems to think a moron has no business monkeying around in the tree of knowledge.

Hitler had planned to eat lunch in London September 15, but the event has been postponed indefinitely and we hope longer than that.

A lie may be "an ever-present help in time of trouble," but nine times out of ten silence is better.

The motion picture industry would be greatly improved if Hollywood would stop shooting B pictures and shoot a lot of B actors and actresses.

He Is Grateful

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I trust Mr. Pegler, the unhappy sound and fury, heard Mr. Roosevelt's speech last night, the 23d.

That speech brought me up short when I was on the verge of falling under the spell of Republican propaganda, and deserting the man and Administration which is responsible for my well being today. I am grateful and ashamed.

It recalled to my mind the bleak days of 1932-33, when fear and terror stalked the land—banks on the rocks, the respectable middle class (I was one of them) sitting in apartments with the rent overdue, and nothing in the refrigerator. Working men mumbling about revolution, former service men (I am one) talking about shouldering a gun again for the sake of their families.

Suddenly from Washington a man took charge. Fear was dispelled, courage came into its own, flowing from the heart of this man right into those of the everyday man in the street. Dictator, you say? In a world where chaos reigns, where the old order is passe, show me a dictator as benevolent.

I own no stocks or bonds—will probably never have a bank account over $100, but friend, that 100 bucks is safe, and when I can't produce any more I'll take his word for it that there'll be an old-age pension to ease the last mile.

The breaking of a long tradition is small price to pay for the leadership of a courageous expert at government administration.

They never had traffic lights, Hitlers, or scrapped treaties at the time of Jefferson and the Monroe Doctrine. The third-term tradition is as outmoded. Why not try to keep up with the man, instead of hanging behind and heckling him?

YOURS FOR ROOSEVELT.
Washington, Oct. 24.

Calls For Effort

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Without effort, there is salvation for no nation, nor any soul. And, to most people, genuine effort is the most distasteful of all things; it awakens men's very souls from their slumber, and makes them know they are alive.

All free men should realize that today calls for their very last ounce of effort, as the only price for salvation. Just enough effort to make us think we are getting somewhere is worse than none. For it is a self-deception; and we complacent Americans have deceived ourselves already, to the point of tragedy. What we need most of all things is to resolve to make effort "without stint or limit." We need to accept, and to realize we are accepting the straight and narrow way of thorns and thistles, and the sweat of every brow.

Hitler's cardinal principle of, first, making sure of victory, and then applying the screws upon subjugated peoples slowly and increasingly, means that, once the world falls under his power, all the peoples of this earth will have the screws turned upon them with utter relentlessness.

Therefore, if we do not make our utmost effort now, while we are still free men, then later, under the whip of slavery, we shall be forced to make all the effort that is in us, and for time unforeseeable—and for ends which no free soul could ever choose, ends which must break the very hearts of all who love freedom, ends which destroy the sacred souls of all. This is the simple truth, with no need for exaggeration.

BOLLING SOMERVILLE.

The People's Choice

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is a serious threat to this country that we have a party or a class that dares to harbor the thought of placing restrictions of any kind upon the people's choice of a President. The people have the right to elect a new man in four years, or keep an able man three terms or five terms.

They do not fear one man getting too much power. That is a sham! What they really fear is the working class getting too much power. Our conservatives are just like the Tories of England and France. They were so busy fearing their own working class, they failed to see Hitler. And now look where they are!

England's Tory rule is gone forever. The election of Mr. Willkie would be the greatest setback to liberal government in a generation. But he will never need to worry about a third term should he be elected. I think too that the illiterate pronunciation "goverment" does little credit to a Presidential candidate.

MRS. L. H. McMICHAEL.

For A Debate

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt has refused to discuss his views of the problems of the American people in the open with Mr. Willkie. The White House spokesman and son, Franklin, jr., have tried to justify this action by saying that Mr. Willkie's invitation was made public through the press.

And they ask us of the public if we would invite a friend to our home by sending the invitation through the press. Since when did a public auditorium with a national radio hook-up become the home of Mr. Roosevelt? When did Mr. Roosevelt admit he was a friend of Mr. Willkie? Since when did the affairs of the American people become the private affairs of Mr. Roosevelt?

AN ENLIGHTENED DEMOCRAT.
Washington, Oct. 24.

'What You Are'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At long last, Mr. Indispensable has been smoked out of his hiding place to face the fact that a candidate for office has some obligation to present his claims to office to the public to whom he is accountable, and is delivering five speeches.

Nevertheless, a man of broken promises, of overweening ambition, of disregard for American safeguards such as the "no third term" ideal, a man with the backing of entrenched "New Deal" machine politics, can't convince thinking Americans in five or fifty speeches. Ralph Waldo Emerson's discerning, if caustic, observations, "What you are speaks so loud that I cannot hear what you say," sums the whole matter up.

ONE MORE DEMOCRAT FOR WILLKIE.
Arlington, Va., Oct. 23.

Comedian

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After listening to the President's discussion of the issues before the people at this time, I became convinced that he should be overwhelmingly elected on a permanent basis, with Bob Hope as Vice President, so that, in any eventuality, there would be a comedian in the White House. Dewey's Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a very old subscriber, it was with deepest regret that I saw nothing in The Post of October 17 of the masterful speech of Dewey the night before, as it had so much meat in it that I wanted to retain it and show it to friends. This morning I noted but one-fourth of a column of last night's speech. Also recently I saw a speech of Mr. Willkie printed only in part.

I realize he has lots of material, and I know you cannot print in full speeches of other than the President and the other candidates for reasons of space, yet I do think Dewey's speeches, with their forcefulness, and the great popularity of the man himself, fully justify liberal excerpts at least.

I know that as a Republican you have pledged impartiality at the inception of the publication by you of The Post, yet I see no reason to sway back on the other side.

FAIR PLAY.
Washington, Oct. 18.

'Greatest Show'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: P. T. Barnum said the American people love to be humbugged when he referred to his circus, "The Greatest Show on Earth," which was composed of clowns, human freaks, animals, tricksters and fakers.

Lincoln said that "you cannot fool all the people all of the time" and he believed that fakers and tricksters would eventually be exposed in their full deception.

From 1933 to 1940 the present Administration has tried to prove Lincoln wrong. It thinks that it can fool all the people all of the time just like the Roman Empire tried to delude its people with a policy of bread and circuses in the guise of relief rolls and paternalism.

If the present New Deal set-up is allowed in office for a completion of 12 years, the old rhyme:

What fools we are
What fools we be,
I think the foolest fools are we" should be the theme song of the American people. If the present Administration can keep the tricksters, fakers and freaks in office Barnum will be proven a prophet and Lincoln wrong and we will have a continuance in Washington of the greatest mismanaged governmental circus headed by the most expert ringmaster who ever cracked a whip over clowns, magicians and fakers for the entertainment of a nation-wide taxpaying audience. B. E. ALBERT.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 19.

If She Could Vote

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a resident of the District, I have no vote, but if I did, in past years I would have voted for Roosevelt. But, according to what some of the well-known columnists write, this year, I'm afraid I would switch my affections to Willkie, and not because of any enthusiasm for him or the Republican Party.

Authorities have pointed out that the European countries now dominated by Hitler were led by men who wasted precious time in delaying defense measures. There has been too much talk and delay in our own plans for national defense, and, from our newspapers, we find reports that Roosevelt's recent "defense inspection trips" had no foundation. Could he be leading the American people the way the fallen European people were led?

Mr. Roosevelt certainly has taken a great deal on his shoulders alone. I reiterate—I am stumped as to Mr. Roosevelt's actions, and if I could vote, would vote for Willkie.

Remedii Domis

Our grandmothers knew nothing of neurasthenia, hyperacidity, neuritis, psychiatrists and the like, nor did they go to the drugstore to get a prescription filled. They rolled their own pills and compounded their own tonics.

Armed with axe, hoe or knife, they hied to the woods and dug or chopped from the various shrubs, trees and roots, portions of which they took home and with other ingredients from the kitchen, garden and stock lot, concocted some dose terrible to the taste and smell. It is a wonder some of the doses and treatments did not kill rather than cure, for they used everything from dirty socks to sheep droppings.

We have almost lost trace of the old-fashioned home remedies. Although some of them today appear ridiculous, perhaps there were a few in use of value. A great many can hardly be called more than superstitions, any number of which are still in vogue, such as a penny on a black silk string around the neck or nine strings around the neck for croup, or a bowl of water under the bed for night sweats, and a dime on a black string around the ankle for cramp; a leather band around the wrist for cramp; a nutmeg in the pocket for lumbago, or an Irish potato or buckeye in the pocket for rheumatism.

A dirty sock around the neck was supposed to be a sure cure for sore throat, and a favorite treatment for fever was bleeding, a superstition which often proved fatal.

Everyone knows that hot lemonade will greatly relieve a cold or that mint tea will settle the stomach, and for a sprained ankle a plaster of clay and vinegar applied to the affected part.

On the mantel was a cup of catnip tea to keep baby's hives broken out. Some mothers used an onion tea made by sweetening the juice from a roasted onion, and they always gave a little warm toddy for the colic, and sometimes blackberry briar root juice.

A spring tonic was made by filling a bucket about one-third with the tar from a lightwood splinter, every morning fresh water being poured over it, from which the family was required to drink. Or maybe it was a handful of cinders from the blacksmith shop, over which vinegar was poured and taken before each meal. A cough syrup of molasses, with vinegar and butter, cooked down until thick, was a delicious dose.

Collard leaves bound over the eyes for sore eyes was a sure cure, the efficacy of which has been proven by the movie stars who have used collard leaves in the treatment of klieg eyes, a condition brought on by the intense studio lights.

Shuck tea was used to break out the measles. This was made by boiling corn shucks and drinking the water while it was hot, and sheep droppings boiled was also fine for the measles if drunk like a tea. Sage tea will sweat off fever, and a mixture of sulphur and syrup is a good blood purifier, while the grease from a newspaper burned on a plate is said to be a cure for ringworm. Certainly an inexpensive cure. Fat meat, it seems, is good for more than boiling in cabbage. It will draw out splinters, just as octagon soap and sugar will draw inflammation.

You might try fish brine for rheumatism. Sounds salty enough. If this doesn't work, red pepper and fresh hog's lard mixed with grease from a cup of fried fish bait will do the job.

Vinegar poured over rusty nails is a fine spring tonic, but not as palatable as pine tea or sassafras tea as a blood purifier. For the earache a little breast milk on a piece of wool cloth in the ear was a sure cure, and mare's milk is excellent for the whooping cough—if you can find the mare. If a little marrow from the hog jowl, melted and dropped in the ear does not relieve earache, it will surely cure the mumps. And if you wake up with a breaking out between the fingers, with an itching sensation, you've got it—seven years itch. Begin to drink a tea from the bark of the elder bush and grease with sulphur and lard for nine successive nights, wearing the same clothes during the treatment.

However, if you would ward off all diseases, just wear a little asafetida around the neck, or take a small pill of it. If it doesn't kill, it will surely cure.

For bilious colic there's no better remedy than West Indian rum, West Indian molasses, hog's lard and the urine of beasts. Simmer well together. This composition will seldom fail of performing an effectual cure for life—if the patient does not die while the ingredients are being assimilated.

Behind Egg-Throwing

IT HAS COME to the attention of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt that eggs, wastebaskets and other missiles have been thrown at Wendell Willkie, and she has deplored this violence without discovering what caused it. So I raise my hand to teacher and step into the aisle to state my idea.

I begin by noting that both of the individuals who have been caught throwing dangerous objects at the Republican candidate for President have been connected with the relief organizations whose members, generally, have been asked to believe that they owe their benefits not to their fellow citizens, who pay the taxes to support them, but to President Roosevelt and the Social Democratic Party, which now tends sharply toward national socialism, with small variations.

It should be observed, too, that there is an element of Americans on President Roosevelt's side of the campaign who actually think that Mr. Willkie or any other American has a hell of a nerve to run for President as long as Mr Roosevelt wants the job. These people have convinced themselves that any truthful criticism of the President or the Administration is akin to treason to the United States, and, believing this, they naturally detest as a traitor any man who has the effrontery to oppose the President's ambition.

THE "EGG THROWING" actually started a long time ago and has been engaged in by the President himself, Harold Ickes and Charlie Michelson, the silent lobbyist, or public relations consultant, of the rich Crosley Radio Co., the only paid corporation consultant who ever had the gall to maintain his headquarters openly not only in the White House but in the very office of the President. President Roosevelt has said so often that those who opposed various parts of his changing and always unexpected program are tories, copperheads, economic royalists and princes of privilege that he has created a class hatred in those who have been kept on relief and in economic slavery to his Administration and a belief among them that the rest of the people are not much good, have no rights and exist only to provide Mr. Roosevelt with the means of supporting them indefinitely in the bondage which they find not too uncomfortable.

They are mistaken in this, for the fact is that the rest of the Americans admit no social or political inferiority to the President's egg throwers and will stand just so much of it and no more. The fact that a man or woman is on relief—one way or another—is a matter of regret to the rest of the citizens, but that does not mean that they will permit anyone to kick them or their candidate around at will.

AND IT IS NOT true that they must be crooked or bad Americans merely because they oppose President Roosevelt, although Ickes, in particular, has sounded this note in speeches delivered between political conferences with such high-grade Americans as Ed Kelly and Frank Hague, whose underworld machines are now toiling for the party of humanity and graft.

It is strange but true that those who oppose a third term for the President, who tried to pack the Supreme Court and who now has a stooge in the office of Attorney General to justify any conduct or proposal which pleases him, have not committed the slightest offense against the proprieties in this campaign. For years they have been accused of bitterness against the President, and some of them certainly are bitter, but they are, on the whole, such good Americans that not one of these millions has done anything dirty or spectacular. Their conduct, notwithstanding their bitterness, has been such as to deserve apologies not merely for the record but from the heart of those who have provoked the egg throwing and heckling on the New Deal side.

I SUBMIT that Fiorello LaGuardia has been the worst mucker on the New Deal team—more contemptible to Americans who believe in the American way than any of those who have thrown eggs, garden truck or furniture.

Caught in flagrant association with men whom he often had denounced as crooks, this arrogant and hypocritical bulldozer of the rising dictatorship tried to strangle George Spelvin, the average American, for uttering a remark which accurately appraised his honesty but which was a lover's whisper by comparison with the dirty repartee which is characteristic of LaGuardia's own political language.

The American Interest In The French And Spanish Negotiations

ALTHOUGH WE do not yet know exactly what is to develop out of the Hitler-Petain and the Hitler-Franco negotiations, there can be no doubt that they relate to matters which are of great concern to all the nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Thus we do not know just what Hitler is asking the helpless Vichy government to do. But we do know that he exercises the power of life and death over the French people, that the flower of their army are his prisoners, that he can starve the civilian population, and that by means of his army of occupation and his secret police he can subject any French official at home or abroad to the cruelest penalties by threatening him directly or, if he is out of reach, his family. Only men whose heroism was that of the martyrs could resist him, and the men of Vichy are not men of that sort. The position of the Spaniards is not much better. The Nazi motorized divisions are on their undefended frontier and the Nazi police are masters of some, though probably not yet of all, the principal centers of population in Spain.

The question of what France and Spain will do is, therefore, not a question of what they wish to do, what national honor and their vital interests would require them to do. It is a question of what military use the Axis can make of them. And since the war in its present phase is, like the later phases of the Napoleonic wars, a struggle between land power and sea power, it is obvious that what the Axis is seeking from France and Spain is, at least primarily, the reinforcement of its sea power. Unable to meet the British navy in battle, the Axis is using its military supremacy on the continent to get hold of the Mediterranean and the Atlantic bases and of the narrow waters at Gibraltar, Suez, and the Dardanelles—which are the geographical key to sea power in that part of the world. If, in addition, they can take possession of the considerable remains of the French navy, so much the better from their point of view. As everyone but the deluded men of Vichy foresaw when France capitulated, Hitler is scrapping all the solemn engagements of the Armistice and is exploiting his victory over France in order to make himself stronger as against the British navy.

NO STUDENT of the problem of American naval defense will have the least doubt that directly and indirectly, we are very much affected by this affair. With Japan, Germany, and Italy bound together in a ten-year offensive and defensive alliance, we must necessarily think always of the total naval power of this triple alliance. If, for example, the British navy loses ships in the Mediterranean, she can send less ships to Singapore and Japan becomes correspondingly stronger in the Far East; if, on the other hand, Italy were knocked out in the Mediterranean or Japan were pinned down decisively in the Pacific, the security of the control of the Atlantic Ocean would at once be enormously improved. For the British would then have more ships free to operate in the Atlantic.

The weakening of the British naval position weakens our naval position. No one has said this more plainly than did Mr. Willkie in his acceptance speech when he declared that "we must honestly face our relationship with Great Britain. We must admit that the loss of the British fleet would greatly weaken our defense. This is because the British fleet has for years controlled the Atlantic, leaving us free to concentrate in the Pacific. If the British fleet were lost or captured, the Atlantic might be dominated by Germany, a power hostile to our way of life, controlling in that event most of the ships and the shipbuilding facilities of Europe. This would be a calamity for us. We might be exposed to an attack on the Atlantic. Our defenses would be weakened until we could build a Navy and air force strong enough to defend both coasts. Also, our foreign trade would be profoundly affected. That trade is vital to our prosperity. If we had to trade with a Europe dominated by the present German trade policies, we might have to change our methods to some totalitarian form. This is a prospect that any lover of democracy must view with consternation."

THIS, SURELY, is also the view of the President, and it follows that if out of the Hitler-Petain and Hitler-Franco negotiations there develop acts which weaken British sea power and reinforce the Triple Alliance, compensating measures will have to be taken by the United States to restore the balance of naval forces in the world. On the most important of these measures there is now wide agreement. "We must," as Mr. Willkie declared at San Francisco and repeatedly since that speech, "send, and we must keep sending, aid to Britain, our first line of defense and our only remaining friend." For as long as Britain stands and as long as her power of defense and offense in the British Isles grows greater, the Mediterranean and even the Far Pacific remain secondary theaters of war.

But there are other measures which it may be necessary to take in our own immediate interest, and in the common interest of British and American sea power. The French possessions in this hemisphere, particularly Martinique and French Guiana, have a certain nuisance value to the Axis and, potentially, a considerable value. As long as they are under the orders of the Vichy government which is under the orders of Hitler, it is necessary for the British and ourselves or both of us to employ ships, planes, and a lot of energy watching them. Under the Act of Panama, under the Monroe Doctrine, under the necessities of our own defense, we are justified in calling for a showdown in which these French possessions either declare their independence of Vichy or submit to protective custody by the United States until there is again a free and friendly government in France. There are too many things to worry about without having to worry about these French possessions in this hemisphere. There is no reason why we should tolerate in the Caribbean the presence of any power which can not be trusted implicitly.

BUT AN EVEN more serious practical question will confront us if it should transpire that the Vichy government and Gen. Franco have been forced to give the Axis military possession of Spain, and therefore Portugal, and of the west coast of Africa including Dakar. As anyone who looks at the map can see, Dakar is much nearer to South America than any base which the United States possesses; moreover, from Dakar naval and air forces could control the approaches to Brazil, the Argentine, and Uruguay. Not only that but in the Atlantic there are the Spanish Canary Islands and the Portuguese islands of the Azores and the Cape Verdes. Certain of these islands are nearer to our Atlantic coast than Hawaii is to the Pacific coast, and we cannot afford to see them fall into the hands of any strong and aggressive power.

Theoretically, the imaginary line which separates the Western and Eastern Hemispheres runs through the archipelago of the Azores; strategically, the Azores are one of the most important stepping stones, as the transatlantic clipper demonstrates, from Europe to America. We must, therefore, ask ourselves whether it may not be necessary to declare that the islands of the Atlantic are included within the Act of Panama, the Monroe Doctrine, and the necessities of hemisphere defense. For it may be a great deal safer to prevent these islands from falling into other hands than to deal with the consequences if they have already fallen.

ONE REASON FOR AMERICAN CONCERN

in negotiations between Adolf Hitler and Marshal Petain, says Walter Lippmann, is the West African port of Dakar, shown above. Mr. Lippmann holds a serious practical question would confront us if France should have to give Germany military possession of this naval stronghold, which is nearer to South America than any United States base

President Wallace?

By Mark Sullivan

No Mortal Is Sure of 4-Year Term

AT PRESIDENT Roosevelt's press conference an unusual question was asked. It was: whether Mr. Roosevelt, if elected, will serve out the entire term of four years. Mr. Roosevelt's reply, delivered quickly, was, "Of course." Instantly, of his own initiative, as if he saw usefulness in the answer, he added that his answer could be quoted. Apparently Mr. Roosevelt knew this question was in the minds of many persons, and felt it might be a disadvantage to him, unless authoritatively answered—and answered as he answered it.

It is doubtful if any candidate for President was ever asked that question before. For its emergence at this time, there are several reasons. One is a rumor or surmise, partly in print, partly by word-of-mouth, that Mr. Roosevelt, if reelected, and especially if the European situation quiets down, would resign, turning the White House over to his running mate, Mr. Henry A. Wallace.

In support of this suggestion, it is pointed out that Mr. Roosevelt took especial pains to have the Democratic National Convention name Mr. Wallace for Vice President. This, standing alone, may not have as much significance as is attributed to it. It is not infrequent, indeed it is rather the rule, that a nominee for President should practically choose his running mate—certainly it is the rule that a convention consults, and ordinarily defers to, the Presidential nominee. True, in the present case of Mr. Roosevelt, it was not merely a matter of the Democratic Convention consulting him. The fact is Mr. Roosevelt forced the nomination of Mr. Wallace on a clearly unwilling convention.

NATURALLY THE possibility of a Vice President becoming President is increased in the case of a third term. Any President, any person, is less likely to live 12 years than eight. Even under normal conditions, since the Civil War, two Presidents have failed to serve a full eight years; two more have failed to live a full first term. To assume that any President will live for a full 12 years following his first election runs counter to much actuarial experience.

This general condition, however, is not the whole, or even the main cause of speculation about the possibility of Mr. Wallace becoming President. The speculation that is rife has to do with Mr. Wallace's qualifications for the Presidency—especially personal traits which either he has or which are attributed to him. It is not merely the judgment, expressed by Mr. Raymond Moley that "not even Mr. Wallace's closest friends impute to him any marked administrative capacity . . . Mr. Wallace has a special affinity for theorists." It is not merely that, as Gen. Johnson warns, "we may be buying a pig in a poke for President of the United States."

Gen. Johnson alludes to a point frequently talked about when he says that Mr. Wallace "is a mystic. . . . He is a stargazer of many cults." The word "stargazer" as used in connection with Mr. Wallace, has more than its ordinary colloquial meaning of a man with his head in the clouds. The current talk is to the effect that Mr. Wallace has a large and concrete interest in astrology. Mr. Wallace knows this talk about him exists. After a casual printed allusion to it in Time, Mr. Wallace wrote a reply, which Time printed:

"IN THE CASE OF astrology, I was interested in the possible effect of the moon and the planets on weather. I obtained, therefore, the heliocentric longitudes of the planets from the Naval Ephemerises and the geocentric longitudes from an Astrological Ephemeris . . . Was it possible that the angle of the planets to the earth might determine weather, or was it more probable that the angle to the sun might determine weather? I was never able to prove either one definitely."

So far, Mr. Wallace expresses interest in astrology in the scientific sense, such as any scholar might have. Mr. Wallace goes on to allude to astrology in the popular sense, as a guide to life:

"When the subject of astrology has been brought up, I have argued that a belief in astrology as a guide to life would lead to a fatalism that might cause many individuals to accept hard times as the foreordination of the stars, instead of struggling to master their fates."

As thus pictured by Mr. Wallace himself, his interest in astrology as a guide to life, is purely objective. He implies that he rejects astrology, rather than accepts it.

Bygone Elections

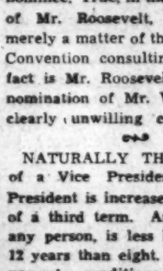
Republican Rip Tide

PROTRACTED illness of President Wilson, dissension in his Cabinet and rejection of his League of Nations plan adopted at the Paris Peace Conference following the World War put the Democrats on the defensive in the election of 1920.



When the Republican convention met in Chicago on June 8, Senator Penrose, boss of the party, was sick at home in Philadelphia.

HARDING

The most mentioned candidates were Gen. Leonard Wood, Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, an irreconcilable opposed to the League of Nations, and Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois.

AFTER SEVEN ballots, Senator Penrose telephoned an order that Senator Warren G. Harding, of Ohio, be nominated. He was named on the tenth ballot. Calvin Coolidge, then Governor of Massachusetts, was picked for Vice President. Senator Johnson declined to take second place and so lost his chance to be President.

At the Democratic convention in San Francisco on June 28 the principal contenders were William G. McAdoo, then of New York; A. Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania, and James M. Cox, Ohio publisher. It took 44 ballots to select Cox as the nominee. Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated for Vice President.

Eugene Debs, serving a ten-year sentence in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta for violation of the Espionage Act, was nominated for President by the Socialists.

Harding and Coolidge won by a landslide. They had 16,181,280 votes, giving them a plurality of 7,039,539 over Cox and Roosevelt's 9,141,750. Debs polled over 1,000,000 votes. President Harding died on August 2, 1923, and Coolidge became President.

All Done by Mirrors

(Under the Hatch Act, while a Federal employe may not contribute to the campaign funds, it is all right for friends and relatives to do so, a lawyer has ruled.)

The Hatch Act is a splendid law—
On us it can depend;
No worker can come through with dough
Unless he has a friend;
For honest politics we stand—
Our whole support we give;
So if you wish to help our cause
Dig up a relative!

II

The law is a long-needed act—
Our faith in it is huge;
We would not think of flaunting it
Except by subterfuge;
We are behind it—yes we are!
It makes for honest polls,
So never, never dodge it, boys,
Except through legal holes!

III

The Hatch Act has nobility—
We helped to put it through;
(In case you care to send a check
Just sign it Uncle Lew);
No officeholder's dough we seek—
'Twould be against the law,
So slip it to us through your son,
Your aunt or paw or maw.

IV

We know the act from end to end—
Boy, how we've studied it!
Our lawyer, who is very keen,
Has read it, bit by bit;
He finds precisely as we though—
You cannot give a dime
Unless it comes through Sister Sue
Or maybe Cousin Sime.

V

We are for morals extra pure—
We scorn all things unclean;
We talk the loftiest of talk—
Our wings have such a sheen!
The Moral Climate is our babe—
To foes we cry "For shame!" . . .
So, mister, get that money up
But do not use your name!

No Cooperation

This week the Republicans celebrated No Third-Term Day in America. We understand that all attempts to get the White House to dedicate it by pressing a button were unavailing.

Hash lost again at the Jamaica race track on Saturday, and it shouldn't surprise anybody. No hash can be good after it has been around all summer.

Radio won a race and was disqualified for—guess what? Yep, interference, not to say static.

That's Broadway

"Journey to Jerusalem" has closed. Broadway has plenty of room for the "Tobacco Roads," the "DuBarrys" and all the men's smoker attractions, but nobody lifted a finger to save this fine and moving drama of Biblical days. Its closing is a sad commentary on the state of the theater and, to even a greater degree, on the state of the public.

Books And Things

Letter To Lincoln Schuster

Mr. M. Lincoln Schuster, editor "A Treasury of the World's Great Letters," in care of its publishers, (Simon & Schuster, $3.75), Rockefeller Center, New York City.

Dear Max: A great city editor was lost when you, fresh from Talcott Williams' School of Journalism, went into publishing. Or perhaps a great city editor was introduced into the world of book publishing. You took publishing out of the armchair; you set it down on the sidewalk. You beat the feature editors at their own game.

You abetted and perhaps sometimes restrained by your slower-moving but not slower-thinking partner, Dick Simon, ranged the world from crossword puzzle books through Eddie Cantor and Peter Arno to Einstein, Schnitzler and Beethoven. You startled yourself with the success of "The Story of Philosophy" and went on with "The Story of Religion" and "The Story of Civilization," covering quite a lot of territory. You published "Men of Art," "Men of Music," "Men of Mathematics" and "Men of Wealth." You told the public "How to Read a Book," "How to Raise a Dog," "How to Think Straight," "How to Torture Your Friends," "How to Play Winning Checkers," "How to Start Housekeeping," "How to Improve Your Memory," and "How to Win Friends and Influence People."

You explained "The Art of Happiness," "The Art of Friendship" and "The Art of Printing." You told your public "What Every Woman Should Know About an Auto" and "What Shall We Name the Baby?" You gave it "A Marriage Manual" and "The Technique of a Love Affair," and analyzed for it "The Drift of Civilization." You have offered recipes for better golf, better photography and for "Fun in Bed." You fooled book clubs into adopting the preposterous "Trader Horn" and Joan Lowell, and you also published "Bambi" and "God's Angry Man." You called one book "The Horse That Could Whistle Dixie" and another "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" and you struck your true pace with "I Can Get It for You Wholesale." You did not do so well with Charles Dickens' "Life of Our Lord," but the religious page came into its own when you conceived the title "The Bible Designed to Be Read as Living Literature."

AND NOW YOU have published your own "Story of Mankind," though, since Hendrik Van Loon had given that title to another publisher before he came to you, you had to call your book "A Treasury of the World's Great Letters, From Ancient Days to Our Own Time, Containing the Characteristic and Crucial Communications and Intimate Exchanges and Cycles of Correspondence of Many of the Outstanding Figures of World History, and Some Notable Contemporaries, Selected, Edited and Integrated With Biographical Background and Historical Settings and Consequences by M. Lincoln Schuster."

Lest anyone mistake your intention to offer a tabloid record of mankind from Alexander the Great to Mencken and Morley and Thomas Mann, you have added to your chronological table of contents a series of departmental headlines beginning, inevitably, with "love letters" and running through the scandal pages ("letters of controversy, hatred and enmity"), the straight new stories ("letters about turning points of history" and "letters about revolution") to the high-brow pages ("letters about art . . . music . . . poetry . . . philosophy"), "letters about religion," "letters about science" (an up-to-date touch, that) and the obit page ("letters written on the eve of death" and "letters of condolence").

Any competent newspaperman can cull the best of the news bulletins and paste them together in some semblance of news. Any critic could make a fair enough anthology. But the art of editing is in arrangement, in make-up, and increasingly in those interpretative interpolations and summaries which are known as "leadalls," "brackets" and "shirt tails."

YOU ARE A good editor, Max. You have collected letters not primarily as samples of great literature but as an anthologist of human emotion and folly; you care for letters as a city editor cares for human-interest news, and you know that few letters can afford to stand by themselves. Even the great correspondence of Eloise and Abelard, to which you give more space than to any other sequence in your book, needs to be set, for the reader, in the frame of its personal history. And, though your selection, your news judgment, is, of course, personal in the extreme, as is that of the best newspaper editors, you have told the reader what he needs to know without permitting him to realize how definite a personality is shaping the news for him.

You do well to apologize for the word "great" in your title. You admire William Randolph Hearst, and there is a Hearstian touch in your pretense that Hearst's 22-year-old letter to his father, announcing his desire to shape a newspaper, is a great letter. It is Hearst's boy-letter; Hearst's name and fame give it news value, as Henry VIII was about Anne Boleyn's "Duckys" has interest only because Henry VIII was the monarch known for his six wives. Diogenes' little letter was a stunt, as was Bill Nye's letter on assuming the postmastership of Laramie, Wyo. Any newspaperman will justify your inclusion of them, but it is a trick to use the same adjective for them as for the truly great letters of Paul the Apostle and Spinoza, of (in their different fashions) Browning and Lincoln and Emily Dickinson, Zola and Robert Louis Stevenson, which you include. Lenin's Testament is a historic document, but you force the vocabulary to call it a letter; Thomas Mann's indictment of the faculty of the University of Bonn is much more than a letter.

It's O. K. Max, though in your introduction you wax as solemn as I have done in this "letter." You talk as if you wanted people to buy your book because it is "literature," library stuff. You have been, you are, you always will be, a newspaperman in the book-publishing business. You belong to the spice-of-life school and you know your stuff. As editor of a fat tabloid newspaper covering 2,000 years, all in letters, I think you're swell. I'd like another volume of it.

Dutch Leaders Seized in 'Reprisal'

Amsterdam (via Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP).—Additional arrests of Hollanders, mostly politicians of the Calvinist antirevolutionary party of Dr. Hendrikus Colijn, former prime minister, have been made as a reprisal for the interment of Germans in the Dutch East Indies, it was announced today.

The number was not revealed, but the Germans arrested 100 October 7 and announced that other arrests would follow unless the Germans in the Indies were freed. Among those arrested today, it was reported, was a secretary of Colijn. 1939.

Tokyo Announces Loss of Sub, Crew

Tokyo, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—The navy department announced belatedly today that the submarine I-67 was lost during a storm August 29 with all her crew, including two captains and a commander.

The 321-foot vessel dived during fleet maneuvers off Tokyo Bay and failed to reappear. Twelve officers, 38 warrant officers and an unrevealed number of enlisted men perished. Search for the vessel is continuing. A submarine of the same type, the I-63, was sunk in collision in the Bungo Channel February 2, 1939.

Most Popular Man on the Campus

THE BUTTONS on her dress are more interesting than the beads to Freddie "Strawn" as Betty Jane Kline, of Bethesda, Md., amuses him before his bath. "Adopted" for a year, Freddie has good care under the management of 14 home economics seniors at Hood College, Frederick, Md.

"NOW, THIS IS WHAT I'VE BEEN WAITING FOR," coos Freddie "Strawn" to his "mother" for a week, Marjorie Duckworth, Scranton, Pa.

Freddie, First Boy 'Adopted' By Girls' College, Has 14 Foster Mothers to Love

Frederick, Md., Oct. 25.—The most popular "young man" on the Hood College campus these days is Freddie "Strawn," this year's baby in the home management house, Strawn Cottage. He is the first boy the girls have taken.

Each year a baby is "adopted" by the college in order that the home economics seniors who reside in the practice house may learn about the care and guidance of an infant, as well as care of a home and the preparation of meals.

Freddie, who is the eleventh baby "adopted" for the college year, is 5 months old, blond, with Clark Gable ears. In one week Freddie has completely sold himself to his 14 foster mothers.

The students, under the direction of Miss Onica L. Prall, assistant professor of home economics and head of the home management house, take complete charge of the baby. A schedule is worked out whereby each student acts as the baby's mother for one week, preparing his food and bathing, airing, weighing and feeding him. The "mother" arranges for another student in the house to take care of the baby while she attends class.

The home management babies are secured either from a social welfare agency or from a Frederick family who are unable at the time to give the child the care it requires. At the end of the college year they are returned to their families or are adopted.

Create Illusion With Flowers

Posies Are Used To Hide Defects, Enhance Charm

Wearer May Change Her Type by Means Of Garlands, Bouquets

By Carolyn Abbott.

DID YOU ever think of wearing fresh flowers to minimize facial defects and accentuate your best features? It can be done. The tropical island beauties may not have the system worked out scientifically, but they do it by instinct. The modern American woman has never acquired the knack, or else doesn't practice it.

Yet fresh flowers in the hair have been a recipe for glamour ever since Eve first pinned garlands in her tresses centuries ago. Maidens of ancient Greece also dramatized their charm with artistic flower arrangements. They wore them in the hair, as necklaces and bracelets. Today you can choose your flowers and place them in spots that will enhance your chief beauty points. This season the florists have developed many new flower headdresses to conform to the contour of your face. Here are some tips for placing flowers to suit your type.

How to Slim Face

For example, if your face is full and round, you can slim it becomingly by fastening the flowers extremely high on your head. For the face that is a trifle too thin, it's flattering to pin your flowers just over the ear. Should your profile be too prominent, you can point it up by wearing your flowers on a band low on the neck.

A round halo of roses, gardenias, camellias or spray orchids gives the illusion of an oval to a triangular face. Orchids and rubrum lilies add height to pompadours and chubby faces. If the face is long and pointed, wear this type of corsage pinned sideways in a shower effect to give the illusion of more width to the features.

Ear muffs of carnations or bouvardia are effective with hair swept back from the face, provided your face isn't round. This style is excellent for heart-shaped, or square faces. Snoods decorated with fresh flowers are youthful and gay on the debutante "agers" but should not be attempted by anyone over 30.

ABOVE—Fresh flower necklace of pink camellias and lilies of the valley (you can substitute orchids, gardenias or other blossoms) is an excellent camouflage for the belle whose neck is too thin

Covering for Defect

If your neck is too thin and skinny, and you become self-conscious in your low-necked evening dress, camouflage this defect with a fresh flower necklace. One of pink camellias and lilies-of-the-valley in a heart-shaped arrangement is ideal for the long neck. Orchids or gardenias would be equally as effecuve. Short, plump necks look shorter with big flowers, so stick to small, delicate blossoms in a single chain. Another good trick for making your short neck look longer is to wear a V-shaped neckline and pin a long spray of lilies-of-the-valley just below the tip of the V. A corsage of this type creates the illusion of greater throat length.

The Blanket Test

You can't judge a woman by the satin on her sofa or the flowers on her teacups. It's in the less obvious things that fastidiousness around the house really expresses itself . . . in the soft fine wool of her blankets . . . in the silken weave of percale sheets . . . in the down of her comforters and cushions.

Poised Manner Aids Girl in Keeping Escort

A DEAD giveaway—saying "thank you" to her escort for taking her out! Now he'll be sure she's a "Miss Sit-by-the-fire," unusued to sophisticated good times.

You can't be too careful of your etiquette if you want to appear the poised popular young lady.

You should know it's your escort's place to be grateful to you for your charming company. In saying goodnight, you take other means than "thank-you's" to show your enthusiasm. A glowing "I had a wonderful time!" will sound the right note.

Men like girls who never embarrass them in public by little slips. So check up on the correct thing. At a restaurant you don't break in crudely to give your order to the waiter. Instead you tell your escort what you'd like, let him tell the waiter.

Invited to the theater, you sail regally down the aisle after the usher, leaving your escort to bring up the rear. You enter the row of seats first, too, and walk out first after the performance, unless the aisles are unusually crowded.

Or, at a dance, have the grace and poise that will make you the belle of the ball. Don't say "excuse me" to your partner for every little misstep you make. Etiquette says the man does the apologizing, assumes it's all his fault. And, remember, you never cross the floor alone, even between dances. Ask your escort to take you where you want to go.

Mary Haworth's Mail

All Writers (Save One) Hold Woman Responsible For Making Successful Marriage; But She Can't Do It Without Husband's Help, Reader Proclaims

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have just finished reading your column of October 17, based on a correspondent's question, to-wit: "Must the wife invariably be held to blame when a long-married husband falls out of love?" I feel an overpowering urge to give my views on the subject. First of all, I agree with your challenger, "S. L. S.," that everybody seems to expect the wife to do all the work of making marriage a success.

For some years, I have read everything on marriage and kindred subjects that I could find, and every writer,—with one exception!—places the burden on the wife. The one exception was an article in the June, 1933, issue of Good Housekeeping Magazine, by Margaret Weymouth Jackson, entitled "Marriage As It Ought To Be." I keep that article where I can refer to it occasionally, and it is the best all-around discussion of marriage I have ever seen. . .

The foundation of marriage is love. After that, two things are vitally important. One of these is truthfulness. Husband and wife should tell each other everything,—and I mean EVERY thing. My husband and I made that resolve when we were married, and I think both of us have been true to it. I know I have. The other thing is: Application of intelligence to the relationship.

The married person must learn to divine what things are important in marriage—in his individual marriage—and govern himself accordingly. There are certain fundamentals that are essential to any successful marriage, of course. And if these are ignored, there is trouble in store.

One of the fundamentals is this: It takes two people to make a happy marriage. The wife cannot do it all, nor can the husband. They must share responsibility. Love can neither exist nor survive without proper respect—which means self-respect and respect for the other.

It occurs to me that I should have defined "successful marriage," as I understand it. A successful marriage is one in which mutual affection grows deeper and stronger with the years,—and a relationship which embraces absolute trust, complete truthfulness and ever-growing respect, each for the other, not only as husband or wife, but as a person. . .

To go back a bit, I'd like to comment on something you said, namely: that you can offer little apology for a woman's tiring of her marriage partner, "just because," and thinking it would be interesting to take a fling at domesticity with some other man. I should say that any woman who has never looked at another man with appreciation or with a sense of restlessness hasn't much imagination. But that doesn't mean she would leave her husband and marry him.

Again, you say that you consider it "a betrayal, of self, of feminine wisdom, for a woman to attempt to pattern her behavior or her philosophy in accordance with the unwritten code of the male." This means, I take it, that the wife must remain always subservient, even passive, if her husband chooses to violate the marriage. What kind of marriage is that? It implies, to me, that the woman is married and the man is free. And while there may be a double standard in single life (the justice of which remains to be proven), there cannot be in marriage. I call it "betrayal of self" for a woman to go to any lengths to "hold her man."

I have noticed, Miss Haworth, that you seem to take disagreement with your ideas as a personal affront. But a good idea can stand honest criticism; in fact, it gains thereby. I think the ideas I have expressed are good, or I wouldn't have gone to this effort to present them . . .

MILLICENT.

Ideal Aim Doesn't Relieve Present Necessity

DEAR MILLICENT: Your concept of "marriage as it ought to be" is admirable. But it still doesn't absolve us of the necessity of dealing with the arrangement "as is." I find your views interesting; have no "personally affronted" quarrel with them; and, indeed, am always grateful to correspondents who lighten my load of responsibility somewhat by thrusting a helpful oar into a given discussion.

However, I must say you seem to have missed the sense of my remarks to "S. L. S." Yet, because it would mean simply repeating myself, in different words, if I were to attempt to clarify your confusion, point by point, I must let the misapprehension stand—unless, of course, you care to reread the disputed article (from beginning to end) with a more attentively open mind.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Women's Page.

Winter Outdoor Sports an Aid In Keeping Figure in Trim

By Ida Jean Kain

WE'RE A bunch of summertime athletes. Come the first chill breeze, we hug the hearth and just sit around and get soft. Then we wonder why we lose our pep and catch colds!

To keep in good physical trim all the year around, we should take a tip from West Point where it is a ruling that the cadets must choose an outdoor sport for every season.

Competitive games are best because they are the most fun. But with our civilized setup, there is too little chance for everyone to enter into sports and we have turned into spectators. That's no way to harden up!

You Might Try Badminton

There are all kinds of outdoor activities you can turn to—but do you hike, play badminton, skate, ski, slide downhill, bicycle, or ride? If you answer "No" to all those, you are probably not in the pink of condition. Why not take up one of them this fall, and another when the snow comes? If you are reluctant to take up anything new, it's a sign of age!

Right now you could play badminton—at least on Saturday afternoons and Sundays. All you need is a net stretched across the backyard and a couple of racquets. That's one game you can play until the snow flies and enjoy it. A good, snappy game for 30 minutes will leave you in a glow and it will trim your waist and slim your hips as well.

Riding a bike is fun and we should do more of it in this country. It probably wouldn't be classed as a sport at West Point, but it is grand outdoor exercise. If you don't ride, you can learn—can't you? It's being taught at the Y. W. C. A.'s.

Or You Can Hike

Or you can hike. All you need for that is a stout pair of low-heel shoes. Just 3 miles a day will keep you in good form and once you get into the swing of it, that's no distance at all! There is nothing like walking regularly to keep you feeling fit. I know a commuter of 60 who gets off the evening train at the station 3 miles from his home so he can walk the rest of the way. He is in better condition than many a man of 40.

My favorite prescription is the one given by a wise old doctor to nervous, wornout business men and women. He sends them out to an old mountaineer's place to look for a wonderful herb that will restore them to health. The old man takes them out early every morning and they search until they come back tired and hungry. By the end of two weeks they haven't found the herb, of course, but they no longer need it!

Don't coddle yourself. Make it a rule to get out of doors for at least an hour a day. If you settle down into a routine with no exercise except walking from the house to the garage, you are going to get gout, dyspepsia, neuritis, rheumatism and all the other isms! Health is the ability to take it—if you sit around and get soft, you can't!

Mushrooms on New York Junior League Menu

A WINTER honeymoon inspired the New York Junior League to present a fashion review, "The Bride's Trousseau in Wool," at a recent luncheon I attended at their clubhouse. The luncheon, given to raise money for British War Relief Funds, had for its commentator June Hamilton Rhodes, managing director, Bureau of Fashion Trends. All of the costumes in the interesting collection had been made of wools, both English and domestic. The bridal gown and those for her attendants—maid of honor, bridesmaids and mother's dresses, had additional notes of elegance with the new and beautiful design in orchids the models carried and the magnificent jewels from Cartier that they wore.

The luncheon, served from a horseshoe buffet table, also held many beautifully designed foods. Baked ham, macaroni with cheese, creamed mushrooms and baked apples were all very intriguing dishes. The creamed mushrooms are just the dish needed to compliment a baked ham at a buffet meal. This dish is not difficult to prepare, but there are several things to be watched when preparing fresh mushrooms.

Creamed Fresh Mushrooms

To prepare fresh mushrooms, cut off the stalks, pare the caps, or brush well if they are fresh and tender. Drop them into a bowl of water which contains the juice of one-half a lemon or a tablespoon of vinegar if you want to keep them from darkening. If the stalks are solid and tender, they may be peeled, cooked and served with the caps, otherwise they should be cooked with the peelings on in a small amount of water, for mushroom stock. Too much cooking toughens mushrooms. Five or six minutes will usually cook fresh ones. With the mushrooms properly prepared, finish the dish in this way.

Make a sauce of 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, ½ cup cream, 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Add the cooked mushrooms to the cream sauce and serve very hot.

Wedding Pastor Should Have Due Warning

ANY authority on weddings will tell you it's wise to plan the floral arrangements in advance. "Yet many a prospective bride arranges such details, then waits till 24 hours before the wedding to ask her pastor to officiate," says the Rev. Edward Randolph Welles of Christ Church, Alexandria. He considers this custom a serious breach of church etiquette—a subject on which he plans to preach as soon as soon as a sufficient number of his parishioners indicate their willingness to "take it." Incidentally, The Rev. Mr. Welles married only 6 out of the 150 couples who requested his services during his first six months in Alexandria. "I could double my salary with marriage fees if I wished to," he admits. "But many couples seem to consider Christ Church merely as an attractive stage setting for their marriage."

As to funeral etiquette, the Rev. Mr. Welles has great respect for undertakers but would much prefer that a member of the family get in touch with him about taking part in the service. "A funeral is an intimate family affair, and an undertaker after all is employed to do a job," he feels. "It is as though I were to have a public stenographer telephone my friends when I planned a party."

CLUB NOTES—The fall program of the Piscataway Road Homemakers Club of Prince Georges County includes a syphilis campaign. Not content with merely distributing leaflets and listening to speakers, the women have arranged with the Marlboro Health Department to hold a Wassermann test clinic. Moreover, they have lined up 30 members of the community to attend the clinic and mean to see that those who react positively begin treatment immediately.

STREET SCENES—A colored nurse noticed her young charge eyeing himself in each show window as she wheeled his stroller along Connecticut avenue. "Already conceited," she chided . . . A woman taking some clothes to the laundry in a baby carriage stopped for a chat before a neighbor's house on Crittenden street, ePtworth. As they talked, she rocked the carriage gently to and fro.

'Service Set' Throngs Starks' Gay Gathering

Rear Adm. and Mrs. Ingersoll Receive With Hosts; Peruvian Contingent Led By Col. Revoredo Holds Center of Stage

By Elizabeth Henney

THE EBONY ELEPHANTS WHO MARCH solemnly across the mantelpiece at the Admiral's House, looked down yesterday at one of the largest service parties of the season, when Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Harold R. Stark and Mrs. Stark entertained at the first of their winter series of receptions.

Receiving in the drawing room of their large home on Observatory Hill, were Admiral and Mrs. Stark, and the admiral's assistant, Rear Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll and Mrs. Ingersoll. Mrs. Stark was gowned in a floor-length tea frock of navy blue, fashioned with a long-sleeved bodice of gold and navy lame. With it she wore a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Ingersoll wore also a full length long-sleeved tea gown of turquoise blue and with a silver and blue lame bodice. With it she wore a clip of brilliants and a corsage of gardenias.

Mrs. Harold P. Gillespie, daughter of Admiral and Mrs. Stark, wandered through the official reception rooms during the tea hour, informally greeting guests and being welcomed back to Washington by her many service friends. She has recently come from Honolulu with her two children, for an extended visit with her parents, and will be joined here soon by Mr. Gillespie. For yesterday's event she was gowned in simple black velvet piped in gold kid, which most effectively set off her blonde curls. Her only ornaments were a golden lily pin and bracelet.

While guests congregated in the drawing room, library, great hall and in the conservatory for punch, by far the greatest crush was to be found around the tea table in the dining room. There the lace-covered and well-stocked table was centered by a long navy-blue plate mirror. Centering the mirror was an immense low bowl of blended autumn flowers guarded by two streamlined silver pheasants, and four tall lighted tapers in silver holders.

Social Leaders Aid at Tea Table

Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Jules James, gowned in black velvet with a matching hat accented by a Kelly green ostrich plume; Mrs. Walter Anderson, whose gray and white suit was matched by her accessories; Mrs. Fairfax Leary, gowned in navy blue crepe with cut velvet applique and a smart, feathered brimmed hat to match; Mrs. Leigh Noyes, chic in all black, accented with a gardenia corsage; Mrs. Stanford C. Hooper, smart in cocoa brown with a veiled cloche to match; Mrs. Roland M. Brainard, Mrs. Alexander Sharp and Mrs. Harry Hill, whose husband, Capt. Hill, is a member of the defense board.

Mrs. Hill, whose black frock was accented with a twisted silver necklace, had with her her niece, Miss Florence Hall. Miss Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Hall, of Bluefield, W. Va., is in town for a month's visit with her aunt and uncle. She was gowned in deep tulip red accented with gold nailhead studs on the pockets.

Peruvians Center Of Attention

Very much the center of attention was the Peruvian contingent which arrived at the dusk hour, bringing with them the newly appointed Air Attache of the Peruvian Embassy, the famous flyer, Col. Armando Revoredo, and Senora de Revoredo. Others with the Peruvian group were the Naval Attache of the Embassy, Capt. Enrique Labarthe, accompanied by Senor de Labarthe and their attractive daughter, Senorita Teresa Labarthe.

Also among the diplomatic contingent present were Commodore Victor G. Brodeur, Naval Attache of the Canadian Legation and second ranking officer in the Canadian navy, and Air Commodore W. R. Kenny, the Air Attache of the Canadian Legation, accompanied by Mrs. Kenny.

Generally assisting throughout the afternoon were Mrs. Charles Wellborn, jr., wife of Lieut. Comdr. Wellborn, who is aide to Admiral Stark, and Mrs. William R. Smedberg 3d, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Smedberg, who is also an aide to the admiral. Mrs. Wellborn was chic in a black frock accented with pearls, and Mrs. Smedberg had chosen a softly draped juniper green crepe for the occasion.

Officiating at the punch bowl in the conservatory were Mrs. Robert W. Berry, wife of Commander Berry; Mrs. Charles McGuire, Mrs. H. W. Gordon and Mrs. Malcolm T. Munger.

Others noted during the afternoon included Capt. and Mrs. Kelly Turner, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. R. H. Bennett, Capt. C. M. Cook, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. F. M. Douglass, Ensign Yelverton Garnett and hundreds more.

Betty Shouse, Cuthbert Train To Wed Today

Out-of-town guests, here for the wedding today of Miss Betty Shouse and Cuthbert Train were swept on their arrival yesterday to two parties in honor of the couple. One was the tea given by Mrs. Peter Belin, who flew from Miami to be a bridesmaid, and the other was a dinner held by Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse for the bridal party.

Mr. and Mrs. Shouse's party took place at their home on O Street in Georgetown. The high-ceilinged rooms, with their green-tinted walls, were lit by candles and decorated with masses of white chrysanthemums and palms. The hostess chose for the occasion a red gown. Guests were seated at small tables. During and after dinner a trio from the National Symphony Orchestra played.

Among the out-of-towners present were Mrs. Sidney Smith, of Omaha, Mr. Shouse's sister; Mr. and Mrs. Maitland A. Edey, of Brookville, Long Island; William Clark, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. William L. Savage, of Morristown, N. J., and R. Stewart Rauch, jr., of Villanova, Pa.

Admiral and Mrs. Charles R. Train, parents of the bridegroom, were present, and Miss Joan Dodd, daughter of the hostess, was a guest. Others included Duncan Groner, Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet, Mrs. Corcoran Thom, jr., George Agnew, of New York; Mrs. Charles Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. Gale McLean, Miss Mary Bradley, Miss Anne Perin, Francis McIlhenny, Dr. Hilbert Sabin, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Snyder, Harry Covington, Mrs. Belin, Mrs. Adams Berry, Miss Laura Tuckerman, Miss Marion Shouse, James West, Shirley Ewing and William McComb.

Mr. and Mrs. Gale McLean will entertain at luncheon today before the ceremony and Amory Lawrence will be host at cocktails prior to the luncheon.

Mrs. Ward Gives Luncheon in Honor Of Frances Lindsey

Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward entertained at luncheon yesterday in honor of her house guest, Mrs. Frances Allen Lindsey, who formerly lived in the Virginia hunting country and now makes her home in Florida. Mrs. Lindsey visited friends in New York and Virginia before coming to Washington. She will be here for several days, later accompanying Mrs. Ward by motor to Florida.

Guests at the luncheon included Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Frank J. Morrow, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Prew Savoy, Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Mrs. Southgate Morrison, Mrs. John Oliver La Gorce, Mrs. Fred Britten, Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty.

The company gathered at the hostess' Massachusetts Avenue home and then went on to the Shoreham Hotel for luncheon.

Maffetts Mark First Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. C. Maffett, of Arlington Va., celebrated their first wedding anniversary last evening at the Wardman Park. Mrs. Maffett is the former Miss Lorraine Maust.

Among the guests were the Misses Lillian Wainwright, Alice M. Digges, Patsy Tompkins, Heldreth Friedli and Mabel Maffett, who were members of the wedding party.

White House to Hold First State Reception on Dec. 17

Tentative plans for the annual program of state entertaining at the White House are under way, but won't really jell until after the elections, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday.

Announcing that until after November 5 she and her husband were able only to plan definitely up to mid-January, as far as entertaining is concerned, she added that so far just one date has been set. This is for Tuesday evening, December 17, when a large reception will be held. It has not yet been decided whether the Diplomatic Corps or a branch of the Government will be honored at the party.

The first state reception of the White House season has always been for foreign diplomats, and there has been much speculation as to whether one would be given this year.

The First Lady will go to Boston this week-end and, at the request of her son, John Roosevelt, will speak at a charity meeting there on Sunday. The following day she will visit the Women's Reformatory at Framingham, Mass., which she described yesterday as "one of the best in the country." Mr. and Mrs. John Roosevelt will accompany her.

Next Wednesday, Mrs. Roosevelt will journey to Colby College, Waterville, Me., to lecture on "Problems of Youth." En route back to Hyde Park by motor, she will stop off in Deerfield, Mass., to visit young Diana Hopkins, who is at school there. November 1 will find Mrs. Roosevelt back at Hyde Park, where she will remain until the day after the election.

The First Lady will entertain at her annual party for "Gridiron Widows" on Saturday evening, December 14. Guests will be newspaperwomen and wives of Gridiron Club members.

When the couple return from their wedding trip to New England, they will reside at 2649 Woodley Road. The bride, who attended the Mississippi College for Women, is descendant of the Carlisles and Campbells in early Southern history. Mr. Owen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willington M. Owen, of West Palm Beach, Fla. His ancestors settled in Virginia in 1622. He is a collateral descendant of Dolly Madison.

Sharing honors at the merry party was Miss Carina Mura, well-known singer from New York, who has sung for President Roosevelt several times. As the evening wore on, Miss Mura was coaxed into giving several solos—of the vivacious Latin variety—and she accompanied herself on the guitar.

The van Houtens' drawing room was cozy yesterday with floor-length red velvet curtains drawn at the windows. Of great interest to the guests was the van Houtens' collection of old plates which had been placed in niches around the drawing room.

Several members of the Netherlands Legation were among the guests. They included Baroness van Boetzelaer, wife of the Minister Counselor of the Legation; and Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg. The countess was wearing a black hat and long black gloves with her powder-blue dress. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., were there also, she wearing a checked tweed suit with a smart little Peter Pan hat; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell, of the State Department, she topping off her black dress and fur cape with a broad-brimmed black veiled hat; Mr. and Mrs. Jay Williams, George Abell, who escorted Mrs. Burrall Hoffman, who has taken the home of Mrs. Emmons Smith on Massachusetts Avenue;

A letter from an old friend in London, which arrived by air mail yesterday, brought details of damage from German bombing which would indicate London has been even worse hurt than press accounts have disclosed. Although it had been opened by the censor, not a word was deleted.

My correspondent, who lives in a lovely house near Ascot, says he has taken in eight children from the East End of London, who sleep on the ground floor while the maids sleep in the cellar for safety, and he and two friends of his occupy the bedrooms in the top of the house. There is little danger of being bombed in Ascot, he wrote, except when the Nazi pilots dump their remaining missiles blindly as they are rushing for home, chased by the British pursuit planes, after they have tried to raid London.

One of these random shots struck within 50 yards of his house, he said, the blast breaking a good many windows and putting the lights out of commission.

* * * *

"When I walked outside, I found my drive was thick in earth," he wrote, "but as far as I could see no unpleasant object hit the house at all, but for some reason the debris went in the other direction and knocked many spots off the church, which is in rather a bad way. Many gentlemen who have been resting there for a hundred years or more found themselves rudely disturbed, and the iron railings of a big tomb landed on top of the church."

* * * *

"THE NEXT morning he was waiting on the Richmond platform for a train to go on into London to his office.

"Somebody said, 'Look out, here they come,' and we all lay down on the platform and put our hands over our ears in the approved fashion," he related. "There was a series of crashes and then another bomber came over and dropped another packet, after which we all got up, dusted our trousers and skirts and in half a minute everybody was back at their conversation, knitting and cross-words.

"I didn't see anybody show any signs of having done anything more unusual than seeking shelter from a sudden downpour of rain. As I walked to the end of the platform and back, I said to myself: 'I believe I am the only one who's scared.'"

Women of the Americas To Meet Here for Unity

MISS MARY E. WINSLOW

Senora de Martinez Guerrero Will Preside Over First Inter-American Commission Session Ever Held in the United States

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

Senora de Martinez Guerrero, of Buenos Aires, chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, will arrive in New York this morning on her way to Washington to preside at the first meeting of the commission ever held in this country. It will open on Armistice Day, November 11, continuing through the week.

Miss Mary E. Winslow, United States representative on the commission, has gone to New York to greet Senora de Martinez Guerrero, who will be accompanied by her daughter and two other young women from Buenos Aires, Senorita Eugenia Fernandez Beiro and Senorita Maria Magdelena Pena Salas. They will stay at the Junior League Club and Miss Winslow will remain in New York with them until next Friday, when they will come to Washington and be at the Fairfax Hotel.

A feature of the opening day of the commission's session will be a banquet, sponsored in honor of the Latin American delegates, by the Women's Joint Congressional Committee, in the Hall of Nations of the Washington Hotel. This affair which is expected to be attended by several hundred guests, will bring together members of the 20 women's organizations represented in the "Women's Joint," as the committee is familiarly known, to pay tribute to the delegates of the 19 countries cooperating through the Inter-American Commission.

Show Ability To Cooperate

Both organizations show the ability of the women of the Western Hemisphere to cooperate for the general welfare. The Women's Joint Congressional Committee is a flexible organization, designed to watch legislation introduced in Congress and keep its member groups informed as to any that demands their special support or active opposition. The Inter-American Commission was formed similarly to enable women of the affiliated countries to unite their influence to improve the status of women, promote international understanding and facilitate an exchange of ideas.

The headquarters is maintained in the Pan American Union and is in the charge of Senorita Minerva Bernardino, of the Dominican Republic, vice chairman of the commission.

Senora de Martinez Guerrero succeeded Miss Doris Stevens as chairman. Miss Stevens, one of seven members of the commission and its chairman when it was formed at the Sixth International Conference of American States in Havana, in 1928, was replaced as United States representative on the body in the spring of 1939, when President Roosevelt appointed Miss Winslow.

Among the members of the commission are three Washington diplomats' wives, Senora de Castro, wife of the Minister of El Salvador; Senora de Caceres, wife of the Minister of Honduras, and Senora de Bayle, wife of the Minister of Nicaragua.

Senora de Lozarda Represents Bolivia

Senora de Lozarda, wife of Prof. Lozarda, of Williams College, will come from Massachusetts as representative of her native Bolivia, and Senora de Levi, of New York City, will represent Ecuador, whose commission member, Senora de Viteri Lafronte, is unable to attend.

Other members expected are Senorita Luisa Martinez, of Venezuela; Senora Maderos de Gonzalez, of Cuba; Senora de Aya, of Colombia; Senora de Calvo, of Panama, whose daughter is a student at George Washington University, and Senora de Castillo Ledon, of Mexico.

Mrs. James Austin Stone, of the National Women's Trade Union League, is chairman of the Women's Joint Congressional Committee, which will sponsor the Armistice Day banquet. Mrs. Emanuel R. Haas, of the National Council of Jewish Women, is secretary, and Miss Mary E. Leeper, of the Association of Childhood Education, treasurer. Miss Elizabeth Eastman, of the Y. W. C. A., is chairman of the dinner and Miss Janet Fish, of the American Nurses' Association, in charge of entertainment.

Members of the national board of the League of Women Voters, one of the affiliated organizations, will be in Washington for their fall meeting the same week and will be among those at the banquet.

Madame Chairman

by Suzanne

MANY of the Democrats who are singing and whistling their enthusiasm for their Presidential candidate in this campaign have Mrs. John Alfred White to thank for their tune, "Roosevelt, We're All for You."

Mrs. White, who is a Texan, has written several published songs, including "Blue Bonnet." Her campaign song was introduced by the organist at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago and has been played and sung at countless rallies and club meetings throughout the country.

The other night, at the rally held in the Burlington Hotel by the Democratic Women's National Council and the Democratic League, it was featured on the program, with Mrs. Walter H. Maloney as soloist, accompanied by Mrs. White. Later Mrs. White presented an autographed copy to Mrs. Roosevelt, who was guest of honor at the meeting.

Monday night it will be sung at the rally of the Montgomery County Democratic Club at the clubhouse of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace will be the honor guest. This time the Washington Quartet will present it, members of which are Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general of the D. A. R.; Miss Lillian Chenoweth, past State regent; David Manley and Frank McManus.

PLAN BENEFIT PERFORMANCE—Today, with the presentation of "Heidi," the Clare Tree Major Children's Theater of New York will open its ninth Washington season under the sponsorship of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

The Christmas play, instead of coming this year on Saturday, as do the other five in the series, will be on the Friday after Christmas. It will be "Seven Wishes," by Maurice Maeterlinck, famous author of "The Blue Bird." The play was written especially for the Children's Theater. The proceeds will be donated by Mr. Maeterlinck and Mrs. Major to child refugee relief.

The league is planning a special performance to which children from local orphanages and settlement houses will be invited.

PLAN OUTING—The Girls Nation, of the American Legion Auxiliary, under the auspices of its chairman, Mrs. Betty Bush, will hold a scavenger hunt and "weenie" roast at Rock Creek Park today at 1:30 p. m.

Mrs. Bush has arranged an attractive program for the girls this year. A Thanksgiving dance is one of the events—planned for November 20, the place to be announced at the next meeting, which will be held at 3 p .m. Saturday at the Y. W. C. A.

LADY MANAGERS ELECT—The board of lady managers of Casualty Hospital has selected Mrs. William H. Harrison president for the coming year.

Serving with her will be Mrs. Ernest W. Brown, first vice president; Mrs. Bernard Wall, second vice president; Mrs. R. E. L. Thompson, third; Mrs. Francis Benzler, fourth, and Mrs. Andrew E. McKay, fifth; Mrs. William T. Carmichael, recording secretary; Mrs. Grace Frederick, corresponding secretary; Mrs. M. D. Duvall, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. Boetch, financial secretary, and Mrs. W. J. Brewer, treasurer.

The board plans a card party December 5 at the Willard Hotel, proceeds from which will be used for an oxygen tent.

NEW MEMBERS—The Central High School Parent-Teacher Association has conceived a plan for taking in members who have no children in school but who are interested in education in the District. An "alumni" group is to be formed which these persons may join, although they need not be alumni of the school.

Needlework Unit Hears National Leader Here

Miss Marion Bettel Gives Report at Home Of Mrs. Thomas Dunlop

Miss Marion Bettel, of Orange, N. J., president of the Needlework Guild of America, came from headquarters in Philadelphia yesterday to address the fall meeting of the Washington branch at the home of Mrs. Thomas Dunlop in Chevy Chase.

The 900 branches of the guild last year collected and distributed to other charities 1,900,000 new garments, she told the officers and section chairman of the local branch. Of these, between 4,000 and 5,000 were collected here.

The "dues" for guild membership are two new garments of the same kind for men, women or children to be donated yearly. Those who receive from the guild or from other charities are provided with two garments of a kind so as to insure them a change of clothing. Questionnaires are sent to various charitable agencies preceding the annual distribution by the guild so donations will meet their needs. Some members give money, and purchases are made to meet specific requests. In addition to the distribution through charities, the guild reserves some garments for emergency cases.

The annual in-gathering will be November 24 and 25 in the lecture room of the Church of the Covenant.

Girls to Observe Scout Week

The celebration of Girl Scout Week will start with a mass attendance at Vesper services at the Washington Cathedral at 4 p. m. Sunday.

Girl Scout Week, October 27 to November 3, represents seven service days, each of which illustrates a phase of the Girl Scout program of activities. Monday is homemaking day; Tuesday, arts and crafts; Wednesday, out-of-doors; Thursday, international friendship and Juliet Lowe's birthday (she was born on Holloween); Friday, citizenship day, and Saturday, health and safety.

Girl Scouts of Washington are emphasizing community service and citizenship this year. Thousands of seals have been folded for the Tuberculosis Association during the last week and Girl Scouts all over the city are actively engaged in some community work.

Girl Scouts working for Junior Citizen badges will visit district and Federal offices on Friday.

Mrs. Jean Bennett To Be Honored By Central Union

Religious and civic groups will combine to pay tribute to the 25 years of services of Mrs. Jean Bennett at the Central Union Mission at the annual banquet to be given tonight at the Mayflower Hotel at 6:30 o'clock. Dr. W. E. Paul, of Minneapolis, will be the out-of-town speaker, and E. H. De Groot, jr., the master of ceremonies.

This event will mark the fifty-sixth anniversary of this oldest of the city's rescue missions and will inaugurate a period of growth for the institution. The recently chosen architect, Leon Chatelain, jr., for the new wing to the building, will be present with Mrs. Chatelain and Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Clark, jr. The present building of the mission was designed by Mr. Clark some years ago.

Dumbarton Oaks Tour Set Today

The gardens of Dumbarton Oaks, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, 3101 R Street, will be open to the public this afternoon for the third tour in benefit of the Washington Self-halp Exchange.

Tea will be served on the terrace and a group of charming young ladies, headed by Miss Marilynn Himes, will serve the guests. The tour, originally scheduled for last Saturday, was postponed because of the storm. All proceeds will go toward carrying on work of the Self-Help Exchange.

Fr. Dutilly Back From Arctic With Rare Scientific Specimens

Priest Turned Plane Mechanic When Engine Balked

The Rev. Artheme Dutilly, research assistant in botany at Catholic University, is back from a 12,000-mile airplane trip into the Arctic with rare sights still lingering in his memory.

Flying eastward from the McKenzie River Delta, Father Dutilly saw what the Indians call "the Smoky Mountains"—immense deposits of coal on the shores of the Arctic Ocean, a deposit which burns continuously.

Then he investigated some miles beyond the burning coal a valley where the Eskimos told him a grove of willow trees was growing. These Father Dutilly found not far from Minto Inlet on Victoria Land.

The willows had reached a height of 7 or 8 feet. At full growth, Arctic willows are no larger than the palm of a man's hand because of the climate, he knew. The larger growth, in this one spot of cold far northern country, was a mystery soon to be probed by Father Dutilly and his staff at the university here.

In all, the priest-scientist-explorer collected 2,439 sheets of botanical specimens, and many rocks and minerals, along with fossils. One of these latter is coral, showing the tropical background of the region, it was pointed out.

The trip had exciting moments. Father Dutilly had to turn airplane mechanic once on the Arctic Circle, drill and solder a broken motor before he could continue. Again, when motor triuble developed while en route from Victoria Land to the mouth of the Coppermine River, he worked with the pilot two days and two nights without sleep, making repairs.

Father Dutilly left Ottawa June 9 with the Most Rev. Gabriel Breynat, one of two Catholic bishops with ecclesiastical jurisdiction in the Canadian Arctic.

The trip was not all fair flying. Great fogs were encountered between Hollman Island and Victoria Land. Flying, at one juncture, was only 150 feet above water. Mosquitos swarmed and nets had to be used night and day.

Yesterday the priest seemed unwearied. He has been collecting from Labrador to Alaska during the summers and preparing his findings in Montreal or at Catholic University for the Vatican Museum. He has made numerous gifts of his findings to the university here and to the Smithsonian Institution.

Driver Held, Second Freed By Inquests

Coroner Investigates Two Auto Fatalities; Nine Hurt When Bus And Truck Collide

A Washington motorist was held yesterday under the negligent homicide act and a second driver was acquitted by a coroner's jury after inquests into two traffic fatalities.

William O. Proctor, colored, 25, of 1506 Frankford Road Southeast, was ordered held for Police Court action in the death of John B. Williams, colored, 82-year-old pedestrian, who was struck at Sheriff and Bowen Roads Southeast last Monday.

Lieut. William J. Liverman, of the police accident investigation unit, testified that Proctor's automobile apparently was speeding and that it was in bad mechanical condition. Skid marks on the roadway measured more than 80 feet, he said.

Williams lived at 2819 Elvans Road Southeast.

In the second case, Harold L. Hoover, 20, of 12 Tenth Street Northeast, was absolved of blame in the death of Robert F. Scott, 35, of 514 Mississippi Avenue, Silver Spring, who died at Garfield Hospital last Sunday.

Nine persons were injured yesterday, one of them seriously, when an Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington line bus collided head-on with a brick truck on the Washington-Alexandria boulevard.

Injured in the accident, which occurred while the bus was en route to Washington, were:

Virginia Bell, 47 Seminary Road, Alexandria.

John Mann, 25, Lorton, Va., driver of the truck.

Virginia White, 1141 Colonial Avenue, Alexandria.

Caroline Rolraski, Route 1, Alexandria.

Mildred Marry, 1007 Cameron Street, Alexandria.

V. Stebner, 1141 Colonial Avenue, Alexandria.

Bernard Svedlow, Alexandria Hospital interne.

Charles W. Lacey, sr., 54, 506 Cameron Street, Alexandria.

Vernon W. Loving, 32, driver of the bus, 651 Lexington Place Northeast.

Taken to Emergency Hospital for treatment, all were discharged except Loving and Lacey. Loving was reported to have suffered spinal injuries and a possible fractured skull. The extent of Lacey's injuries were not immediately determined.

According to Arlington County police, the collision occurred when an axle snapped on the brick truck throwing it out of control and into the path of the incoming bus. Police said no charges would be placed.

Woman, 60, Struck

Ida Budd, 60, 2254 Twelfth street northwest, suffered a concussion of the brain and a possible skull fracture yesterday when struck by an automobile at Eleventh street and Florida avenue northwest. She was treated at Garfield Hospital.

Christopher F. Eve, 25, 715 Second street northwest, was treated at Georgetown Hospital after being struck by a car on Observatory Circle. He was injured in the head.

Rosendahl Tells D. C. Legion Airships Are Defense Essential

Lighter-Than-Air Expert Declares Helium Monopoly Gives America Edge On Dirigible's Value as Sea Scout

Capt. Charles E. Rosendahl, since 1928 one of America's leading experts on lighter-than-air craft, last night urged District American Legion members to support widespread adoption of such airships as "a defense measure with unique advantages to this country."

Addressing the opening session of the two-day annual conference of Post leaders in the D. C. Legion department, he called the United States monopoly on helium a factor which gives "the tremendous potential advantages of airships as scouts and carriers to this nation" almost exclusively.

Capt. Rosendahl visualized rigid-type airship as airplane carriers with unequalled speed, maneuverability and ability to carry high-landing-speed planes which floating carriers lack. He pointed out that such ships could span the Pacific in four days, where present clippers take six because of refuel landings.

Col. John Thomas Taylor, director of the American Legion's national legislative committee, told the District post commanders that the national organization is relying heavily on local Legionnaires to obtain a major share of the 213 resolutions passed at the Boston convention which will come before the coming session of Congress.

He called the Legion "frankly a pressure group" where legislation is concerned, and reported that it has directly caused passage of some 52 major bills, involving more than $12,000,000,000.

Watson B. Miller, director of the Legion's national rehabilitation committee, and Carl Brown, assistant director, both spoke on the current provisions for insurance, hospitalization and rehabilitation available to potential selectives as well as veterans.

Miller emphasized that some third of a million claims for compensation are now before veterans' officials, where 20 years ago he once handled all such claims himself.

Maj. Paul Griffith, director of the national employment committee of the legion, addressed the legionnaires on "Employment and Veterans' Preference." National Historian Thomas M. Owen, jr., concluded the meeting with a discussion of legion history.

Two sessions of the conference, also held in the Commerce Department auditorium, will climax the annual meeting today.

Episcopalians Told Natives Will Keep Christianity Alive in China, Despite War

The Right Rev. S. Harrington Littel, Bishop of Honolulu, and former missionary to the Orient, last night pictured the Christian Church in China as "not unscathed, but intact and growing in strength."

He spoke in Epiphany Episcopal Parish hall at a meeting of wardens, clergy, vestrymen and parish chairman of the every-member canvas of the Washington Diocese, which begins tomorrow with the Episcopal Church's general celebration of "Missionary Sunday."

Bishop Littel, who stressed the spiritual unity of the people of Hawaii in his description of that land, was presented by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington. The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, Dean of Washington, was present.

A group of four Oneida Indians from the Holy Apostle Episcopal Mission Station at Green Bay, Wisconsin, now on an Eastern tour with their pastor, the Rev. William F. Christian, sang several native hymns. They were supper guests and sang at St. Agnes' Episcopal Church.

U. S. Tracks 'Q' Fever Germ to Lair

Disease That Struck 15 Health Service Workers Found Tricky to Diagnose

The United States Public Health Service yesterday made known the results of a strange germ hunt, the quest of an elusive microorganism that made 15 of its employes seriously ill last March, killing one of them.

It is now certain that at least three of the victims, employed in the main research building of the National Institute of Health, at Twenty-fifth and E Streets Northwest, were stricken with the little known disease called Q fever. One of these three was the fatal case, a 59-year-old laborer.

Symptoms of Q fever may resemble those of pneumonia, choriomeningitis, parrot fever or influenza. It is a sort of a second cousin, however, of typhus and Rocky Mountain spotted fever which, like Q fever, are caused by microscopic organisms known as rickettsiae, which are intermediate between viruses and bacteria.

Only One Seriously Ill

All 15 cases at the National Institute of Health, research arm of the Public Health Service, occurred between March 27 and May 17 of this year. Ironically, none of the victims became seriously ill except the one who died. Four did not require hospitalization.

"Pneumonitis" was the name tentatively given to the disease from which they were suffering while the investigation was under way. Rickettsiae of Q fever were successfully isolated from the blood of the fatally stricken laborer, a 25-year-old cleaner in the laboratory building and a research assistant, 53 years old. Only one of the 15 affected was a woman.

Often in Disguise

First described only three years ago, Q fever may occur far more commonly than is supposed, probably being misdiagnosed on occasion, since it may disguise itself as influenza or pneumonia.

Oddly enough, not a single case in the National Institute of Health outbreak occurred in that wing of the building where experimental research on Q fever has been going on—and where rickettsiae are cultivated—since the spring of 1938.

Miss Boardman Addresses Colored Unit of Red Cross

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary of the American Red Cross, last night discussed the work of the national organization in war relief work at a meeting of the District Colored Red Cross Sewing Unit at the Garnett-Patterson Junior High School, Tenth and U Streets Northwest.

"In England there are to one military casualty 40 civilians killed or wounded," said Miss Boardman in discussing the widespread need in European countries which the Red Cross is meeting.

She described the work of the War Service and the Inquiry and Information Service, and praised the efforts of volunteer workers in this country.

Mrs. Jessie Reeves, chairman of the unit, presided. Nearly 50 women attended the meeting.

Harper Leaves Virginia Lands To Foster Son

Leesburg Church Gets $10,000; Loudoun Hospital, $1,000

Robert N. Harper, banker and business executive, left the Loudon County, Va., land which has been in his family two centuries to his adopted son, William Jackson Harper, Leesburg, Va.

Mr. Harper left an estate of more than $600,000 when he died last September 23. Probate of his will was asked in the District Court yesterday by his foster son and the National Savings and Trust Company.

The petition for probate said Mr. Harper's real estate was assessed at $566,353 and estimates personal property at $48,000. Against the real estate, the petition reported, are debts of $282,000 and there are $27,500 in other liabilities against the estate.

Besides divers bequests to friends and relatives, Mr. Harper left $10,000 to the Leesburg Presbyterian Church, $3,000 to the Loudoun Hospital at Leesburg, $1,000 to the Leesburg Volunteer Fire Department, $250 to the Metropolitan Police Relief Association here, and $250 to the Firemen's Relief Association here.

D. C. Mother, Told She'll Never Get Well, Kills Herself

Told she was hopelessly ill, a 38-year-old Washington mother yesterday killed herself by slashing her throat and both wrists. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, who issued a certificate of suicide, said she died within a few minutes.

Last week Mrs. Paul A. Caffree returned to her home at 3618 Eleventh Street Northwest from a hospital and yesterday she learned there was little hope for her ultimate recovery. The only witness to the tragedy was Patricia Robertson, 8, who ran to the house of a neighbor and reported, "a lady just fell down the steps and hurt herself."

Fifteen minutes later, Mrs. Caffree's daughters came home, Eileen, 14, from Powell Junior High School, and Helen, 19, from Wilson Teachers College. Mrs. Caffree was the sister of Anne Lyddane, acquitted in the Lyddane murder case in Rockville, Md., five years ago.

996 in District Get Survivors, Old-Age Insurance

A total of 996 persons in this area are now receiving monthly payments of old-age and survivors insurance, according to a statement by Victor Sadd, manager, Washington field office, Social Security Board.

The figure represents the number of men, women and children in the District who have been awarded monthly payments of old-age and survivors insurance during the nine months since monthly benefits became payable, January 1, 1940.

Among those listed are 119 widows, 246 children, 521 retired wage earners, 109 wives of retired wage earners and one aged dependent parent, it was announced.

Blount Denies Threats to Kill Roosevelt

Edward de Roulhac Blount, 30-year-old yachtsman, pleaded not guilty in the District Court yesterday to an indictment which charged that he twice threatened to kill President Roosevelt.

Blount also pleaded not guilty to an indictment charging that he shot Louis Apostolakos, 18, 109 E Street Northwest, the night of August 10, 1939.

Blount remained free on $5,000 bond. His attorney, James F. Reilly, moved that the Government be required to present a bill of particulars on the alleged threats. Justice F. Dickinson Letts will hear argument on this next Wednesday.

14 Indicted In Big Drive On Night Clubs

Returning indictments against all of the cafe and night club proprietors and employes arrested by State police last Sunday morning, the grand jury of Prince Georges County backed up State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., in his drive against lawlessness in liquor serving establishments in the county.

Nineteen of the 102 indictments returned by the jury dealt with the liquor law violators, and one other charge against one of the number grew out of the raid on his establishment. Fourteen persons were involved.

The jury panel returned 31 indictments for nonsupport, 11 for housebreaking, eight for assault, eight for larceny, six for aggravated assault, six miscellaneous indictments, five for homicide, three for false pretenses, two for robbery and two for forgery.

Milton F. Barrett, proprietor of the Dude Ranch, was indicted on two liquor counts and for conducting a disorderly floor show. Emil Stamm, of the Maryland Club Gardens, and Maynard L. Fortune, of the P. & C. Drive-In Cafe, were each indicted on two counts, while Herbert Sachs, of the Del Rio; Louis Rosenfield, of the Rustic Cabin, and A. Mitchell Young, of Mike Young's Place, were held for a single violation.

Employes, all with a single indictment against them, included A. J. McDonald, of the Dude Ranch; Mike Ruiz and Joan Karee, of Maryland Club Gardens; Mary Stanton and Connie Hall, of the P. & C. Drive-In Cafe; "Eck" John Vaccaro, of Mike Young's place; Georgia Mae McVey, of the Del Rio, and Anton Neilson, of the Rustic Cabin. Josephine Grady, alias Hazel Holman, of the Dude Ranch, had two charges placed against her.

Citizens Again Elect Hellmuth As President

Anacostia Head For 14 Years Given Unanimous Vote

Robert J. Hellmuth, of 1213 Douglas Street Southeast, last night was unanimously reelected president of the Anacostia Citizens Association.

Also reelected was Secretary W. J. Tucker, of 1268 Talbert Street Southeast, who has served for 14 years in this capacity. Other officers selected are Mrs. Carrie G. Smith, first vice president; Emery Weightman, second vice president, and Frank F. Tew, treasurer.

Elected as the association's delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations were Mrs. Smith and President Hellmuth.

Members voted to oppose issuance of a liquor license for a proposed establishment at Thirteenth and Good Hope Road Southeast, and went on record as opposing any more liquor stores or establishments in the Anacostia area.

They urged establishment of a bus line down Good Hope Road from Alabama Avenue to Nichols Road Southeast, pointing out that residents of that sector now have no transportation facilities.

Burroughs Citizens

Community singing and a musical program was the feature of the Burroughs Citizens Association meeting held last night at the Burroughs School, Eighteenth and Monroe Streets Northeast.

The singing was led by Rudy Boehs. Selections were played by the recently formed Burroughs Band under the direction of Avery T. Brunner. Edward Hutchins gave a series of readings. Colored motion pictures were shown.

A special meeting of "key men" of the association—promoters of the organization's membership and interests—will be held at 8 p. m. Friday, November 8, at the Taft School, Twentieth Street and South Dakota Avenue Northeast.

Working for Washington

Glover Park Citizens Making Best of a Voteless Community

Lack of Franchise Doesn't Perturb Them; Their Efforts Are Centered in Improving Section's Streets and Play Facilities

This is the twenty-seventh article in a series about citizens' associations in the District of Columbia and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

Serving an area almost wholely residential, the Glover Park Citizens Association concentrates on local community affairs and is collectively unperturbed about the state of the District's government and when Washington will be allowed to vote.

Furthermore, members are well satisfied with their bus service and are not worried about the adequacy of their school and library facilities. But there are other things . . .

First accomplishment of the 12-year-old association, according to President Sheldon W. Fairchild, was a successful effort to get Schneider Lane closed and Calvert Street opened through the Glover Park sector.

"Then we fought for bus service and to get a grade school built, and later to get our local theater. Most of our work probably has gone into such things as street paving, garbage collection and lights."

Meetings of the organization this year are featuring speakers on current topics—last week the secretary of the Chinese Embassy spoke on the situation in the Orient. Refreshments are another semiunique feature of Glover Park monthly meetings.

They are held in the Home Industrial School, at Thirty-seventh and Wisconsin Avenue Northwest on the third Fridays from October to June.

Current problems facing the association include traffic lights on Wisconsin Avenue for pedestrian crossings and new playground facilities for the area. Future meetings this fall will be highlighted by speakers on traffic problems, the Community Chest drive, Red Cross work and periodic talks on the world situation.

A member of the Federation of Citizens Associations, the association last week elected as its delegation to the city-wide organization A. N. Lerner and Moses Wright, its secretary and incumbent delegate.

Heading the association this year are Sheldon W. Fairchild, of 2440 Huidekoper Place Northwest, president, and Moses J. Wright, of 2440 Thirty-ninth Street Northwest, secretary.

D.C. Program Today Opens Navy Day

37 Societies Join In Ceremonies; Observance Will Last Over Week-End

Massed around the statue of the man who said "I've just begun to fight!" Washington advocates of a two-ocean Navy today will usher in the Nation's celebration of Navy Day in defense-conscious 1940.

Under the gaze of John Paul Jones, Revolutionary War immortal called "Father of the Navy," members of 37 patriotic and veterans societies will conduct exercises starting at 12:30 p. m., the first in the land, at Seventeenth Street and the Tidal Basin.

Signalizing the occasion, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox issued the following message: "On Sunday, October 27, we are observing the most momentous Navy Day since its inception in 1922. In Europe, Asia and Africa wars are being fought for world domination. Those wars are prosecuted to destroy democracy and the free processes of trade and culture. The outspoken aim of the military alliance recently formed by Germany, Italy and Japan is the application of pressure on all nations not now in the war, including our own Nation. Our forces at sea are our first line of defense. At this serious time in our Nation's history I wish to commend the officers and men of the Navy and Marine Corps afloat and ashore for their devotion to duty. But I would be derelict in my duty if I did not urge that we not relax for a single moment our maximum efforts to keep the Navy strong, efficient and steady."

No "Open House"

The ceremonies held in advance of official Navy Day, Sunday, will be the Washington substitute for traditional "open house" at Navy Yards and Marine Barracks—tightly shut this year to visitors in the Administration's vigilance against saboteurs.

The ceremonies here, which are sponsored jointly by the Military Order of the World War and the National Sojourners, will feature addresses by Capt. Robert C. Griffen, U. S. N., and Lieut.-Col. George F. Unmacht, national secretary of the National Sojourners. Presiding will be Rear Admiral William R. Furlong, senior vice commander of the Military Order.

While ships in the country's Navy yards hoist pennants in gala "full dress" regalia, the day will be observed nationally tomorrow by radio addresses. Assistant Secretary of War Lewis Compton will speak on the topic, "Building a Two-Ocean Fleet" over the Mutual network at 1 p. m.

Members of Post 17 of the Irish War Veterans of America will join with District Knights of Columbus to celebrate Navy Day tomorrow with ceremonies at the John Barry statue in Franklin Park at 11 a. m.

National Commander George L. Cassidy will lead the veterans at the ceremony. The announcement was made following a meeting of the organization held last night at the Annapolis Hotel.

Interviews Planned

In other programs musical programs from Navy and Marine Band units will be heard as well as interviews with seamen, petty officers, midshipmen, and officers on Navy life.

Climaxing Navy Day will be an address by Secretary Knox to be broadcast from Chicago tomorrow night at 10:30 over the red network of the National Broadcasting Co.

Throughout Monday, drills will be staged in Anacostia's Fairlawn Park. Included in the program, which starts at 8:30 a. m., will be the catapulting of a battleship observation plane from a barge anchored offshore, marching, exercise drills, demonstration of weapons, a band concert and a lecture. At Lord Baltimore Hotel in Baltimore Monday night Admiral Harold Stark, chief of naval operations, will be principal speaker at a banquet.

Margolius to Speak

Assistant United States District Attorney Bernard M. Margolius will speak Sunday morning at the assembly of the Beth Sholom Hebrew School. This will be the first in a series of Sunday morning talks by prominent Washingtonians.

'Christmas in July,' Dorsey Band Give Earle Bill Plenty of Zing!

"CHRISTMAS IN JULY." Paramount picturization of a story written and directed by Preston Sturges, costarring Dick Powell and Ellen Drew, with Raymond Walburn, Ernest Truex, Alexander Carr, William Demarest, Franklin Pangborn, Harry Hayden, Rod Cameron, Michael Morris, Harry Rosenthal, Georgia Caine, Freiks Boros, Torben Meyer, Julius Tannen, Lucille Ward, Kay Stewart and Vic Potel. Previewed Wednesday, October 23. At the Earle Theater.

"Christmas in July," another of Preston Sturges' comedy screen hits, and the variegated rhythms of the Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra add up to a bill at the Earle this week that comes dangerously near being 100 per cent tip-top entertainment—in a light and inconsequential sort of way.

BELL

The film feature is scarcely longer than the Dorsey interlude on the stage, but it is so packed with hilarious humor and touches of human nature that come close to every member of any audience as to take on a quality well above the level of the usual celluloid farce. Into his simple story of an office drudge with an inferiority complex, who thinks he has won a fortune, Author-Director Sturges has poured a steady flow of comedy and wit that gives way to sapient observations on youth's ambitions and their fulfillment just often enough to give the piece body and requisite serio-comic punch.

It all hinges on a slogan contest which Jimmy MacDonald thinks he has won when three of the office pranksters rig up a bogus telegram apprising him of his good fortune in taking down the $25,000 first prize. The head of the firm offering the prize doesn't know any better either, and gives Jimmy the check. Promoted to a better job, with his own office and his name on the door, in recognition of his sudden demonstration of advertising genius and overnight renown, the new-born Croesus elects himself Santa Claus for the whole cheap tenement neighborhood in which he and "the girl" live a sorry life, barren of every vestige of luxury. Then the bubble blows up in his face.

What happens after that, and how, you had better see for yourself.

Dick Powell, not singing a note for the first time in his screen career, to the best of my knowledge and belief, proves what he has long contended—that, if given a chance, he can turn in a better than fair-to-middling job of light acting. His performance of the role of the bewildered Jimmy is far and away the best thing he has ever done for the cameras. Ellen Drew, in the opposite role of Betty Casey, whom the lad always has wanted to marry and support in the magnificence to which she never has been accustomed, plays beautifully as her fiance's chief prodder-upper. They make a competent, ingratiating and lovable pair. And they are handsomely supported by Raymond Walburn, the premature prize peddler; Ernest Truex, the head of Jimmy's rival coffee house; William Demarest, the deliberate Mr. Bildocker, contest judge, who eventually brings things out right side up; Alexander Carr, as a commercial dialectician, who spouts laughs like a geyser; Franklin Pangborn, Georgia Caine, as Jimmy's mother, and a long list of others.

Jimmy Dorsey and His Orchestra run through a diversified group of numbers, ranging from hep-cat cacophonies to the "On the Trail" movement from Ferde Grofe's "Grand Canyon Suite," the best item of the lot for this corner's annual pass. To break up the instrumentalism now and again, the strikingly handsome, blonde Helen O'Connell wraps up the customers and carries them home with "Hep Hudi," "Madame La Zonga" and "Do It Again," sung as a duet with Bob Eberly, the organization's popular barytone. Eberly, on his own account, sings "A Million Dreams Ago," "The Breeze and I" and "I'll Never Smile Again," to the tearing down of the house by the pew-holders.

Added to the band boys and girls on the Earle's new bill are Bob Evans, who would ventriloquize in the Edgar Bergen manner if his material were as good—and it is better than usually is the case, at that—and the Three Fonzales, knockabout comedy tumblers. They click, too.

The only serious note on the program—and it is a very serious note, indeed—is sounded by "London Can Take It," a brief, British-made, pictorial record of the Nazi bombings of the English capital, which is doubled in effectiveness by the pungent commentary invisibly delivered by Quentin Reynolds, American correspondent, stationed in London. The newsreel is the only other auxiliary of an entertainment architectured solely for fun—barring, of course, that depressing and at the same time inspiring reel of devastated London and the heroism of its people.

Betty Not Present

When Betty Field, costarred with Fredric March in Joseph Conrad's novel, "Victory," was unable to be present at her graduation exercises from the American Academy of Dramatic Art, she had a good excuse. She had a job—rehearsing a role in a play.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 25.

NOEL COWARD received a letter from the Atheneum Club—the most distinguished club in Britain—suggesting that, inasmuch as his sponsor had died, he should secure another sponsor . . . He had forgotten all about it, and felt flattered at this invitation to join. He examined the membership list. The only ones listed whom he knew were the playwrights, Perino and Sir James Barrie, both dead . . . Sir Ronald Lindsay, however, sponsored Coward—who thereupon became a member. Noel never appeared at the club except once, for its traditions almost were frightening to him. That one visit was occasioned by the challenge of his friend, Lord Amherst, who refused to believe that Noel was a member. "All right, then," said Coward, "meet me at the Atheneum." Noel never returned, after that one visit to this ancient club, because Amherst—a practical joker who once had worked for Swope on the Morning World—arrived there hatless, unshaven and carrying a copy of Variety.

MEETING: Henri Bernstein, the French playwright who has fought duels with critics, was introduced to William Saroyan by James Cannon . . . "You two should get along well," Cannon stated. "You have something in common" . . . "And what have we in common?" asked Bernstein . . . "The drama critics," said Cannon. "Saroyan cons 'em—and you stab 'em."

BAN: Harry Hopkins revealed this story last week-end: In 1936, when Hopkins was the WPA Administrator, he traveled through Europe and a meeting with Mussolini was arranged. A few weeks earlier Fortune magazine had been banned in Italy because of an article about Il Duce which concerned his life and habits . . . Hopkins had that issue of the banned magazine with him studying the Fascist leader he was about to meet . . . When he arrived at the Palazzo Venezia, Hopkins realized that he still was carrying that copy of Fortune. And so before entering Il Duce's office Hopkins entrusted that banned magazine copy to the guardian who took his hat and coat, for safekeeping while he conferred with Mussolini.

CHANGE: Max Gordon, who is producing the new play by Sam and Bella Spewack, conferred at his office with Sam Levene, who will direct it. Levene made a suggestion, and Gordon said: "Times certainly have changed. In the old days, when I was producing shows like 'Strike Up the Band,' if the director made a suggestion like that, I threw him out of my office" . . . "And now?" asked Levene. "Now times have changed," said Gordon, striding toward the door. "Now—I leave."

ENTERPRISE: Abe Lyman, impressed with the popularity of audience-participation radio shows, is preparing to return to radio in a new show to be called "Darn That Dream" . . . "We invite the listeners to send in their dreams," Lyman explained, "and we'll give five bucks to the ones who send in the best dreams"—but they must be real dreams" . . . "But, Abe," he was asked, "how will you tell when a dream is real? Suppose people concoct dreams and send them to you?" . . . "That won't be any trouble," Lyman assured. "A smart guy can tell . . . Love Among the Grape Arbors Continues on Keith's Screen

A completely novel conception of a successful lover is added to Charles Laughton's gallery of cinema portraits in "They Knew What They Wanted," now entering its second week at RKO-Keith's.

Laughton's Tony Petucci has the figure of a British barrage blimp and a series of chins, but a soul of gold and a heart of butter. And for the first time in movie history (as we recall it), the heroine is completely astigmatic to non-photogenic qualities in her lover, goes head over heels for his sterling character. It's true that Carole Lombard has a brief and disastrous interlude with handsome William Gargan, but it was on a moonless night; furthermore, she lost her flash light and his good looks had nothing to do with the case. Her heart belonged to Tony.

Adapted from the late Sidney Howard's Pulitzer prize play, "They Knew What They Wanted" retains a closely knit story, a dexterous crescendo of suspense and human interest, very considerable comedy values. It revolves about a mail-order marriage, with Tony getting cold feet and sending a picture of Gargan to La Lombard, figuring that sending his own might result in the whole things being called off.

Laughton reaches fine dramatic heights when the amour between Gargan and Carole, with its irretrievable results, is revealed. You will not soon forget the spectacle of Laughton beating the unresisting Gargan, groveling on the floor in despair, then recovering his head, thinking his way out of his problem via a mental approach compounded equally of sound common sense, love and kindliness.

Carole Lombard becomes a different Lombard as the waitress who goes to marry Tony because she's tired of carrying trays and thinks she has the opportunity of a lifetime in the chance to marry "a decent man" with $15,000 in a bank, even if she's never seen him. Her cheapish clothes, unpolished English, are perfectly in character. Gargan turns in a rather fine characterization, too, as the ranch boss who likes all the girls and isn't able to resist the impulse to tamper with the fiancee of his boss, Frank Fay, who hasn't been around the celluloids for too long, is a humorous padre.

The new March of Time, dealing with the achievements of the Royal Air Force, while not so strongly informative as previous issues, is extremely inspirational and has much splendid photography of British air battling. The first term candidate and the third term candidate dominate the news reel rousingly.

'Knute Rockne' Now Coaching On Met. Screen

Film Biography Resumes Its Run; Notable Short Reels

By Richard L. Coe.

There is something heartening just that after these many years of football pictures, "Knute Rockne—All American" should top the score of them all. For this football biography has a heart to it that makes it as sure in its drama as it is in its sport. Yesterday the Notre Dame story opened at the Metropolitan after a run at the Earle.

Of course, what sets any film biography apart from its fictional brothers is its use of actual incident, true fact which may not be so convincing nor so dramatic as the dramatist's invention, but which is far more satisfying. So it is that the great coach's idea for a revolutionary football technique, coming as it did while watching a line of precision dancers, makes a fascinating sequence. So, too, is his discovery of George Gipp, his defense of the game before a board of educational disbelievers and some of his defeats at the hands of that friendly enemy, Army.

As all good biographies do, this one begins with his boyhood in Norway, touches on his father's hopes for life in the new world, allows a glimpse of the youngster at his first game of football, hints of six years' work to save for a college education; all of these things obviously told to wife and friends in later life.

The major portion of the screenplay manages to find more than one climax in his career as coach. There is an early struggle between chemistry and coaching. There is the understanding devotion of a wife and family. There are the ideas as well as the fears which come to him during his fruitful 20 years on the gridiron.

O'Brien's Outstanding Role

Playing a figure personally known to this generation is surely a trying assignment for any actor. The way he talked, how he walked, his little mannerisms and all those shades of difference which set humans apart from one another are clearly remembered and easily identifiable. Pat O'Brien is eminently successful in the part, making it easily the most telling work he has done to date. And it is particularly natural that his conception of the later, better-known years should be the more convincing. It is those years which have been caught from time to time by the magical newsreel camera, from clippings of which actor O'Brien must have evolved the careful interpretation that sets the spirit of the piece.

There are other sincere performances in the film, too. Gale Page's Bonnie is an understandable, affectionate partner. As the highly-valued George Gipp, Ronald Reagan is convincing and likable, while Owen Davis, jr., is moe than acceptable as the pal of student days, Gus Dorais. That eloquent actor Donald Crisp is first rate as Notre Dame's Father Callahan and Albert Basserman, as Father Nieuwland, continues that display of versatility which has made him an outstanding American screen performer so quickly.

Also on the Metropolitan's bill is Quentin Reynold's moving "London Can Take It," furtheer noted elsewhere on this page, and "Service to the Colors," a Technicolor Warner release on the glories of life in the army.

Columbia

It's a third term for "Strike Up the Band," that Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland musical marathon, which opened at the Capitol, moved the Palace and yesterday morning returned to the main stem at the Columbia.

A prodigal supply of musical numbers employs the juvenile duo in this successor to "Babes in Arms," numbers that find the Rooney giving the drums at least three potent beatings and which allow the increasingly charming Garland girl one elegant song, "Nobody," a melodic chant with amusing lyrics sung to a stack of books in her school library.

As has been delicately hinted before, "Strike Up the Band" has but one thing in common with the George Gershwin satirical musical comedy and hit tune from which it gets its name, that title song occupying the final ten minutes of the footage. The arms munitions plot has given place to a familiar tale of American high school life and the things which make such a social order the complexity that it is—in the films, at least. Mother love, brotherly love, a soupcon of boy-girl love and a beautiful kitchen sink scene form its elements.

But in a Rooney-Garland film, it's the musical numbers that count. "Our Love Affair" is the film's top song, but "My Wonderful One" and "Drummer Boy" are also network favorites. There are, further, dashing ensemble workouts, filmed as only Director Busby Berkeley can stage them, a take-off on melodramas of the past and an authentic Paul Whiteman session. June Preisser, Larry Nunn and William Tracy have the other leads.

Bonafide Jewels

For a scene in "Rhythm on the River," Mary Martin is required to wear a lavish display of jewels. When Mary showed up for the scene she spurned the property department's paste jewelry, took from her purse some beautiful diamond clips given to her as a wedding present by Richard Halliday, whom she married recently, and wore the "real McCoy" instead.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

New York, Oct. 25 (INS).—Never in the years I have been covering movie news have I known the whole industry in such a state of indignation as is Hollywood following Robert Montgomery's unwarranted attack in New York. Wires and telephone calls from the Coast literally poured into my dressing room. Men and women who have worked side by side with Montgomery for years are shocked and heartsick over his speech before a newspaper forum on current problems.

PARSONS

Shocking indeed at a time, when Hollywood needs every shoulder to the wheel are his statements that: "Any resemblance between the motion picture industry and creative art is purely coincidental . . . Under the leadership that the motion picture industry has today I feel its functions cannot be properly and courageously performed . . . The present industry control stifles and thwarts the creative elements which it employs in producing mass entertainment!"

Is Montgomery so busy taking bites out of the hand that has fed him for 12 years that he fails to realize that the United States Government itself is cooperating with such splendid patriotic shorts as Warner Brothers are making? What about the industry's concerted efforts to cement American-South American relationships with good-will films? What of Hollywood's great efforts in behalf of the Red Cross and Community Chest? As for the courage of leadership—what about the daring of such films as "Mortal Storm," "Confessions of A Nazi Spy," "The Great Dictator," "Foreign Correspondent" and many others? An industry that has given us "Gone With the Wind," "Grapes of Wrath," "Zola," "Pasteur," "The Long Voyage Home" and many other fine films has to make no apology to Robert Montgomery or anyone else for its artistic standard.

We don't hear as much about parachute troops as we did when the Nazis were on the March in Poland and Czecho-Slovakia, but Howard Benedict has certainly chosen a timely subject for his next picture, "Parachute Squadron," at RKO. It will deal with the parachute jumpers being trained by military authorities in the United States, at Fort Benning, Ga. It will be as authentic as it is fictional, showing the strict regulations the boys have to endure and the high qualifications put on Uncle Sam's sky jumping-men. Benedict would like to get Jimmy Stewart for the lead—but so would every other producer in Hollywood.

Snapshots of Hollywood and New York collected at random: Bonnie Baker's mother is on her way to Hollywood from Texas to make sure Bonnie knows her own mind before she marries Orrin Tucker; Big Boy Williams and Lupe Velez are going on a personal appearance tour after they're married. One of our most interesting visitors at Hartford, a friend of Bob Stack's, is Stewart Barthelmess. Stewart tells me he has been legally adopted by Dick Barthelmess and that he is a student at Trinity College, Dick's alma mater. He is the son of Mrs. Jessica Barthelmess by a former marriage.

Sorry to hear Richard Bennett suffered a heart attack and was rushed to the Queen of the Angels Hospital. However, he was so improved in a few hours they were able to take him back to the home of Barbara Bennett; Elaine Barrymore's newest escort is Eddie Moran. They were at the Emerald Lodge; Lin Crosby, the youngest Crosby son, has been seriously ill; Raymond Hakim and Helen Del Valle a La Conga twosome; their friends hope the rumored split between Dick Green (the song writer—not the actor) and Betty Kern, daughter of Jerome Kern, isn't true.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 25.

Garson Kanin, who directed "My Favorite Wife" and "They Knew What They Wanted," tells a story on himself which proves that even the geniuses of this business are often fooled. Over a year ago a man brought him a script, saying, "Here's a show I'm interested in financially. I think George Abbott should do it, and since you know Abbott so well, will you please send it to him with a note of recommendation?" Gar said he'd have to read it first, which he did, and then told the man, "Sorry, but I can't do you the favor. That show will never go over on Broadway." The man pleaded, but Gar said he couldn't recommend a show to Abbott that didn't have a chance.

HOPPER

That was the last Gar heard of it, until he heard about a Broadway musical hit show which George Abbott was producing, with music and lyrics by Rodgers and Hart, called "Too Many Girls." It was the script he had refused to recommend.

Edgar Bergen is probably the only man in town who has ever been able to get a confidential telephone number out of information. He wanted to call Billy Gilbert the other day and had lost the number, so tried to get it from information. To prove he was Bergen, he spoke to her in Charlie McCarthy's voice. She believed him and gave him the number.

I had the cutest letter from Lee Shakyn, of Chicago, who wrote: "I'm not a debutante, have no royal blood, no relatives in the film business, but during my two weeks' stay in Hollywood I crashed five studios. Watched Columbia's gate; when it was unguarded I walked through, stayed shy of policemen till I learned that they were only working in a picture. Got on a set, someone waved me to a seat 'Spectators sit over here,' my eyes and ears popped open, and I said to myself, 'Visitors' day?' Said nothing but realized that he meant spectators in a courtroom scene. I sat quietly with the extras through the shooting of the scenes, loved it, except when the others got paid and I didn't.

When Slapsie Maxie was asked if the motor noises bothered him on his recent air trip, he replied, "Is that what it was? Things has been buzzin' in my head for so many years, I don't notice nothin'."

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

No American League pennant winner in recent years is wearing a crown as shakily as the Detroit Tigers' and indications are that the Detroit club will not be the favorite to repeat in the wagering book of Mr. Jack Doyle, the eminent Broadway commissioner who sets the odds.

POVICH

It was back in the winter of '39 that the Tigers probably unwittingly scuttled their chances of winning the 1941 pennant. Their owner, Mr. Walter O. Briggs, was a party to the Clark Griffith blockade against pennant winners, little suspecting that an immediate victim would be his own Detroit club.

Griffith's no-trade rule forbidding pennant winners to make any deals with other major league clubs, except by the waiver route which did not permit any transfer of stars, was aimed directly at the then-champion Yankees. But the team that is apt to feel the full force of Griffith's canny maneuver is now the Tigers who helped to engineer it.

There is a story within the story of the passage of Griffith's rule. The Yankees were violently opposed to it and on their side also were the St. Louis Browns. Griffith went about the league meeting marshaling support for his rule and gained a majority. But Mr. Briggs, proprietor of the Tigers, was not present at the meeting in Cincinnati.

Mr. Briggs was ailing at the time and was recuperating in the Southwest desert country, but by long-distance telephone he authorized his son, Walter O. Briggs, jr., to represent Detroit at the league meeting. As a caution, he instructed young Briggs to vote with Mr. Griffith on any issue.

The chief issue at the time was the fight of the minor leagues against Judge Landis, who had been frowning officially on chain-store baseball. The minors had enlisted the support of the National League in the fight against Landis, and only the American League was allied with the Judge. Mr. Briggs, seeing eye-to-eye in league matters with Griffith, who was a Landis supporter, not only commanded his son to vote as Griffith voted, but to insure that procedure he arranged with League President Harridge to dispense with the alphabetical order of polling the clubs and call for Washington's vote first in order that young Briggs might note how Griffith voted.

And so, when it came to a vote on the no-trade rule, Griffith's ringing "yes" was followed in due time by a similar expression by young Briggs on behalf of the Detroit Club. The champions couldn't buy any more stars within the league as long as they held the pennant and that is the rule that is now boomeranging against the Tigers.

More than any other factor last season, it was Griffith's rule that beat the Yankees. Riddled by injuries, handicapped by slumps, the Yankees were unable to follow their old custom of raiding the poorer clubs for stars and the Yankee's 1939 pennant dry-rotted. But the Tigers next season probably will be in an even more messier state than were the Yanks of '39.

It is generally admitted that the Tigers, even as champions last season, were the poorest American League pennant winners in perhaps 20 years. Manager Del Baker stumbled into the series with a club that had the worst infield in the league. The Tigers need replacement no less than downtown London, but they must now gamble with minor league talent. They can't put Mr. Briggs' fat checkbook to use in the purchase of accredited stars on account of that confounded Griffith embargo which they helped pass.

Charley Gehringer has already hinted that he's through with baseball and Dick Bartell, aside from the fire he lent to the Detroit infield, was precious little help. Bartell couldn't go to his left, Gehringer couldn't go to his right, and you could push a plane hangar broadside through that sort of a situation in the Tigers' infield.

There aren't any bright young men hanging around the Tigers' bench who are ready to replace the archaic second base-shortstop pair, worse luck for Baker. Young Dutch Meyer, whom they brought up from the Texas League at considerable expense as a substitute for Gehringer, couldn't beat out that spavined old veteran for the job and Baker would dislike very much to worry along with Meyer next season. The Tigers' second base job is wide open.

Bartell held up remarkably well throughout the season despite his ailing legs, but if there was a dime around the infield he was usually playing on it. The old spring was gone and it follows that he'll be a year older next season. The only other shortstop with the Detroit club is Frank Croucher, who has been given a dozen shots at the job but never could make good.

The Tigers could also use a couple of more pitchers but they'll have to go into the minors for 'em. In other words, the Tigers must dip into the minors for a shortstop, second baseman and pitching talent all in the same year which is no pleasant prospect. A big league club figures itself extremely lucky if it comes up with one acceptable player from the minors in one season.

Riders Break 23-Year Jinx, Beat Central

Last-Period Rally Upsets Vikings, 7-6

Sturgess and Kogod Score; 4,000 See Stunning Windup Of Interhigh Game

By Bill Burnett

The perennial "doormat" of local public high school football, Roosevelt, did some foot-wiping of its own yesterday.

It beat Central, 7-6, to register one of the most stunning upsets in the modern history of the interhigh series. It won with a patched-up lineup and by the most exciting process—coming from behind in the last quarter. And it won legitimately, after playing the heavily favored Vikings to a standstill for three periods.

Not since 1916, when Roosevelt still operated under the name of Business High, had the school's grid representatives turned the tables on their prime rival just down Thirteenth Street. In 1928 the Riders used numerous ineligible men purposely in an effort to heed the plea of its alumni—beat Central—and all they could manage was a 20-20 tie.

A near-capacity crowd of about 4,000, perhaps sensing the eventful outcome, turned out yesterday to hold its collective breath as the Riders hung up their 7 precious points. And even Central fans admitted the supremacy of the inspired Rough Riders.

Though Central's solitary touchdown early in the third period was slightly tainted, Roosevelt's tying points by little Carl Sturgess and its winning point by 200-pound Marvin Kogod were as honest as sunlight.

Fumble Helped

A fumble by Central's Orin Hartman midway of the fourth quarter helped the Rider cause, of course, but that was the extent of the Vikings' aid. They bitterly contested each of the 21 yards to their goal, and except for Sturgess' twisting

Kentucky Tied By Georgia Under Lights

By the United Press

Athens, Ga., Oct. 25.—The University of Georgia Bulldogs and the Kentucky Wildcats battled each other for four scrappy periods tonight and the game ended in a closely contested tie, 7-7.

The first period was featured by a punting exchange, with Kentucky getting the best of it. In the second, Kentucky drove 30 yards to a touchdown, with Herbert carrying the ball over, but the play was called back and Kentucky penalized.

Then Ermal Allen faded deep into his own territory and flipped a 30-yard pass to Mullins, who breezed into the end zone with Georgia tacklers floundering about him. Jones converted for Kentucky.

Georgia appeared to be moving into scoring position twice in the closing moments of the first half, but each time fumbles upset the Bulldog's plans.

Georgia's lone score came early in the fourth, as a result of Frankie Sinkwich's crushing drives through the Kentucky line. Sinkwich set up the tally with a 12-yard jaunt through the Wildcat secondary. Then Frankie passed to Skipworth for 13 yards and a first down on the Kentucky 1, from which point Sinkwich rammed across the score. Leo Costa converted to tie the score.

Terps Triumph Over Western Maryland, 6-0

Murphy Scores Lone Touchdown in First Period for Victory

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 25.—University of Maryland gridders scored the only touchdown in a 60-minute battle of potential scoring threats to defeat Western Maryland, 6-0, for their first victory of the season here tonight in Baltimore Stadium. More than 15,000 fans watched the annual clash between the College Park school and its up-State rival.

A first-quarter attack that put the phrase razzle-dazzle to shame netted the Terps a touchdown when Joe Murphy grabbed a 19-yard pass from Mearle Duval and fell over the goal line as three Terror defense men reached skyward in vain in an effort to block the pass.

That was the beginning and end of the scoring, but from that point until the final whistle, first the winners and then the Terrors would be in a position to score as the old rivals staged a typical inter-State battle.

Western Maryland gained the edge in first downs, 12 to 7, and outrushed the Terps, 205 to 201, while Maryland gained 85 yards in 7 completed passes out of 13 attempts, while the air-conscious Terrors connected for 5 in 22 attempts.

Intercepted Passes Hurt

Intercepted passes cost Western Maryland a possible victory or at least a tie. The losers marched deep into Maryland territory right after the score in the first quarter, but Manny Kaplan's pass was intercepted by Don Shockey in the end zone. Instead of downing it for a touchback he elected to run the ball and was stopped on the 3-yard line. The most sensational play of the game followed, when Murphy, from punt formation in his end zone, passed to Harold Berry, who was finally stopped on his own 33-yard line.

Another of Sophomore Kaplan's passes was intercepted, this time by Joe Hoopengardner in the third period and he was stopped on his own 20. The third and the one that hurt the most was late in the game when Shockey glued his fingers on another Kaplan pass, intended for Ervin Biasi, and stopped another Terror drive on his own 30.

Maryland's varied attack gave way to a consistent Western Maryland pass and running barrage in the second half, but injuries to two of their stars held the Terps back. Duvall limped from the game late in the second quarter and never returned, appearing on the field in street clothes after the half. Murphy apparently injured his ankle a few moments later as he noticeably favored it, and his

Penn and Michigan Highlight Grid Card

Ohio State, Cornell Stage Return Engagement As Sub-Feature of Full Week-End of College Football

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct 25.—The outstanding tussle of this football week-end will take place tomorrow afternoon at Ann Arbor, Mich., when the great Tommy Harmon leads all-conquering Michigan against an undefeated and unextended University of Pennsylvania eleven.

With All-America Tommy running rampant again, Michigan has run up 116 points to opponents' 14 in scoring four victories, while Penn, sparked by its brilliant Frank Reagan, has accumulated 147 points to 35 for its three victims.

In addition to being a whale of a game in itself, the meeting of the powerful East and Midwest rivals promises a thrilling individual duel between Harmon and Reagan.

State-Cornell Clash

Only slightly less important to the national ranking will be the long-anticipated return meeting between Ohio State and Cornell in the latter's cozy little stadium at Ithaca.

Cornell, with three lop-sided victories to its credit this fall, has been rated the Nation's top team in the weekly Associated Press poll. Ohio State, beaten on successful week-ends by Northwestern and Minnesota, has fallen somewhat from its usual high estate, but the Buckeyes always are tough.

Jumping from there, the next most important struggle is scheduled down at Waco, Tex., where the powerful Texas Aggies encounter their first dangerous rival for the Southwest Conference title in the Baylor Bears. Baylor lost an unexpected decision to Arkansas two weeks ago, but still is rated a real threat to the champs.

Stanford Active

The Pacific Coast's headliner brings together undefeated, untied Stanford and Southern California at Palo Alto, with Stanford favored to score its third conference victory.

The week's big noise in the Big Six will be the collision between Nebraska and Missouri at Lincoln, with the Nebraska team favored on the strength of its 53 to 2 romp over Kansas last week.

Other traditional games in the East are Fordham vs. St. Mary's, of California, Columbia vs. Syracuse, Harvard vs. Dartmouth, Yale vs. Navy, Army vs. Lafayette, Princeton vs. Rutgers and N. Y. U. vs. undefeated, untied Georgetown.

Notre Dame's great team should squelch Illinois, while Northwestern and Minnesota have what looks like breathers against Indiana and Iowa, respectively.

47-Yard Run, Field Goal Win For Dukes, 10-7

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Oct. 25.—Phil Ahwesh's 47-yard touchdown pass to Henry Maliszewski and John Rokisky's field goal from the 32 gave Duquesne a 10-6 victory over hard-fighting Manhattan tonight. A blocked kick and a 23-yard heave in the opening period accounted for Manhattan's points.

Duquesne bogged down after taking the opening kickoff and Farabaugh blocked Ahwesh's punt, recovering for Manhattan on the Duke 25. On the thrid play Supulski passed 23 yards to Farabaugh for a touchdown. Gnup was smeared in trying to run for the extra point after a bad pass from center. The Dukes later got to the enemy 33 but a pass into the end zone was batted down and the period ended with Manhattan leading 6-0.

Manhattan twice rose up to repulse Duke forays in the second quarter. Once Pittsburgh marched 46 yards to the Manhattan 34 only to be held for downs. Later Chadonic raced 34 to the Manhattan 32 and the Dukes pushed on to the 13 in another futile drive. Gaynor intercepted Donelli's pass on his own 40 and lateraled to Supulski, who ran to the Duke 48 as the half ended with Manhattan still leading, 6-0.

Duquesne scored early in the third period on a 61-yard drive, Ahwesh's 47-yard pass to Maliszewski accounting for the touchdown. Viskovich fell in trying to prevent the catch and the Duke end ran unmolested from the 15. Ahwesh kicked the extra point.

Cincinnati Reds Pay Stockholders $12 Dividend

Cincinnati, Oct. 25 (AP).—The world champion Cincinnati Reds declared a $12 dividend to stockholders today.

In a letter to common shareholders, President Powel Crosley, jr., said "while many persons thought our operations this year were more profitable than last year (when the club won the National League pennant), such was not the case.

"Excluding world series receipts, the net revenue from games at home and abroad during the season was $117,553.80 less than in 1939."

Colonials Capitalize On Fumbles

Mountaineers Suffer Season's Worst Loss; G. W. Keeps Foes On Defensive

By Jack Munhall

Beset by an acute attack of "fumblitis" West Virginia's Mountaineers suffered their worst defeat of the season last night as George Washington transformed three of their seven fumbles into touchdowns for a 19-0 victory.

The alert Colonials, capitalizing on fumbles which gave them the ball on West Virginia's 31, 21 and 37-yard lines in the first three periods respectively, impressively scored their fourth triumph as against one defeat. Vastly improved over their sorry showing last week against Kentucky, Bill Reinhart's lads never allowed the Mountaineers to get up steam and kept them on the defensive throughout a hard-fought but unusually clean battle.

West Virginia, handicapped by its damaging miscues, harassed constantly by a fast-charging G. W. line, led by End Johnny Picco, never penetrated beyond the Colonials' 39 of their own power. And the visitors' advance on their own impetus was reached only in the last minute play when two desperate passes clicked for 58 yards.

Heroes of Battle

Picco, a big end who sparkled both on offense and defense, and three reserve backs were the big heroes of George Washington. Picco scored the first Colonial touchdown on an 8-yard pass from Tom Grady after Ken Batson had plopped on a fumble by West Virginia's Ike Martin on the 31. Batson was hurt shortly thereafter and was removed from the game, not to return.

The trio of Colonial reserve backs who shared honors with Picco were Grady, Eddie Williamoski and Scott Gudmunsen, a flashy sophomore. Grady tallied the second G. W. six-pointer from the 2-yard line to culminate a march of 21 yards following Picco's recovery of a Mountaineer fumble on the 21 by Glennis Ellis.

Williamoski finished the evening's touchdown scoring on a brilliant 37-yard cutback over his own right tackle and not a single hand was laid upon him. This play followed immediately the recovery of an enemy fumble by Tony Barauskas, giant George Washington tackle, on the 37.

G. W. Again Near Score

Gudmunsen, the only nonscorer of the trio, entered the game late in the final quarter, and sparked a drive which nearly resulted in a fourth George Washington score. After Dan Douglas, a reserve end, pounced on a fourth and very disastrous Mountaineer bobble on the West Virginia 37, Gudmunsen passed and ran sensationally, but the threat fizzled when the Colonials failed by 6 inches of producing a first down on the West Virginia 4.

Gudmunsen, during this match, ripped off runs of 11 and 7 yards, completed one pass to Douglas for 20 yards, and another to Babich for 8. Hindering the Colonials on this drive was a 15-yard holding penalty, the only serious penalty of the game.

How close the game might have been had not West Virginia fumbled so frequently is seen by statistics which credit George Washington with 12 first downs to 11 for the losers. However, the Colonials were easily the superior club. For seldom has a G. W. eleven shown quite as much power as the Colonials displayed last night.

Buffs Pile Up 217 Yards

They rolled up 217 yards rushing and 53 passing for a total gain of 270 to 133 for West Virginia. The game marked the third time this season that the Buff and Blue has amassed more than 200 yards in a game. Contributing heavily to the Colonials' ability to barge through and around the heavier West Virginia line for wholesale gains were Wiliamoski and Fedora. On consecutive plays in the second period Wiliamoski scooted 16 yards and Fedora 14.

West Virginia's most effective play seemed to be a hidden ball trick which they worked three times, twice on kickoffs, for a total gain of more than 100 yards.

The Mountaineers, boasting decisive victories over Westminster and West Virginia Wesleyan, and close losing games against powerful Fordham (20-7) and Penn State (17-13), gave evidence of possessing considerable more attacking power than able to show mostly because of their seven fumbles, four of which were recovered by G. W.

Mrs. Myron Davy Captures Payne Golf Trophy Tournament

Mrs. Meckley Is Runner-up In Tourney

Winner Posts 255 At Congressional; Mrs. Schluderberg, Of Baltimore, Third

Mrs. Myron Davy won her first important local tournament yesterday, the 54-hole medal play Payne Trophy event, that by a coincidence she sponsored for Mrs. Ralph W. Payne.

Mrs. Davy suggested a tournament be held in honor of Mrs. Payne at the annual meeting of the local women's golf association last year, and Mrs. Davy offered to donate a permanent trophy and replica. Then she turned it over to the Maryland State Women's Golf Association.

The tournament was held over the Congressional course and it marked the debut of 54-hole, three-day medal events in this section.

After trailing Mrs. Betty Meckley at the end of the first day's play, Mrs. Davy went ahead by a single stroke on Thursday and yesterday clinched the cup with a total of 255 strokes to Mrs. Meckley's 259. The latter was runner-up, leading Baltimore's premier contender, Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, by five strokes.

Victory Her Reward

No golfer in this section has ever worked harder on his or her game than Mrs. Davy and the victory in the three-day grind was a tribute to her long hours of lessons, practice and the other things that it takes to make a good golfer out of a novice in a comparatively short time.

Mrs. Davy's 43-39, 82 earned her another prize yesterday, a golf bag given by Host Professional Wiffy Cox for the lowest round in the tournament.

Mrs. Meckley put together a pair of 85s and an 89 for the second best score, the second straight tournament she has finished in the runner-up role. Mrs. Schluderberg was third and Mrs. Leo Walper won fourth low gross over Mrs. Walter Stokes after matching cards. They tied with 268. Each had an 88-89 and yesterday scored exactly alike, 43-48, 91.

Mrs. Price Wins Net Prize

Mrs. Harold Price, of Kenwood, who was eligible for the event only by reducing her handicap to the maximum of 10 last Monday, won the only net prize with 254. Mrs. Price's round of 100 yesterday, her worst of the tournament, was marked by six putts on the tenth hole where she went to tap a 6-inch putt in the cup backhanded and before it went in she hit it four more times.

Mrs. Davy and Mrs. Meckley were playing partners in the final round and the eventual winner, who led by a stroke starting out, upped her margin to two shots on the second hole and was never headed.

Mrs. Davy led by two strokes at the turn and came back in 99 strokes, the best nine of the tourney, to finish four shots on top and nine ahead of Mrs. Schluderberg. The winner was playing consistently well and dropping the telling 4- and 5-foot putts.

The tournament will go to a Baltimore club next year. M. W. W.

booming punts lost some of their effectiveness. James Dun, Shockey and Hoopengardner took over the burden of the Maryland offense from this point.

Murphy's punts, before he aggravated his bad ankle, were things of beauty, however, and even in the second half he was better than average. Kaplan, Western Maryland's fine back, nearly matched the Terp ace in punting, and in the third period got one off for 64 yards.

It was one of Kaplan's few poor punts that led to the only score, however. A bad kick rolled back to the Western Maryland 35-yard line and on the next play Duvall, tackled just as he got rid of the ball, completed a pass to the 22. Shockey was stopped three times and then, on fourth down, Duvall passed to Murphy for the score.

Harold Berry's attempted conversion was wide, while the former Tech High (of Washington) back's attempted field goal later in the game was blocked by Bernie Gusesky.

'Skins, Minus 3 Stars, Off for Lion Battle

Farkas, Justice and Sanford Left Behind; Edwards Doubtful Starter; Tribe Faces Real Test

The Redskins shoved off yesterday afternoon for Detroit and a Sunday date with one of the National Pro League's strongest defensive teams, the Lions.

Veteran backfield men Ed Justice and Andy Farkas and Rookie End Sandy Sanford, all out with injuries, were left in Washington, while Capt. Turk Edwards was listed as a doubtful starter against Whizzer White's Detroit playmates.

Frank Filchock, who suffered a hemorrhage in his right arm as a result of an injury in the Philadelphia game last Sunday, is back in condition and again will alternate with Sammy Baugh in the Redskins' aerial attack on the Lions.

'Skins Fear Lions

In the Lions, the Redskins will be facing one of their most feared opponents of the year. The Detroiters, piloted by George (Potsy) Clark, last week defeated the world champion Green Bay Packers, 23 to 14, and currently are tied with the Packers for second place in the Western Division race.

Slowed down as it is by injuries, Washington's powerful offense will be put to the test by the team which held the Chicago Bears to one touchdown and which swamped the Chicago Cardinals—a team Washington had a hard time nosing out by a touchdown—43 to 14.

The Redskins will arrive in Detroit tomorrow at 8:25 a. m. and pitch camp in the Dearborn Inn. Coach Ray Flaherty will call the squad out for a workout in Detroit University Stadium later in the morning.

Fumbling Checked

Kept out of Briggs Stadium because Lion Owner Fred L. Mandel, jr., refused to sign up to play all his games there for the next three years, the contest will be staged in the small University Stadium, which has a capacity of about 26,000.

While the Redskins are leading the league in ground gained, forward passing and points scored, the Lions have a better average in pass interceptions, and least fumbles.

Fumbling has been the Redskins' chief source of trouble all season, and for the past week Flaherty has had his backs doing special exercises designed to eliminate the fumbling habit.

If Edwards misses tomorrow's game, Willie Wilkin will be ready to step in, Flaherty said last night. Bob Seymour, who was suffering a neck injury, also will be ready to go again.

Buddy Moore To Work Out Here Today

Colored Fighter To Engage Boyd At Riverside Stadium

Buddy Moore, the most sensational young Negro heavyweight to come out of the Golden Gloves since Joe Louis, reported here yesterday. This afternoon at 2 o'clock Moore is to work out at the Colored Y. M. C. A. in preparation for his scheduled ten-round boxing feature with Bill Boyd, Jack Dempsey's hard-hitting heavyweight, at Riverside Stadium Monday night.

Eddie Mead, celebrated manager of Henry Armstrong and many other fighters, past and present, and Eddie Borden, nationally-known boxing authority, are to join the 18-year-old 198-pound heavyweight here tomorrow. Mead, who directed Armstrong to three world championships simultaneously, personally will second his latest sensation into action against Boyd.

That mixed matches involving hard-punching heavyweights will be supported by Washingtonians was evidenced yesterday as a fine advance ticket sale was reported at Riverside. Comatchmakers Goldie Ahearn and Ray Alvis reported a brisk demand for tickets.

Moore, who looks like Joe Louis, brings a great record into action against the ringwise and hard-hammering Boyd Monday night. Winner of both the Golden Gloves and national amateur titles in the amateurs, he has knocked out five of the six fighters to face him since turning professional this past July 22.

Lynchburg Eleven Wins, 21-12, With 15 Points in 4th Period

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 25.—E. C. Glass High School, of Lynchburg, turned on the power in the fourth quarter with an attack that netted 15 points and a 21-12 victory over George Washington High School here tonight before approximately 2,000 fans. It was the Hilltoppers' second Virginia Class A Conference victory in four starts, and the Presidents' fourth consecutive league setback.

Trailing 12 to 6 at the half, after George Washington had thrilled its followers with a spectacular aerial offensive, the Hilltoppers went scoreless in the third period, but cut loose with a powerful attack in the final ten minutes. They scored one touchdown before the quarter was a minute old, added 2 points on a safety midway of the period, and wound up their scoring with a touchdown and an extra point in the last two minutes.

A 10-pound per man advanage in weight, and the brilliant booting of Fullback Chick McKenna were the deciding factors in the victors' late rush.

Sam Fones went over for the score on a 17-yard pass from John Shelton.

Lynchburg tallied in like style midway of the second period when McKenna took a 15-yard pass from Junior Wright and scampered 10 yards to the goal, but the Presidents were back in the lead in exactly 45 seconds. End Amos Clift ran the kickoff back 53 yards to the 31-yard line, and after two passes fell short, Shelton faded to his 40 and shot a beautiful aerial to Dalton Dove in the end zone.

George Washington was in Lynchburg territory most of the period, but as the quarter neared its close a poor kick by Howard Hicks gave the Hilltoppers the ball on the 37-yard line. Using straight power plays, the visitors marched to the 5-yard line as the quarter ended and scored two plays later.

A few minutes later one of McKenna's kicks was downed on the 4-yard line, and the Presidents attempted to run the ball out from behind the goal line. The strategy failed to click and Shelton was nailed by a swarm of Lynchburg tacklers in the end zone.

A penalty for unnecessary roughness put the Hilltoppers in position for their last score, placing the ball on the one-yard line. After the visitors marched to the 15, Blanks went over the goal on the first play and Murray booted the extra point.

A desperate last-minute passing attack by the Presidents was interrupted when Wright intercepted just before the final whistle.

Mosley Elected President Of Fox Hunters

By the Associated Press

Suffolk, Va., Oct. 25.—The Virginia Fox Hunters Association today elected Charles Mosley, of South Hill, as its president and arranged to present to James Harrison, of Laurel, Md., most of the trophies for the 1940 field trials.

Mosley succeeded Charles D. Andrews, of Suffolk in the presidency. J. H. Thomas, of Lynchburg, was chosen vice president.

The honors won by Harrison's hounds included the Nick Page Memorial Trophy, the Association Challenge Cup for having the best derby dog (Scrooge) in the trials and the champion dog (Scrooge) in the bench show. He also won the Deep Run plate for entering the round showing the greatest endurance and the Warrenton Plate for the best hunter.

D. Edward Clarke, of Laurel, Md., won a silver trophy for the third best dog in the derby and for having the high score on the first day of the derby run. Dr. Frasser Jones, of Richmond, took another trophy for honors in speed and endurance and for the high score on the second day of the hunt.

The Buck Langhorne Trophy went to Dr. Bolling Jones, of Petersburg, who also won a medal for trailing and second honors on speed and driving.

Mac, owned by Haynes and Winborne, ran first today on the second day of the all-age stake, wth Suffolk Dot, owned by S. S. Clayton, of South Hill, and Jerry Bristol, owned by Haynes and Winborne, taking second and third, respectively. The final cast in the all-age stake will be made tomorrow morning, to be followed by the posting of winners and awarding of trophies.

Although the weather was somewhat dry, the clear weather afforded excellent hunting today and four foxes were killed.

Madison Hockeyists Open Season

Play Westhampton At Home; Teams Have Even Records

Special Dispatch to The Post

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 25.—The Madison College varsity hockey squad will open its 1940 season by opposing Westhampton College tomorrow on the Madison field. These two teams have been evenly matched in previous contests. In 1938 they battled to a 1-1 tie, while in 1939 the Richmonders won a close victory by the score of 2-1.

The blue and gold representatives, captained by Miss Frances Wright, of Goodview, will line up an especially strong backfield of experienced players. Emily Lewis, of Petersburg, will start at goalie. Marjorie Pitts, of Smoots, star of the 1939 team, and Dorothy Wilkinson, of Petersburg, will start at the fieldback posts, while Hannah Heath, Charlotte Beville and Johnny West, all of Petersburg, will take over the halfback assignments in the starting line-ups. Eleanor Kash, of Lynchburg, and Margaret Moore, of Richmond, will play at left and right lines, respectively. Anna Jane Pence, of Arlington, and Jacqueline Turnes, of Petersburg, will hold down the wing positions, while Capt. Wright will play center forward.

The Madisonites are anticipating a highly successful season this year, though only four seniors were left from last year's squad. The 1940-41 schedule includes the Virginia State Hockey Tournament, November 1 and 2; William and Mary College, November 4, and the annual alumnae game, November 9.

Miss Helen Marbut, associate professor of physical education, and a former president of the Virginia Field Hockey Association, is coach of the Madison College squad.

Dartmouth Meets Harvard In 47th Clash

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 25.—Although Dartmouth meets Harvard as a thrice-beaten football team for the first time since this "Ivy League" series was inaugurated in 1882, the faltering Indians are rated as even with the sluggish Crimson for the forty-seventh clash of their series tomorrow at the stadium.

Harvard, seeking its initial 1940 major victory and its first over Dartmouth since 1932, apparently intends to stress passing, for during the past week Coach Dick Harlow inserted Sophomores Don McNicol and Johnny Morgan, his best pitcher-catcher combination, into the varsity line-up.

Although this classic is one of the stadium's annual features, the failures suffered this year by both rivals have stripped it of much of its lure. The advance sale pointed to a crowd of only 25,000.

Calling Captures Rockingham Race With Late Drive

Salem, N. H., Oct. 25.—Mrs. William R. Fleming's 4-year-old filly Calling scored a hard-earned decision over Sam Bernstein's Liberty Torch and P. F. Gene's Phenomenal today, in the featured mile and one-sixteenth race of an all-claiming card at Rockingham Park.

Phenomenal, the favorite in the betting, went to the front at the start and opened up a wide lead on the rest of the eight-horse field going down the backstretch.

Lafayette Rates Choice Over Army Today

Bill Wood to Start Strong Backfield Against Leopards

Special Dispatch to The Post

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Underdogs for the third consecutive week-end, Army will use its powerful backfield unit for the first time this season tomorrow afternoon against the unconquered and untied Leopards of Lafayette College.

The invaders will ride into Michie Stadium on the crest of a four-game winning streak, including a victory over New York University's eleven. Other Lafayette victims are Ursinus, Muhlenberg and Gettysburg.

Sparkplugs of the Leopards' backfield are Walt Zirinsky and Jim Farrell, two of the Nation's leading ground-gainers. Between them, they have piled up 620 yards in three of the four Lafayette contests to date.

To offset the powerful offensive thrusts of the visitors, Coach Bill Wood plans to use Johnny Hatch and Hank Mazur, both sophomore triple-threaters, in his starting backfield. There is also the possibility that the injured Jere Maupin, another all-round back, may be ready for service.

First McKechnie Contract Turns Up At Testimonial

Wilkinsburg, Pa., Oct. 25.—The first professional baseball contract held by Manager Bill McKechnie of the Cincinnati Reds popped up last night as an added attraction at a testimonial given him by Wilkinsburg fans.

Produced by former State Senator W. D. Mansfield, the contract revealed McKechnie launched his professional career 38 years ago in the Pennsylvania - Ohio - Maryland League—at the handsome salary of $175 a month. Mansfield was an officer of the league at the time.

Testimonial gifts received by McKechnie from hometown admirers included a "Kentucky Colonel" commission signed by Kentucky's Governor, Kenne Johnson.

Cornell Choice Over Buckeyes In Clash Today

Capacity Crowd To Witness Battle; Big Red Bolstered

By the Associated Press

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Bolstered by the return of two regular linemen and the starting fullback of two years ago, Cornell's football team, No. 1 ranking outfit in the Nation, will be favored to make it two straight over Ohio State before a capacity crowd in Schoellkopf Field tomorrow afternoon.

The Big Red will be able to call on Fred West at tackle and Kirk Hershey at end for the first time since the opener with Colgate. But Hershey will have a tough time crashing the line-up because of the standout work done during his absence by Bill Schmuck. The other returning veteran is Fullback Vince Eichler, who was elected captain for 1939 but was hurt before the season started, dropped out of school, came back this year and was kept on the sidelines for the first three games by a side injury.

The Ohio State team, which checked in at nearby Watkins Glen this morning, has lost two games but reputedly is primed for this one. The Buckeyes are out to avenge that 23-14 upset at Columbus in 1939, and should give the Ithacans their toughest test of the season.

Added stands have raised the Schoellkopf Field capacity to 33,400, some 3,000 more than saw the Dartmouth game in 1938, and every seat probably will have an occupant.

Undefeated, Untied Penn State Invades Temple Today

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 25.—Undefeated and untied Penn State invades Temple University Stadium tomorrow for what promises to be this season's stiffest test thus far. Temple's Owls last week upset Michigan State.

Both teams expect to be at full strength for the contest, only major game in the Philadelphia area. The same team that surprised Michigan State, 21-19, will start for Temple while the Lions will have Bill Smaltz, triple-threat fullback, available for the starting assignment for the first time in three weeks.

The Nittany Lions boast the better record, with victories over Bucknell, West Virginia and Lehigh. Temple lost to Georgetown and Boston College. Temple defeated State in their only two previous encounters.

Navy Game May Develop Into Air Battle

Yale to Start 2 Passers; Navy Chances Look Good

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 25.—The navy football team is undefeated and its chances of staying that way after playing Yale, never beaten by the Middies, here tomorrow looked pretty good tonight.

The Elis, with a subpar first eleven and few capable replacements, hardly seemed to have the man power to cope with a Navy squad reported able to put two equally good teams on the field.

The expected crowd of 40,000 should see plenty of forward passes. Navy has the reputation of being a passing team and the Bulldogs, whose running attack has gone nowhere all season, necessarily have been forced into the air. For the first time, Coach "Ducky" Pound plans to start two passers, Ray Anderson and Ted Harrison, in the Eli backfield.

However, the weatherman has forecast showers, which would hinder an aerial battle.

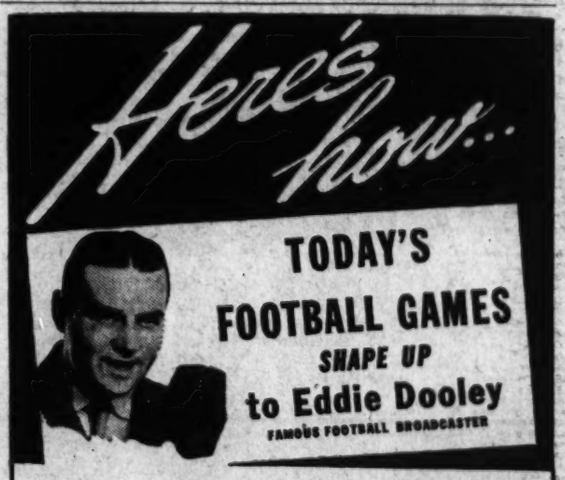
600 Middies, Band Leave for Game

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 25.—A special train moved from here early tonight bearing over 600 Midshipmen, comprising the third, fourth and fifth companies of the regiment of the Naval Academy, who will comprise the main Navy rooting section at the Navy-Yale football game in the Yale Bowl tomorrow afternoon.

With the Middies went the full complement of the academy band of 75 pieces, and the Midshipmen's Bugle Corps, numbering 40. The local group will be greatly augmented by officers from the Boston and New York Navy Yards and other fans from nearby points, so the Tar gridders will not be without sufficient vocal encouragement in their struggle against the Eli's.

A party of 16 Midshipmen cross-country runners and another group of ten "skippers" also went along with the football rooters, the former to participate in a quadrangular meet in New York with the Army Cadets, Princeton and Columbia as the other contestants, and the latter to compete in the Boston challenge cup race at Cambridge, Mass., on boats of the dinghy type.



From where I sit, it looks as if this will be the outcome:

After travelling almost from coast to coast for a total distance of 4,288 miles in three games, Catholic University's Flying Cardinals come home to rest today for their first home appearance. The Cards meet West Virginia Wesleyan at 2 o'clock at Brookland Stadium.

This will be the eighth renewal of a long series between the Cards and Bobcats, with Catholic University holding a 4-3 edge in victories. Last year C. U.'s powerful Sun Bowl team won the most decisive decision of the series in routing the Bobcats, 60-0.

Wesleyan, routed by West Virginia in its latest start, is not expected to prove very difficult for the Cardinals, who are seeking their third victory against one defeat. The Bobcats, however, have a pair of players who will bear close watching. One is Eddie Meighan, a triple-threat halfback who was troublesome to C. U. last year despite his team's shellacking. The other is also a backfield star, Paul Glod who, like Meighan, is a fine punter and passer.

Lines Even in Weight

The C. U. and Wesleyan lines will be evenly matched in weights, at least, with both averaging 190 pounds. Bulwarks of the visitors' forward wall are Tackles George Foehr and Charles Gruver, who scale 208 and 215, respectively.

The Cards' ace linemen are Tackles Julius Stanges, 195 pounds, and Casmir Lyscewski, 210 pounds, and Mike Cherelle and Johnny Schroeder, guards.

However, the cynosure of all eyes today will be Pete Sachen, C. U.'s long-kicking quarterback who is being boomed extensively as an All-American. This 168-pound triple threater has a punting average of 47.8 for three games, and has completed 22 of 31 passes for an average of 12½ yards. In addition he scored the only touchdown as C. U. beat St. Anselm, 6-0, and accounted for all the Cardinals' points as they whipped Miami, 20-18.

Game to Be Broadcast

Sharing the backfield burden with Sachon will be Halfbacks Charlie Moutenot, fleet French halfback, and Capt. Hank Brostek. Sophomore Julius Buckanavage probably will be at fullback. Scheduled for considerable reserve backfield action are Al Norris, Bill Griffin and Bill Mulvey.

The game will be broadcast over Station WMAL by Ray Michael. Two former Catholic University backfield stars will be interviewed during the half-time intermission.

All local high school and parochial school students will be admitted free of charge upon presentation of their athletic books.

Prepmen Score Early In Turning Back McKinley Eleven

Unleashing an air raid early in the first half, a powerful Gonzaga eleven defeated McKinley Tech, 20 to 6, yesterday at Tech Stadium, to account for the home team's first setback this season.

Starting early in the first quarter the Eagles advanced to the Techmen's 11 on two passes from Elmer Raba to End Joe Mullin. Then Raba again faded back and tossed into the waiting arms of Bob Mulvihill standing on the goal line. Raba's placement was good.

Gonzaga's next tally came on the first play of the second quarter, when Raba's 45-yard quick kick drove Tech back to the shadow of its goal. Tech kicked back to its own 35, and two plays later Hal Hartman swept around end for the Eagles' second touchdown. Raba's try at placement failed.

However, the Maroon was not to be shut out. Walsh's pass to Delastious brought the ball to the Eagles' 26, in the first period. Aided by two penalties, Delastious and Smallwood advanced to their opponents' 6-inch marker. From there Smallwood plunged through center for Tech's only goal. Walsh's attempted placement was no good.

Gonzaga's last touchdown, in the closing minutes of the first half, was set up by Healey's 11-yard pass to Mullin taken on the Techmen's 23. Then Raba tossed a long aerial to Bob O'Donnell over the goal. The placement by Raba was good.

Gonzaga made a serious threat in the third quarter, advancing the ball to the Maroon's 1-foot mark, but met a brick wall in Tech's line and was turned back.

Shepherdstown's Six-Man Squad Wins Another, 25-6

Special Dispatch to The Post

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Oct. 25.—Shepherdstown High's six-man football team made it two consecutive victories here this afternoon, defeating Capon Bridge High School, 25 to 6.

After going scoreless during the first half and watching Combs score six points to a 50-yard run in the second period for Bridge, Shepherdstown fired its toughest guns, scoring 12 points in the third stanza and 13 in the fourth. Walper led the scoring with two touchdowns, Skinner and Strider collecting one each. Starry accounted for the extra point.

Breaks Aid Western As Wilson Bows, 7-0

Near-Capacity Crowd Sees Marlow Go Over for Lone Score; Off-Side Penalty Robs Losers of Touchdown in Final

Taking advantage of the breaks in the opening period, the Red Raiders of Western pushed over the lone touchdown of the game and registered its third straight victory in the interhigh series as Wilson bowed, 7 to 0, yesterday at Western Stadium.

A near-capacity crowd of students saw the defending champions' Bill Marlow plunge over his own right tackle for the marker after a pair of passes by "Lefty" Bob Leach to Buck Herrlein and Jack Sickel, respectively, put the ball in scoring position. Herrlein rushed it over for the extra point.

Wilson was the recipient of some tough breaks near the end of the encounter. Fullback Voight carried the ball to pay dirt in the last period for the Presidents but the play was called back as both teams were off-side. Wilson lost valuable ground by having passes intercepted when it had opportunities to tie up the game.

The Red Raiders were without the services of Jake Hillary, their star back, who was on the sidelines because of a leg injury. Billy Gray, Western end, also injured, was missing from the line-up.

Wilson put up a gallant fight in holding "the boys from across the creek" to one touchdown. Western had previously beaten Roosevelt, 33-7, and Anacostia, 32-6, before taking yesterday's battle.

The kicking of Voight aided Wilson on many occasions but the weak aerial attack of the Presidents lost them any chances they had of winning.

Lexington, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—V. M. I.'s Little Red team nosed out University of Richmond freshmen, 6 to 0, in a hard-fought game today on alumni field.

With one minute to play before the first half ended, Buck Seay, Keydet back, faded to his 12-yard line and tossed a long pass to End Jimmy Mattern. Mattern took the ball on the dead run on Richmond's 45-yard line, and raced for a touchdown. Steven's conversion was wide.

Nicro's superlative pin-crashing was the factor determining team highs, for the Ramblers easily captured them with 653 and 1,863. Paul Jarman had rolled a 417 set to help his Columbia Specialty five take all three from Griffin's Grill.

Rough Riders Upset Vikings In Last Period

Roosevelt Triumphs Over Central First Time in Forty Years

It was Dick Goodman who threw himself on Hartman's fumble, but Fullback Lester Wicklein put his team in immediate scoring position a moment later. He pulled Bob Stein's aerial down on the 6-yard line despite the arms of three Viking protectors.

Three times Roosevelt hit the line, but 3 yards still separated it from the goal. Then Quarterback Bernie Kolker, star plunger of the Riders, called Sturgess' number instead of his own and saw the choice pay off. Sturgess was slowed down once as he went around left end, but not for long. Kolker, and Wicklein cleared his path perfectly.

Kogod's placement immediately afterward was low and to the right, but Referee Magoffin's arms finally went up to signify success for Roosevelt.

Central's scoring play in the third quarter came on the heels of a brilliant Rider stand on its own goal. Mike Denikos, diminutive halfback, set up the first chance when he tore off 39 yards around end to the 3. A fumble by Harry Martin ended that threat, giving Roosevelt a chance to kick out.

But back came Central on the next play Sam Di Blasi going on an end-around from his own 24 to score after Denikos had returned the kick from the 40. As Di Blasi went across the goal, however, he was brought down from behind and there was much discussion as to whether he slid or fell across. Di Blasi's drop kick for the extra point was barely off the ground.

For the first time in many years, Roosevelt was heated up enough to see one of its players waved out of action for fighting. Dick Koester, left end, as well as Di Blasi were chased a few seconds after Central's score, when they went down in a pileup with both fists flailing.

The early portion of the game was marked by little more exciting than a punting duel between Roosevelt's Bernie Kolker and Central's Di Blasi. Neither team was in possession inside the other's 30, however.

Though the losers were almost at peak strength, Hymie Perlo, ace passer of the Riders, and Irwin Breier never got into action. Kolker was hurt in the third period, Goodman was also forced out for a short period with a nose injury and Wicklein sat part of the affair out with damages to his leg.

U. of Maryland Jayvees Beat Quakers, 13-6

Checos and Greleckie Pace Young Terps As Penn Juniors Bow

Special Dispatch to The Post

The University of Maryland Jayvees tramped over the Penn Junior eleven at Byrd Stadium yesterday as the Old Liner second stringers topped off two tallies to nip the Quakers, 13-6.

Led by Lou Checos and Ray Greleckie, the Terrapins stepped into their own territory early in the second half. Checos faded back on his own 20 and tossed a pass to Larry McKinzie, who stepped into the end zone for the Terps' score. Widner missed the conversion and the Old Liners led 6-0. In the same period, the Quakers tallied by the aerial route, when Demsey took Charlie Sirris' pass on the eight and galloped over. The Penn attack died out and the score remained 6-6 until the second half.

The second Terp tally came after the Old Liners had driven to the Penn six on off tackle and end runs by Greleckie and Bill Bach. Lou Checos again crossed the double stripe on a line buck and Punchy Widner came in to boot the extra point to send the Terrapins ahead 13-6.

Both teams held gamely in the final session. Early in the opening session Greleckie, Terp quarterback, sparked the Old Liners in a drive that failed just after dipping deep into Penn territory. Again in the second session Bach reeled off a 20-yard dash that opened another liner threat that the Quakers stopped, taking the oval on downs.

Demsey and Blasek were the outstanding linesmen. The Philly end grabbed a pass for the only score, while Blasek took over the Liner backfield to do the kicking. Elmer Bright, former Poly star, covered the pivot position.

Hoyas 5-2 Choice Over Violets Today

Georgetown Stakes 3-Year Unbeaten Record in Annual Battle

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 25.—Georgetown University's much-heralded eleven arrived here today to find itself a 5-2 favorite to defeat New York University at Yankee Stadium tomorrow and extend its 3-year undefeated streak to 21 games without a setback.

The Hoya squad was in excellent condition. Jim Castiglia, hard-hitting fullback who led G. U. to a smashing 14-0 victory over Temple three weeks ago, is recovered from a shoulder injury. And Bill Wixted and Mike Kopcik, both ends, are in top-top shape again after missing the V. P. I. game.

The Georgetown team established headquarters at Hotel Croydon and then held a brief afternoon workout at Yankee Stadium in which the long punting of Kopcik and Tackle Joe Daniels impressed observers.

Coach Warns Players

Despite the near-prohibitive odds quoted in favor of Georgetown—ranging from 4-1 down to 2-1—the Hoyas hold N. Y. U.'s Violets in great respect. Remembering that N. Y. U. has never played a bad ball game against Georgetown, Coach Jack Hagerty has warned his squad to forget the Violets' three consecutive defeats and be prepared for perhaps their stiffest tussle of the season.

Last week against Holy Cross the Violets hit their fastest pace of the season. The Crusaders won a 13-7 decision which was clouded because N. Y. U. lost its star Negro fullback, Len Bates, with injuries early in the second period after he had sparked a 52-yard drive that established his team in a 7-0 lead.

Also N. Y. U. for the first time this season will be at full strength. "Roxy" Finn, one of the most highly touted sophomore backs in Violet history, will be making his season's debut after being sidelined with injuries.

N. Y. U., with its typical supply of good passers, is expected to gamble with a reckless aerial attack against the Hoyas, with Finn, Hank Feil and Joe LaManna on the throwing end of most of the tosses.

Georgetown, with a crack array of running backs including Lou Ghecas, Jack Doolan, Al Kull and Frank McLaughlin, is expected to rely mainly on its ground attack. If passes are needed the Hoyas will call upon one of the East's leading sharpshooters, Jules Koshlap who played a prominent role in G. U.'s 14-0 triumph over the Violets last year.

The Hoyas will start the same 11 men who began in the 1939 game with New York University, including Center Al Matuza who intercepted a N. Y. U. pass and ran 45 yards to the second Georgetown touchdown. The first had come on Koshlap's pass to Ghecas.

Doolan, the Hoyas' very promising sophomore speedster, will be in for a lot of attention today. In brief appearances in three of Georgetown's four games to date, Doolan has dashed to five touchdowns and leads the District of Columbia individual scorers.

Little Hoyas Smash Landon Eleven, 26 to 0

Georgetown Prep eleven broke into the victory column with a vengeance yesterday on its home field when it smashed Landon, 26-0, behind the bruising ball carrying of Fullback Bud Eckrich.

Beaten once and tied once in their two previous starts, the Little Hoyas scored in every period but the last, during which reserves constituted the line-up.

Eckrich's first jaunt into scoring territory came in the first session after he broke off tackle for 25 yards to the Landon 6. His first thrust at the line accounted for six points and he made it 7-0 with a perfect place-kick.

Second-period scoring was credited to Quarterback Ben Decker, who intercepted Sager's pass on his foes' 45 and went swiftly downfield to score. Scoring was closed out in the third quarter with a pair of six-pointers by Eckrich and an extra point by Substitute Gheckas, who picked up a stray placement and ran it over.

Eckrich's first counter in that period resulted from his longest dash of the game. Picking up the ball on his own 45, Eckrich left the whole Langdon team in his wake as he covered 55 yards. His second invasion was from the 3-yard stripe, after Mike Tobin had blocked a Landon kick and run the ball back 25 yards to the 3 where he slipped and fell.

Landon's main offensive was centered in its Sager-to-Baker pass combination. It was this duo which supplied the Green's biggest threat late in the second quarter, reaching Georgetown Prep's 6-inch line.

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Oct. 25.—Washington and Lee's undefeated and untied freshmen footballers made it four straight here today by overcoming the Maryland Frosh, 12 to 0.

The Frigadiers scored midway the first quarter when Jeff Puckett rammed over from the 1-yard line after Harry Baugher's 36-yard pass to Jack Roehl.

In the third period Baugher tossed 20 yards to Paul Cavaliere, and the big New Britain, Conn., receiver dragged Maryland defenders five more yards for the touchdown.

Both of Baugher's attempts to convert failed.

Bradley's Bryan Station Captures Benning Purse in Romp

Hard Jester Outrun by 5 Lengths

Double Pays $58.60 As Miss Fixit and Daring Lady Score In First and Third

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 25.—Maryland fans are becoming more and more convinced that Col. E. R. Bradley has 1941 Kentucky Derby talent in Bryan Station, his speedy 2-year-old son of Balladilk. Facing seven fair juveniles today in the Bennings Purse, Bryan Station galloped to his third straight victory since coming to this track as a non-winner. Jockey F. A. Smith, his regular rider, had to do little more than sit tight and cluck to the colt with the smooth action.

At the payoff line, Bryan Station held a five length advantage over the nearest opposition, in this case Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Hard Jester. A length separated the second horse from Winston Guest's Yankee Party which closed with a rush to force Joseph E. Widener's Hasty Notion out of the pay circle.

Equals Handicap Time

Bryan Station was a favorite from the time the entries first appeared last night and was an odds-on choice as the field of eight marched postward The green and white colt was clocked in 1:45 1-5 for the mile and 70 yards over a track that was fast despite a drizzle that set in just before the day's action began. This matched his time for the mile and a sixteenth of the Spalding Lowe Jenkins Handicap here last Saturday However, he was under a pull at the end today.

Hard Jester showed an excellent effort but was no match for the fleet Bradleyite. This son of Hard Tack withstood a long drive and was holding Yankee Party and Hasty Notion safe at the end.

A fair portion of the crowd of 8,000 cashed daily double tickets carrying a value of $58.60. Walter Wickes' Miss Fixit with Jockey H. Mora in the saddle, won the first race and paid $9.70. She galloped past Paper Girl to displace the pacemaker and then drew out without effort.

In the third race, Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Daring Lady rolled up another winner for Trainer H. G. Bedwell. The $13.40 shot came around the leaders to take command and was booted home in excellent style by Jockey F. A. Smith.

Seven of Ten Finish 'Chase

No serious injuries resulted from today's steeplechase win which ten horses faced Starter Jim Milton. Seven of that number reached the finish line. D. B. Barrows' Quakerstreet ran a steady race to take the main portion of the purse by six lengths.

Mrs. A. J. Booker's Perfect Liar was second ahead of W. G. Jones' Pine Tag. The winner paid $21.30, G. F. Perry's Rockden, well played, moved up on the inside and appeared on the way to the lead when he stumbled and lost his rider at the tenth fence. Rouge Catalan and Pine Tag also were eliminated. Except for being shaken up and slightly bruised the riders escaped injury.

M. B. Goss, of Winchester, Va., claimed Barograph out of the sixth race for $1,400.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUAKERSTREET, $21.30, $9.10, $6.00; PERFECT LIAR, $10.90, $7.40; PINE TAG, $4.30.

QUAKERSTREET, well placed from start, took command when placed to drive while fencing with PERFECT LIAR, drew out in closing half mile. PERFECT LIAR set good pace and held on gamely, but was no match for winner. PINE TAG was not hurried early, improved position and made bad landing at fourteenth fence.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:33. Off 2:34. Winner, Mrs. Graham Lewis' b. f. (2), by Diavolo—Lady Wisdom. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14⅘.

Selections at Laurel

Dear Al,

Far and away the best program of the Maryland fall season is offered by this track today. As if the Selima Stakes, likely to gross $29,330 and pay $23,830 to the winner, were not lure enough for the crowd, Laurel also has the $15,000 added Washington Handicap. The Selima is for 2-year-old fillies while the Washington has drawn some of the best older campaigners in the country, including Can't Wait. Here's some facts on the two races: Washington, this running of the Washington Handicap will be the twenty-seventh. Two horses share honors in taking down the richest "first money" in the stake, $26,200. They are Big Blaze, the 1934 victor and Display, who won in 1927. The time record for the Washington also is held jointly by Display, carrying 112 pounds including Johnny Maiben in 1927 and Azucar, with 114 pounds and Sonny Workman up in 1934. Each raced the mile and a quarter in 2:02 2-5. Only one horse has won the Washington twice, that being Willis Sharpe Kilmer's great Sun Beau who accounted for the 1929 and 1930 renewals. Jockey F. Coltiletti won the Washington three times riding Sun Beau twice and also booting home Mars in 1926. Jimmy Butwell took two runnings on Roamer in 1914 and Joy Smoke in 1925. Last year's Washington went to Brandywine Stable's Masked General as Nedayr was second and Challephen third. Masked General is in tomorrow's race and has a chance to tie Sun Beau's mark if he can win it. Selima, when the field of 2-year-old fillies goes postward in the Selima, it will mark the fifteenth running of this richest of all American races of this type. The Selima will be the last at the mile distance for next season the fillies will go a mile and a sixteenth. The time record in the stake is held by Khara, the 1929 winner who carried 109 pounds and L. Fator and Talma Dee, victor in 1936 under 111 pounds which included Alfred Robertson. Both horses covered the 8 furlongs in 1:39 2-5. Last season's Selima went to J. O. Keene's War Beauty, with Tedbriar second and Miss Ferdinand third. War Beauty's prize of $26,560 was the largest in the 14-year history of the stake. Alfred Robertson and Eddie Arcaro are tied for riding honors in the Selima, each having won twice. Robertson was on War Beauty last year and Talma Dee in 1936 while Arcaro won the 1934 and 1935 renewals with Nellie Flag and Split Second, respectively. See you on the rail—BILL.

First race—Annikin took the overland route and came on to win last Thursday. Meeting the same company here, he figures to repeat. Reward was a good third last out and should be close. Bounding Count is usually a factor in fields of this caliber.

Second race—Skin Deep by his recent surprise victory indicates that he is a greatly improved horse under his new trainer, Whitey Abel, and, though moving up a trifle, should take this affair in stride. Float Away displayed a keen effort in his last and rates as the principal contender. Prairie Dog has class but late races have been poor.

Third race—After Dawn gave evidence of championship qualities when he sported with a speedy band of juveniles in his recent race. Meeting the good filly, Misty Isle, he retains a slight edge with the weights in his favor. Misty Isle, a proven stake winner, is the one to beat. Sobriquet appears capable of handling the others.

Fourth race—Valdina Myth after her second to Level Best at Keeneland in record time may be the one to take down first money in this wide-open contest. Nasca has speed and recent dull races have been attributed to a sore leg which has since been healed. Silvestra was good in New York.

Fifth race—Can't Wait came down from New York to engage in this contest and his victory in the Continental Handicap accords him top figure. True Call registered one of the most impressive victories in her career when she beat Bolingbroke last week and those two figure to finish in that order back of Can't Wait.

Sixth race — Weekly Stipend bowed to Memory Book and Clingendsal by a length in his last race. Dropping down a bit here, he figures to win. Jessie Gladys disappointed in her last, but would be dangerous on her best effort. Oversight is in form and should be close.

Seventh race—Miss L. P. was right behind The Queen and Tanganyika in a recent outing. Her competition her is of a decidedly cheaper nature and she should get up to score. Rhodium has won his last two and should provide stout contention. Yatnis was well meant last start but something went wrong.

Best bet—Miss L. P.

Swope, Louchheim Interested in Gulfstream Park; Joe Louis May Fight Lee Savold

Florida Race Track Move May Prove Favorable

By Jack Guenther,

New York, Oct. 25.—SECRET AGENT X-4-½ REPORTS—

That angels are rushing in where even fools fear to tread, namely, at the ill-starred lemon of the citrus racing circuit—Gulfstream Park in Florida. The winged gent in question are Herbert Bayard Swope, of New York, and Jerry Louchheim, of Philadelphia, a couple of turfmen who are unusual in that their dollars are matched by horse sense. The move is regarded favorably by all parties, provided all court claims against the track are settled first.

That Mike Jacobs isn't going to wait until the boys call him Grandpa Mike rather than Uncle Mike before getting Joe Louis into a ring again. Actually, the fellow is stewing up something that sounds pretty horrible—Louis versus Lee Savold or, if Savold dosen't get by Billy Conn, then Louis vs Buddy Baer. In any event the date of the crime has been fixed for some time in January and the scene probably will be Madison Square Garden. There's a chance for California or Florida, but this time Jacobs won't take chamber of commerce promises. He'll insist on cash in hand.

That Saturday will be recalled by football historians as the day Penn whipped Michigan, Ohio State upset Cornell and Southern California routed Sanford. The reasons are: (A) The Quakers have saved a few brotherly love plays for just this occasion; (B) the Buckeyes would rather give Drahos & Co. a black eye than win any other single game; and, (C) the Shaughnessy offense is made to order—possibly even custom built—for the Jones defense.

That there actually is some truth to the rumor that Bucky Harris may lay his scalp on the line for the Cleveland Indians by accepting a job, and we do mean job, as manager. As soon as he would sign a contract Bucky would automatically establish a new league record. No other player in the American loop has ever managed four different teams, but Harris already has piloted Washington (11 years), Detroit. (5 years), and Boston (1 year, which is as long as any of 'em lasted in those days).

That some golfer who right now in unknown outside of his immediate family will add his name to the list of Cinderellas who have made good on the winter swing in other years. Each season the Florida-California-Arizona-Texas trek uncovers a new one—Denny Shute, Harry Cooper, Horton Smith, Jim Demaret, Ben Hogan, Dick Metz, Dutch Harrison, Sam Snead and Ed Oliver. You even might add Jimmy Thomson and Jug McSpaden. Nominations for 1941 are now in order.

That Jock Sutherland didn't tell even his best friends what he actually thought of the Chicago Bears. The good gray doctor believes the Windy City polars are man for man and unit for unit the best football aggregation he ever has seen, and not only that but that they are at least 20 per cent so. Actually, the truth should be known Sunday after the Bears meet the Giants. The latter are no fireballs offensively, but they give up yardage more reluctantly than a surveyor under hire to a Scotsman.

That Yale and Harvard are distinguishing themselves as worse nags than the old ladies or Billingsgate. Either unable or unwilling to produce good football teams themselves, they now are making careers of tossing sorehead communiques at their better and more prosperous neighbors, Cornell and Pennsylvania, and hinting reprisals when schedule-making time comes around. It could be suggested that a tip might be taken from Chicago in the Big Ten. If you can't or don't want to play, get out. And good riddance, too.

Ringie Takes Fabian 'Cap At Empire City

Washington-Owned Horse Pays Backers $6.50; Red Rock 3d

By the Associated Press

Empire City Race Track, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Gustave Ring's Ringie, a 3-year-old that finished third in the recent Maryland Handicap at Laurel, scored a game, front-running triumph in the Fabian (class "C") Handicap here today. The Washington-owned gelding was coupled with John C. Clark's Pretty Pet, which did little running. The entry ruled favorite, paying $6.50 for $2.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Red Dock earned the place, two lengths back and a half length before Joseph Pepp's No Sir. Seven started in the mile and a sixteenth feature. The victor was timed in 1:45 4-5.

Ringie, with George Seabo in the saddle, cut out his own pace. He was only a half length or less in front most of the trip while Pretty Pet was far in the rear, and many thought the ultimate winner would have to crack with Red Dock and No Sir taking turns at challenging the black pacemaker. However, Seabo had something in reserve. His mount drew away in the final furlong as Red Dock outlasted No Sir.

53,844,000-Bushel Increase Reported As of Oct. 1

By the Associated Press

Combined stocks of wheat in interior mills, elevators, warehouses and on farms October 1 totaled 548,364,000 bushels, the Agriculture Department reported today.

Similar stocks a year ago totaled 494,520,000 bushels.

Stocks in interior mills, elevators and warehouses were reported at 188,618,000 bushels, leaving 359,746,000 bushels on farms. The department said stocks in mills, elevators and warehouses were 21 per cent larger than a year ago. Increases were located largely in the hard red spring wheat States and in Nebraska, Kansas, Idaho and Texas.

October 1 stocks in all positions, by classes, included:

The Commodity Credit Corporation reported simultaneously that 227,170,750 bushels of this year's wheat crop had been stored under Government loans to growers through October 22. It said $162,966,717 had been advanced on this grain.

This volume was slightly less than 10,000,000 bushels under loan storage a week ago. Largest increases were reported in Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota and South Dakota.

Senate Group Assails Rail's Stock Buying

Great Western Action In 1930 Criticized As Evading Law

The Senate Railroad Finance Committee asserted yesterday that a purchase of $250,000 of Chicago Great Western Railroad stock by the railroad itself in 1930 was "invasion or violation of State laws" and was done for "the benefit of the insiders and their friends."

The committee made the statement in one of a series of reports on its four-year-old investigation of railroad finances.

"The scheme devised by insiders in the Great Western to use money from the treasury of the railroad to buy its own stock, through a wholly-owned subsidiary (Mason City and Fort Dodge Railroad Co.), was in evasion of the laws of Illinois," the report said. "The purchases, made during the depression, were palpably unsound as an investment.

"This use of a wholly-owned subsidiary, in circumvention of State and perhaps Federal laws, illustrates some of the evils which have resulted from such devices. Legislation is urgently needed to eliminate or rigidly regulate wholly-owned subsidiaries in the railroad field.

"Despite the abuse of the Great Western treasury at a time when the railroad needed all its available resources, and despite the losses which resulted, no steps have been taken to obtain reimbursement from the men who were responsible for the deal. When the road went into bankruptcy one of these very men was appointed a trustee of the property. Another trustee was also appointed, but he has never sought to recover any of the losses in behalf of the bankrupt estate.

"Legislation is needed establishing a special railroad court to handle railroad bankruptcy proceedings, and assuring the appointment of truly impartial and conscientious trustees, willing and able to press the railroad's just claims for restitution."

The subsidiary, the report said, did not have assets of its own to make the purchase so the money was supplied to it by the parent corporation.

Gen. Motors Units Report Heavy Sales in Period

Detroit, Oct. 25 (AP).—Buick Division of General Motors Corporation reported today that its retail sales of new cars for the second ten-day period of this month numbered 10,319 units. Sales in the preceding ten days totaled 10,419.

Unfilled orders on hand as of October 20 were reported as more than 23,500. On October 10 they numbered 23,294.

Oldsmobile Division of General Motors reported retail sales of 6,571 cars during the second ten-day period of this month. In the preceding ten days, sales totaled 5,654.

The sales report of the Pontiac Division of General Motors showed retail deliveries of 8,372 units during the second ten-day period this month. In the preceding ten days, retail sales were 8,243. The company reported unfilled orders on hand at 21,399. On October 1 they totaled 18,635.

Cotton Futures

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Liquidation influenced by a bearish construction of the Government ginnings report and hedge selling depressed cotton futures 2 to 5 points today.

The Federal report showed cotton ginned from October 1 to 18 totaled 3,104,047 bales, or more than 1,600,000 bales ahead of the same period last year. The effect on the market was tempered by weekly into-sight figures, which showed the first decline thus far in the season. Dealers said the contraction emphasized the size of the holding movement by Southern producers.

Worth Street textile agents reported moderately active business at firm prices. The week's sales were estimated at slightly in excess of production.

Exports Thursday, 5,511 bales; season so far, 1268,025. Port receipts, 42,418. Port stocks, 2,972,572.

Strength in Air Transport Shares Buoys Shaky Stock List; Early Losses Reduced

New York, Oct. 25.—Buying of air transports, steels and specialties steadied a shaky stock market today after an extension of Thursday's decline in early dealings. Selling, fairly active at the start, soon dried up and losses running to a point or so were subsequently reduced or transformed into gains of as much. Minus and plus signs were about even at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 44.6 and was only .1 under where it finished last Saturday. Transfers of 518,660 shares compared with 538,770 the day before.

Continuance of pleasing business prospects, brokers said, was offset to some extent by renewal of tax doubts, lack of definite Wall Street conclusions regarding the national election campaign and further confusing news on foreign affairs.

Among the day's share gainers were American Air Lines, United Air Lines, Eastern Air Lines, Pan American Airways, Trans-Continental & Western Air, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible Steel, U. S. Rubber, Sperry, Great Northern, Santa Fe, J. C. Penney, American Smelting, Du Pont and Allied Chemical.

Losers included Sears Roebuck, American Telephone, Douglas Aircraft, Loft, America-Hawaiian Steamship, Anaconda, Kennecott, Westinghouse Air Reduction, Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak, Union Carbide and Texas Corp.

Forecasts of climbing traffic for passenger-carrying plane companies, combined with the thought profits in this field would be little affected by excess tax charges, aided the transport shares.

Probability steel mill operations next week would hold around current levels and that facilities were sufficient to take care of all defense and private orders, if the latter were placed for actual needs instead of speculative purposes, helped the metals to come back.

Moderate advances in the curb were posted for Jones & Laughlin, Cities Service, Humble Oil, Niagara Hudson Power and senior shares of Puget Sound Power & Light. On the offside were American Cyanamid "B," Brewster Aero and Lake Shore. The turnover here was about 99,000 shares against 91,000 yesterday.

Rail loans lost most in an irregularly lower bond market today. Most losses stayed within a 1-point range. Issues affected by special circumstances showed wider variations.

The 4's of the N. Y. Dock Co., which stands to benefit by domestic maritime expansion, rose 1¼ to 54⅞.

Brisk trade carried German 5½s to 15, and the 7s up ½ to 15¾. Sydney 5½s dropped 5 on a single sale. Heavily traded were Cuba 4½s of '77, up ¾ at 54.

U. S. Governments rose as much as 10-32ds of a point in skimpy trade.

Commodity prices curved downward in futures markets yesterday after the week's rise.

Profit taking left wheat at Chicago unchanged to ¼ cent a bushel lower. Earlier the market dropped as much as ¾ of a cent. Corn dipped ⅜ to ½ cent.

'Time Table' Would Speed Defense Work

Tool Builders' Head Urges More Clearly Defined Program

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 25.—John E. Lovely, of Springfield, Vt., president of the National Machine Tool Builders Association, said today that the national defense program needed "a clearly defined program and a clearly defined time table."

Speaking at the association's annual meeting, Lovely said:

"The speed and power of the national defense program involve the solution of great engineering problems. These problems are not yet fully recognized. It seems obvious that what the defense program needs is a clearly defined program and a clearly defined time table.

"The biggest need of our industry is to know what our full task is to be, and when it should be done."

Lovely said his industry was "far ahead" of most American industries in expansion of facilities and capacity for national defense, having "enormously expanded" plants and equipment in the past year because of foreign orders, "chiefly from Britain," and an early realization of the vital need of machine tools for defense.

The industry's 1940 output will reach an all-time high of about $400,000,000, compared with $185,000,000 in 1929, he said.

Big Board Weighs Request of SEC To Rescind Ban

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Officials of the New York Stock Exchange studied today without comment a request from the Securities and Exchange Commission for removal of the exchange's ban against so-called "multiple" trading by member firms.

The commission asked the exchange to rescind its rule, scheduled for full enforcement November 1, prohibiting members from acting as specialists and dealers in its listed stocks on other exchanges.

"Multiple" trading, the exchange explained, applies only to transactions of members who deal for their own accounts and not to orders of customers, who may have them executed on any market they specify.

The stock exchange started enforcement of the rule September 1, but granted numerous extentions of time to permit members to make adjustments. It has contended the issue is one chiefly involving internal operations of the exchange, beyond jurisdiction of the SEC.

Ban Helps Chicago Mart

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange's ban of so-called "multiple" trading by members has been more beneficial than detrimental to the Chicago exchange, Kenneth L. Smith, president of the latter, said today. He said that sales of dually listed stocks in round lots have increased on this exchange since the appointment of new Chicago specialists on August 22.

Tire Shipments Set 12-Year Top

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—September tire shipments to factories for original equipment rose to the highest for that month since 1928, the rubber manufacturers association said today.

This represented an increase of 107.9 per cent over 704,565 units in August and 20.2 per cent over the 1,218,781 in September 1939.

Total shipments in September rose to 4,511,664 units, up 8.1 per cent from 4,173,508 in August. This compared with 5,658,126 a year ago.

The jump in original equipment shipments more than compensated for the decline in replacement shipments of 2,948,797 units, or 12.9 per cent less than 3,386,629 in August and 31.9 per cent below 4,327,525 in September last year.

New Offerings Spurt in Week

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities spurted this week as corporations and municipalities took advantage of prevailing low interest rates to refund their obligations.

New issues during the week ended yesterday totaled $116,261,080 compared with $42,466,768 the previous week and $8,541,297 in the same week last year, Poor's Publishing Co., reported today.

New capital raised during the week was very small, accounting for only 6 per cent of the total.

Youth Gets 30 Days in Plot To Egg Willkie

'Not American Way,' Judge Tells Him, Adding $50 Fine

By the Associated Press

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 25.—"That is not the American way," observed Judge Claude V. Emmons today as he imposed a 30-day workhouse sentence and $50 fine on Robert Sola, 18.

Armed with eggs, Sola went to Goodyear Hall last night to hear Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee. But suspicious police converged on the youth.

"After I saw Willkie, I was sorry I had even thought about it," Sola told the judge. Stories of egg attacks elsewhere led to his action, Sola said.

Sneeze Powder In Court

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—A handful of sneeze powder completely upset the South State Street Court decorum today when the case of Charles Mulrain, 53, who was alleged to have thrown eggs at Mr. and Mrs. Wendell L. Willkie Tuesday night, was called.

When the defendant, the complainant and his lawyer; Judge Harold P. O'Connell, the reporters, photographers and spectators stopped sneezing—whoever tossed the sneeze powder wasn't caught—Mulrain pleaded not guilty to charges of assault with a deadly weapon, frozen eggs, and disorderly conduct.

Mulrain obtained a continuance until November 12, one week after the election.

He said he wanted time enough to obtain witnesses "to prove I was intoxicated," and that he wanted to obtain lawyers.

"I am terribly sorry about the incident," he said. "It was all done in the spirit of the moment."

Veterans Promise Protection

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Five hundred World War veterans and others in Queens Borough volunteered today to squelch quickly any move to hurl eggs or anything else when Republican Presidential Candidate Wendell Willkie visits there tomorrow.

"We'll see to it that it can't happen in Queens," said Frederick C. Sasse, chairman of the group.

Crittenton Circles Lauded for Aid To District Home

More than 150 members of 27 Florence Crittenton Circles met for their annual open house yesterday and were commended for "excellent services during the past year" by Mrs. Jean Cole, superintendent of the Crittenton Home for the past 16 years.

Mrs. John C. Freeland, president of the board of directors of the home for unwed mothers, discussed "The Circles' Duty to the Community Chest" at the meeting, one of a series of precampaign programs featuring Chest agencies.

Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, opened the conclave with devotional services, followed by singing by girls of the home and luncheon. Scene of the annual meeting was the Florence Crittenton Home, 4759 Reservoir Road Northwest.

Contract Bridge

Mrs. W. S. McE. presents this hand which was the object of discussion in a recent rubber-bridge game.

She writes: "This hand was opened by dealer at two no trump. His partner passed. It was played, therefore, at two no trump and it was set two tricks. The bidder said his partner should have bid three hearts. Please tell me the correct bid."

To our way of thinking it is a mistake to open the bidding with two no trumps, holding a good minor suit. Culbertson insists on the 3-3-3 distribution before opening with no trump. The hand falls short of a two-bid in hearts, but a one-heart opening bid will receive a courtesy raise of two hearts, and the opening bidder can then jump to game. The responder would be more justified in raising two no trump to three no trump on his queen and two jacks than he would be in bidding three hearts.

Almost any day now, over WJSV and the Columbia network, you'll be hearing a pleasant, new American voice bringing you the news direct from Berlin. It's that of Harry W. Flannery, who up till a few days ago was news analyst for C. B. S.'s station, KMOX, in St. Louis.
Flannery's on his way over now by clipper after paying us a visit here in Washington—a visit which lasted a little longer than he had planned, as a matter of fact. It wasn't bad planning, but merely that European governments for some peculiar reason these days seem to take more time than usual in handing out their visas.
When he gets to Berlin, he'll serve as chief aide to William L. Shirer, the Iowa native who's been Columbia's bureau chief there since long before hostilities started.
Flannery's a Greensburg, Pa., boy, a graduate of Notre Dame University, where he majored in journalism. "Major" would seem to be the word, for, while a student, he started the Notre Dame daily, was art editor of its humorous monthly, editor of the literary weekly and editor-in-chief of the university's annual.
He really got his first taste of the newspaper business in Hagerstown, Md., though, working part-time for a paper there while he attended high school. Later he worked for the Baltimore Sun and was telegraph editor of the Decatur (Ill.) Herald. He joined KMOX in 1935 as news commentator.

The Post Radio Time Table

10:45 a. m., WOL—Maryland high school students assemble in Baltimore for an annual songfest.

12 noon, WMAL—"Discipline of Youth for National Defense" is the subject for the American Education Forum. Kenneth Benne, of Columbia University, and Francis Crowley, of Fordham, are the speakers.

1:30 p. m., WMAL—Ilka Chase's luncheon features include Mrs. Allan A Ryan, jr., fashion editor of the new Stage magazine; Allan K. Jennings, new director of the New York Zoological Society and a couple of her own acidulous stories.

FOOTBALL GAMES: 1:45, WJSV—Michigan-University of Pennsylvania; 2, WMAL, Ray Michael broadcasts the Catholic University-West Virginia Wesleyan battle. 2:45, WRC—Fort Pearson describes the Notre Dame-Illinois game.

6:30, WMAL—The Listener's Playhouse returns to the air with a fantasy by Donald Witty, "Strap Buckner and the Devil."

7, WJSV—How labor and industry can best cooperate to speed the national defense program is discussed for the People's Platform by Samuel Levine, representing labor on the Chicago Board of Education; Clarence Randall, trustee of the University of Chicago; Frederick H. Harbison, of the University's department of economics and a fourth guest, representing the consumer.

7:45, WJSV—Albert Warner and Elmer Davis discuss that newsreel collection, "A World in Flames," an airing which needn't be piped into Pennsylvania because that State's Board of Censors have forbidden it to William Penn's descendants.

9:15, WMAL—Secretary of State Cordell Hull makes a widely-awaited speech before the National Press Club, "American Foreign Policy."

9:30, WOL—Whatever became of Miss Fiditch, our old school teacher? And all sorts of other folk who've dropped out of sight. Hobby Lobby's Dave Elman has a new angle in Contact!, a half-hour of locating missing links.

9:45, WJSV—Senator Vandenberg makes a campaign talk from Cleveland.

10, WMAL—Pianist Poldi Mildner is soloist with NBC Symphony, Hans Steinberg conducting. She joins the orchestra for Defalla's "Nuits dans les Jardins d'Espagne." Brahms "Tragic Overture" opens the program and the Chaikovski Symphony No. 4 closes the evening.

10:15, WJSV—Gen. Robert E. Wood, talks on "Our Foreign Policy" for the America First Committee, which opposes extension of aid to the Allies beyond the limit of the strict cash-and-carry law.
